WEST REJECTS RUSSIAN ANTI-NATO PACT; BRITAIN PROTESTS ON ARMS SALE

SOVIET PLAN WOULD 'DECEIVE WORLD HOPES,' ALLIES CHARGE

Dulles Accuses Red Diplomat of Violating 'Summit' Directive in Trying to Push Proposal Through.

GENEVA, Oct. 29 (AP)—The western powers tonight rejected Russia's anti-NATO pact for "collective European security" as a peril to the West.

Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov came under heavy criticism at the Big Four foreign ministers' conference on the charge that his proposals would "deceive the hopes of the world."

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told the Russian diplomat his attempt to push through a security pact while delaying any effort to achieve German unification violated the directives the summit conference laid three months ago.

Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay of France protested that Molotov's security pact continues to be aimed at the dissolution of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"The French government will not gamble with security, or make deals about it," Pinay declared.

Macmillan's Contention.

British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan said the security pledges in the Soviet pact had nothing solid to support them. He argued that only the West would have to pull back under the pact, leaving Russia in a formidable position if the center of Europe with its control intact over smaller Communist powers.

Despite 7½ hours of debate in three sessions since Thursday, Russia and the West have made no dent in Europe's status quo as the situation stands:

Russia will not roll back from the Elbe line—the cold war front in mid-Germany for 10 years.

The West will not bargain on the dismantling of the Atlantic alliance, in which more than 400,000 United States troops and airmen are committed overseas.

Russia will not risk a unifying German election that could put anti-Communists in control of that powerful nation of 70,000,000.

The West will make no deal for German reunification that would concede in advance the military neutralization of all Germany. It has two thirds of Germany arming in NATO now.

Molotov's security pact was first rebuffed at the Berlin conference 20 months ago. It calls for the destruction of NATO within 3 years, bypassing of German reunification, recall of American forces from this continent, and allowing Red China to become an official observer in European political and military organizations.

Dulles's Argument.

Dulles told Molotov that the Soviet plan "seems to contemplate the indefinite division of Germany."

Dulles, at the third meeting of the foreign ministers' conference, argued that the foreign ministers' work was governed by a directive prepared by the heads of the four powers when

GUN DEAL AGAINST GENEVA SPIRIT, MOLOTOV IS TOLD

Macmillan Said to Take Line That Czech Peddling Had Blessing of Kremlin.

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

GENEVA, Oct. 29 (AP)—British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan protested informally to Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov tonight against Soviet bloc arms sales in the Middle East.

British informants reported this after the two ministers met privately following a session of the Big Four conference.

The British statesman's complaint was directed specifically at the deal between Communist Czechoslovakia and Egypt under which undisclosed numbers of MIG fighters, submarines, tanks and heavy arms are being supplied. The Egyptians are reported to be paying cut-price rates for this equipment, partly in cash and partly in cotton and rice supplies.

Molotov's reaction to the protest was not disclosed. On previous occasions when Western ministers have approached him on the subject informally Molotov is said to have replied that the deal was no business of the Soviet Union, which could not interfere with what he called an ordinary commercial transaction between two independent states.

The line Macmillan was said to have taken, however, was that the deal almost surely could not have gone through without the blessing of the Kremlin. He also was said to have asserted that the Soviet Union has sufficient influence with the Prague government to be able to snuff out the arrangement if it really was interested in the maintenance of good relations between the big powers.

The British minister is reported to have gone on to warn Molotov that Soviet bloc arms peddling in the unstable region where peace hangs on a slender thread in no way conforms with the so-called "spirit of Geneva."

The British action came after Western officials spread word that the United States, Britain and France were considering early public reaffirmation of their five-year-old pledge to act against any Mideastern aggressor which sets out forcibly to

ADENAUER WON'T BE BACK UNTIL EARLY NEXT YEAR

BONN, Oct. 29 (AP)—West Germany will be without the full leadership of ailing Chancellor Adenauer until early next year.

Government leaders plan to set up a special inner cabinet to handle his responsibilities in the months he is convalescing from bronchial pneumonia.

The 79-year-old Chancellor has been ill for more than three weeks. His doctors predict he will make a complete recovery but hint at a long convalescence.

Today Adenauer's Christian Democratic party postponed its annual convention — originally scheduled for November—until "early next year." The postponement was requested by Adenauer so he could take part.

The Frankfurter Allgemeine said the possibility of Adenauer running for a third term in 1957 was diminishing. He was elected in 1949 and re-elected in 1953

Newspapers criticized what they call his failure to train a successor.

HOUR OF DECISION BELIEVED NEAR FOR MARGARET

UCKFIELD, England, Oct. 29 (AP) — Princess Margaret and Peter Townsend kept a well-guarded weekend rendezvous today with millions of Britons believing their hour of decision is near.

Will it be a wedding? Or is it farewell?

The 25-year-old princess and her 40-year-old divorced war hero were guests in a secluded mansion on the rolling Sussex downs. Their host at Uckfield House was their mutual friend Lord Rupert Nevill.

Squads of blue-uniformed bobbies tramped through the dense woodlands around the red-brick mansion to insure their privacy from reporters and cameramen.

In the last week the princess has conferred with the Archbishop of Canterbury, talked things over with her sister, Queen Elizabeth II—who herself had conferred with Prime Minister Eden—and had the benefit of a thorough airing of her romance by London newspapers.

In court circles a feeling was reported that "the evidence is in" and that a decision could be imminent.

MISSING RANSOM MAY BE LOST TO GREENLEASE

Unless Money Is Found in Hands of Hoodlums, U.S. Will Keep It, Reimburse Holders

Robert C. Greenlease of Kansas City stands to lose the entire $303,720 ransom missing after his son's killers were captured, even though the money should be recovered, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Unless the missing money is found in the hands of hoodlums, the Government has no intention of returning to Greenlease any of the ransom bills that show up elsewhere. The other $296,280 has been returned to him.

So far 80 bills of $20 denomination have been recovered, either in banks or through citizens who checked lists of serial numbers. In each case, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has taken charge of the missing bill, replacing it with another $20.

The appearance of the ransom bills from Aug. 3 to Oct. 5, when the last one was found, has given rise to the question: Who is to bear the loss?

Should the person or institution last holding the bill be required to give it up without repayment? Should the Government, which has been reimbursing the holders, turn the ransom notes over to Greenlease and take the loss itself? Should Greenlease be the loser?

Donald S. Hostetter, head of the FBI office in Chicago, where most of the bills have turned up, was quoted as saying:

"When the ransom notes are no longer needed for evidence or investigation, they will be turned over to the Treasury Department.

"Mr. Greenlease, in effect, put the money in circulation when he paid the $600,000 ransom. Although the serial numbers are known and the money identifiable, it is still good currency.

"Innocent persons and institutions possessing it must be reimbursed."

Robert Vining, professor of law at St. Louis University, agreed.

He said that, unfortunate though it may be, the law un-

Man Who Posed as Lieutenant, Carried Secrets, Wins Probation

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 29 (UP)—A former Air Force officer was placed on two-year probation yesterday after telling a United States district judge he was entrusted to carry top secret documents while posing as a first lieutenant on a plane trip.

William L. Gibson Jr., 29 years old, a lieutenant with the intelligence branch of the Air Force from 1944 to 1948 and from 1952 to March 1954, said he posed as a first lieutenant in order to obtain free transportation from Mobile, Ala., to San Antonio, Tex., in October 1954.

He appeared before Judge Albert A. Ridge on a charge of making false statements to Air Force officers and impersonating an officer. He is already serving a one-year term at the United States Medical Center at Springfield, Mo., on bad check charges.

At Mobile, the imposter, clad in a newly purchased Air Force uniform, boarded a plane and was handed 14 top secret letters. The officer of the day selected Gibson as a courier because he held the top rank of personnel aboard the flight.

Gibson took the mail into his custody and properly delivered it, without incident, to the officer of the day at Kelly field at San Antonio.

"I can surmise that there are some officers in the intelligence branch with red faces about turning over of this top secret material to the defendant," W. C. Branton, Gibson's attorney, said.

PENTAGON PUTS 123 BILLION PRICE TAG ON ALL ITS MILITARY GOODS

Arrives at Figure After World-Wide Inventory—Land Occupied by Armed Forces Not Included.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)—The Pentagon today put a $123,866,000,000 valuation on its world-wide holdings of property, equipment and supplies. It said, however, it did not know and had not tried to find out the current value of nearly 30,000,000 acres of land the military owns or uses at home and abroad.

The figures in this first overall defense inventory were as of Jan. 1, 1955.

They showed that the Navy, with property, equipment and supplies valued at $56,428,000,000, carried the highest figure of the three services. Nearly three-fifths of the Navy's total was in ships and the 14,311 aircraft in its inventory.

The Army was valued at $34,082,000,000, with about two-thirds of its book cost assigned to equipment and supplies.

A sum of $33,356,000,000 was placed on the Air Force, the total including $11,400,000,000 for the 25,390 aircraft in its inventory.

Belated Report.

The Defense Department's first published effort to give an over-all cost of United States military investments was contained in a report submitted to the President and Congress in belated compliance with a law passed in 1949.

In presenting the results of its stupendous bookkeeping undertaking, the Pentagon said that the report had been delayed by the Korean war and by the continuing work of getting the military services to keep their accounts and inventories according to a unified system.

The Pentagon placed a nominal purchase cost of $21,500,000,000 on all of its land and buildings, but conceded that this "by no means indicates present market value." In the first place, the Pentagon pointed out that about one-half of its total acreage cost nothing because it was withdrawn from the public domain—largely Western lands that were originally taken from the Indians.

Other now valuable pieces of property were donated to the Government, such as Governor's island in New York harbor. And the report stressed the futility of trying to estimate current values of property acquired more than a century ago. Carlisle Barracks, Pa., now the home of the Army War College, for instance, was originally taken over in 1776 and Fort McNair in Washington, D.C., was acquired in 1790.

Notwithstanding the failure to assess any value for huge portions of its real estate, the Pentagon said that original cost of land, if any, would be the only measure used in this and subsequent reports to Congress.

Exceeds Area of Indiana.

Some idea of the extent of military land holdings today can be gained from the fact that military property in the continental United States is somewhat greater than the state of Indiana. Property owned or controlled in the territories and foreign countries is about the area of the state of Massachusetts. Despite the size of these holdings, however, they represent only 1.3 per cent of the land surface of the continental United States.

The military services own, control or use land and buildings in every state of the union and the District of Columbia. The purchase cost of military land amounts to more than four billion dollars in three states: California $1,930,000,000; Texas $1,250,000,000; Virginia one billion dollars.

In area, Nevada leads all the states in military use with nearly 4,000,000 acres, Arizona comes second with nearly 3,330,000 acres and New Mexico follows with 3,100,000.

North Dakota is at the bottom of the list of military property holdings both in area and in original cost with 812 acres with a stated value of $4,278,000.

Included in all the equipment and supplies now on hand are items with a book value of $2,690,000,000 for material that the defense department said is excess to military needs and much of which is available for disposal.

Among other things the report noted that the three services combined have buildings with a troop housing capacity of 2,577,904 in the United States. No figures were given for military housing in the overseas areas where large segments of the military population are now stationed.

MORE TV SETS THAN PHONES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)—Television sets outnumber telephones on farms in Ottawa county, O., a Census Bureau report indicated today.

Estimating the situation as of last year, the bureau said there were 945 TV sets on the county's 1392 farms, compared with 835 telephones.

EISENHOWER PERSONALLY INDORSES BENSON POLICIES AFTER TALKING WITH HIM

STEVENSON HITS OUT AT FOREIGN, FARM POLICIES OF REPUBLICANS

Calls Agricultural Program 'Hollow,' Says Conduct of Affairs Abroad Is 'Elusive, Misleading.'

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 29 (UP)—Adlai E. Stevenson attacked the Eisenhower Administration tonight for following a "misleading and elusive" foreign policy and a "hollow" farm program.

Stevenson delivered his attack on the Republican Administration, amid increasing signs that the announcement of his candidacy for the 1956 Democratic presidential nomination will come soon.

"The day is rapidly approaching," Stevenson replied, when asked about his announcement before he left Chicago earlier today.

Stevenson charged that the G.O.P. is trying to make people think "that all is well" and that "peace and security are around the corner."

"The fact is that our foreign affairs are not prospering any more than agriculture is prospering," the 1952 Democratic presidential nominee said.

Comments on Foreign Affairs.

Much of his speech was devoted to foreign affairs, but he also attacked the Republican farm policy, an important issue in Minnesota. He spoke before a Democratic-Farmer-Labor meeting.

Stevenson called again for a return to 90 per cent parity payments to farmers, though he again conceded that may not be the only solution to the problem of falling farm income.

In the case of some commodities, he said, production payments or compensatory payments might be more effective, even more economical in the long run, than price supports.

Stevenson said the G.O.P. is trying to assure the nation that a "miracle" was performed at the Geneva meeting of the Big Four chiefs of state. He accused Republicans of "loud talk and little action," while the world situation is "sadly deteriorating."

"We must put a stop to the loose talk and erratic behavior that has marked the conduct of our foreign affairs these past three years and that has confused our purposes and frightened our friends if not our enemies," he said.

He pointed to violence in North Africa, political troubles in France, growing misgivings about Germany's future, the smoldering Middle East and other spots as problems "our adversaries will exploit."

The G.O.P. 'Peace Chorus.'

"My purpose is not to be alarming," Stevenson said. "My purpose is to be realistic, and not be misled by the new Soviet charm policy or the Republican peace chorus."

He called for a reduction in "the volume of loose words and catchy slogans" and an increase in "sobriety, realism and flexibility in our foreign affairs."

"The great Republican divide between talking and doing stands out just as sharply on the domestic front," he said.

Then he attacked the farm policy of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, which is pegged on a system of flexible price supports, as "hollow."

Stevenson said restoring 90 per cent price supports isn't the

FIRM TURNS DOWN RUSSIANS' ORDER FOR 'MODEL' HOME

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Oct. 29 (INS)—An American pre-fabricated housing firm has refused to accept a Soviet order for a "model" home.

President William B. F. Hall of General Industries, Inc., of Fort Wayne, called the touring Russian housing delegation and informed the group he couldn't accept an order for a house left at the time the Soviet visitors were in Fort Wayne.

Hall said that United States law protects the company from infringement of its precise plans but that there would be nothing to keep the Russians from ripping apart the one home they had ordered and copying it.

However, the Soviet delegation was understood to have purchased a pre-fabricated house in California, for shipment to Russia.

HAGERTY DENIES PRESIDENT PAINTS THE EASY WAY

DENVER, Oct. 29 (AP)—The Denver White House described today as "completely cockeyed" any suggestion that President Eisenhower's painting is done the easy way.

Presidential news secretary James C. Hagerty was told at a press conference that a recent magazine article said the President sometimes uses photographs printed for him on canvas and that he paints over them.

"That is completely cockeyed," Hagerty said. "There isn't anything to that at all." He added that the President works many times from a photograph or a colored print," but it is not one of these commercial deals where you just put in the numbers."

The President, he said, "paints."

WOMEN'S CLUBS LIFT CONVENTION BAR AGAINST HATS

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—Members of the Federation of Women's Clubs in New York yesterday unanimously voted 400-strong to rescind the long-standing rule: "No hats on the convention floor."

The Federation was founded in 1903 and the no-hat rule went into effect soon after. It was the period when hats were large and adorned with stuffed birds or bouquets of flowers and lots of ribbon. No one could see around or over such creations.

Delegates to the club's annual meetings have submitted to the unwritten no-hat rule with irritation. It was not only, as one convention-goer said, that you had to stand in line half an hour to check your hat, but you never could show your best new hat because you didn't want it jammed in the checking rush.

The delegates agreed that today's hats were no hindrance to vision.

$1000 FOR BOXER WHO FORGOT TO DUCK GLASS DOOR

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 29 (AP)—When Sharley Affif was a professional boxer he was accustomed to getting a bump or two on the nose, but the one he claims he got July 21, 1953 at the Carlton House hotel has just paid off $1000.

A federal district court jury awarded the 30-year-old ex-fighter that amount yesterday after hearing testimony in Affif's damage suit against the hotel. Affif told the jury he didn't see a glass door at the hotel and bumped into it, injuring his nose.

HENNINGS GETS JACKSON COUNTY INDORSEMENT

He Is Only One to Make Political Hay at Picnic — Many Hopefuls There.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Oct. 29—The sun shone brightly today at a big picnic given by Eastern Jackson County Democrats, but the only candidate who made any political hay was United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. of St. Louis.

Leaders of the powerful Kansas City Democratic coalition made it clear that they will back Hennings for re-election next year, but other political aspirants who attended the powpow in the hope of obtaining definite commitments of support were disappointed.

The coalition group, which can deliver a sizable bloc of votes and has controlled recent elections in Jackson county, cautiously avoided any commitments to those thinking of running for state office.

Pleased by Hennings Record.

William Sermon, Jackson County Clerk Ben Nordberg and other leaders of the coalition feel that Hennings has made an outstanding record in the Senate and merits their full support, but they think it is too early to take sides in state races.

The general feeling was that it would be best to see who actually files for office and how the races begin to shape up before making any commitments.

Approximately 7500 persons, including many potential candidates for congressional, state, local and party offices, gathered in the city park here to eat barbecue and shake hands with those who control votes. A sharp wind was blowing, and a number of party hopefuls in the topcoat crowd must have been chilled by the political weather.

The picnic climaxed a two-day series of Democratic meetings, including a reception for Senator Hennings. Although he has not formally announced yet, he will be a candidate for re-election, and is not expected to have any serious opposition in the primary.

Others on Hand.

Also on hand were United States Senator Stuart Symington of St. Louis and the three persons most frequently men-

10,000 Dimes Spill in Street But Spectators Steer Clear

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 29—Ten thousand dimes, spilling from a bag of a United States Trucking Corp. guard, created a one-man silver rush on one of Newark's busiest streets yesterday. The bag, which was being transported from the National Newark and Essex Bank to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York, opened as the guard, escorted by two assistants, swung it over his shoulder on the way out the door.

As one armed guard took over the watch, the other two spent 10 frantic minutes scooping the dimes from the street into the bag.

Spectators, noting the drawn revolver of a companion guard, offered no assistance in retrieving the dimes.

BACKS FLEXIBLE PRICE SUPPORTS IN STATEMENT FROM SICKBED

Unusual Message Calls Present Program Sound — Makes It Clear Secretary Will Stay in Cabinet.

(Related Story on Page 1-B)

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Oct. 29—President Eisenhower, in an unusual move, issued a statement from his sickbed today, giving unqualified support to the farm policies of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson.

He made it plain he had no intention of dropping the Administration's program of flexible farm price supports, which has been criticized by Democrats and some Republicans as a factor in the decline in farm prices.

"We should not go back to old policies that have failed to meet the needs in the past," the President said, referring to the 90 per cent of parity price supports paid under Democratic administration.

Calls Program Sound.

The President declared "what has been done in the past three years . . . has been sound" and he expressed his agreement with steps outlined by Benson "for strengthening and broadening the present program."

He said he would submit his farm recommendations to Congress in a special message in January.

Benson, who has been beleaguered by protests over the farm program, said he had received full backing from the President in their half-hour conference at Fitzsimons Army Hospital.

The President's action today and a subsequent declaration by White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty that Mr. Eisenhower never had entertained a thought of asking Benson to resign, made it clear that the Secretary would remain in the Cabinet.

President's Statement.

Hagerty read to reporters this statement from the President:

"I have had an opportunity today for a most satisfactory and thorough exchange of views on the farm situation with Secretary Benson. No problem on the domestic front is more demanding of our understanding and of our best ideas.

"Still caught under the grinding pressure of price-depressing surpluses, the farmers today are not getting a return for their work in line with that enjoyed by other segments of our population. The secretary and I reviewed what has been done in the past three years. That has been sound. But farm policy is never a completed task. It must be dynamic, adapting to changing conditions. The secretary and I, agreed that we should not go back to old policies that have failed to meet the problems in the past.

"I was greatly encouraged to learn from the secretary the several new steps he is exploring for strengthening and broadening the present program. He and I agreed that such steps are necessary in order to speed the time when farm production and markets are in balance at prices that return to our farmers a fair share of the national income. We also agreed that we must, for the future welfare of our people, do still more to promote the proper use of our land so that its productivity may be better and more permanently preserved.

"I shall submit my farm recommendations to the Congress in a special message early in January."

Benson Comments.

After the bedside meeting with the President, Benson told reporters:

1. He has never considered resigning and is as sure as ever that he has Mr. Eisenhower's "100 per cent backing."

2. The President approved a six-point program of increased aid to farmers to help them meet the "cost-price squeeze," as well as other relief measures which will be announced later.

3. Mr. Eisenhower is unalterably opposed to any return to high rigid farm price supports at 90 per cent of parity. This has been urged by some leading Democrats.

4. The future of agriculture in this country is "bright," despite present dissatisfaction over declining farm prices.

The six-point program approved by Mr. Eisenhower, Ben-

EGYPTIAN UNITS MAKE 2 RAIDS ON ADVANCED ISRAELI POSTS

Counter-Attacks on Gaza Zone Settlement Apparently in Retaliation for Jewish Attack.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 29 (UP)—Egyptian troops supported by heavy artillery made two counter-attacks on advanced Israeli positions in the demilitarized Gaza zone today, an Israeli army spokesman said.

Maj. Dan Gov, the spokesman, said both raids were repulsed with no Israeli casualties.

The attacks occurred at Nirim, one of the chain of small settlements along the Gaza strip. They apparently were Egypt's answer to the stab Israeli forces made four miles inside Egyptian territory yesterday.

Egyptian military authorities in Cairo declined to comment on the Israeli reports of the Egyptian attacks.

Platoon Strength.

Gov said in Tel Aviv that Egyptian forces in platoon strength attacked the Nirim positions in the early morning darkness. They were supported by mortar and machinegun fire both times, he added.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry said the assaults of Nirim represent an "unprovoked" extension of hostilities in the Gaza area. A spokesman warned that if Egyptian forces continued to occupy Israeli territory, the responsibility for a continuation of the present tense situation would "rest entirely on Egypt."

Israel lodged a complaint with the United Nations over the new flareup. A truce commission observers team went to the Gaza area to investigate.

So far, Egypt has not complained officially to the United Nations about yesterday's Israeli raid on the Egyptian desert outpost at El Kuntilla, 40 miles south of El Auja, a U.N. spokesman said.

Israel claimed 10 Egyptians were killed and 29 others captured in the 23-minute surprise raid. Egypt said that only five Egyptians were killed and that four Israelis died in an Egyptian counter-attack to recapture the fortress.

Gov announced today that two of four Israeli soldiers injured in the El Kuntilla attack died of their wounds.

U.N. observers set out from Jerusalem this morning to investigate the El Kuntilla raid, which Israel said was in retaliation for an Egyptian attack at Nitzana Wednesday. One Israeli was killed, three were wounded and two were missing in that attack.

Both Sides Reminded.

U.N. press officer Albert Grant said both sides have been reminded of their pledges to U.N. truce chief Gen. E. L. M. Burns to do everything possible to maintain calm during his absence in New York, where he conferred today with officials of the United States, Britain and the United Nations.

Gov denied that the El Kuntilla outpost was an anti-narcotics control station as claimed by the Egyptians.

"Look at the quantities of heavy arms we destroyed and equipment we carried away," the army spokesman said. "Just talk to the soldiers we captured. They will tell you."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the Egyptians sent another two companies into the Nitzana demilitarized zone last night to reinforce their troops entrenched in Israeli territory.

The government urged the United Nations truce organization to instruct the Egyptians to withdraw immediately from Nitzana.

(In Cairo, an official spokesman said Israeli troops last night reoccupied positions in the El Auja demilitarized zone, partly in Egyptian territory, and set up barbed wire barricades.

("This force was seen moving about in police uniforms—the latest Israeli trick to mislead the world into believing the force does not belong to the regular army," the spokesman said.)

HOOVER, SPONSOR OF DINNER FOR TRUMAN LIBRARY FUND

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29 (AP)—Herbert Hoover, the former President, has become one of the sponsors for a dinner to raise funds for the Harry S. Truman library being constructed at Independence, Mo., it was announced today.

The announcement that the former Republican President will help the project of the former Democratic President was made by Edwin W. Pauley, prominent California Democrat and fund-raising chairman for the Harry S. Truman Library Committee of the Southwest.

Truman is to speak at the committee's fund-raising dinner Nov. 28 in Beverly Hills.

Truman Meets With Stevenson, But Says He Is Still Neutral

FORMER PRESIDENT HARRY TRUMAN draws laughter from ADLAI STEVENSON, the 1952 Democratic Presidential nominee, while answering reporters' questions at a press conference in Chicago yesterday. Truman said he has been urging Stevenson to announce his candidacy for the nomination since last summer.

Ex-President Claims Personal Credit for Illinoisan's Nomination in 1952—Denies Any Pledges for Next Year.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (UP)—Former President Harry Truman today claimed personal credit for the 1952 presidential nomination of Adlai Stevenson but refused to say he would back him for the 1956 nomination.

Truman talked to reporters after a 45-minute meeting with Stevenson. Stevenson was present for only a few minutes of the news conference and left to catch a plane for a speech tonight in Duluth, Minn.

The former President said that he remains neutral toward candidates for the Democratic presidential banner. He denied that he ever pledged his support to Stevenson or anybody else.

"I never told anybody I would support anybody for the nomination," Truman said. "I don't think it would be fair for me to be a dictator to the Democratic party. . . ."

"I was for Stevenson in 1952," he continued, "and if it hadn't been for me, he never would have been nominated."

Urges Him to Announce.

Truman said, however, that he has been "urging" Stevenson to announce his candidacy.

"If Mr. Stevenson is the nominee of the Democratic convention this coming summer, of course I will support him," he added.

"I don't think it is my place or my business to tell the Democratic party what to do. I have no candidates for Vice President or President until the Democratic convention acts," he said.

The former President was asked to explain his role in the nomination of Stevenson at the last Democratic convention.

"The President is always leader of his party, and the convention never disappoints him," he said.

Truman said there was no need to explain further. He told reporters to "study your history" and to read his "memoirs" as President.

Asked About Harriman.

Earlier the former President said that if he were a resident of Illinois he would support Stevenson. He gave this reply when he was asked about a recent statement that he would back Gov. Averell Harriman of New York for the nomination if he lived in that state.

Stevenson is "a friend of mine. I like him," he said. "If I lived in Illinois there would be no question of where my loyalty would lie."

(This statement was a change from comment Truman made at a press conference at Albany, N. Y., Oct. 8. Then he said, in reply to a question as to his choice if he were a resident of Illinois, Stevenson's home state: "There are three or four good men in the state of Illinois . . . I don't think an outsider should go into a state and try to dictate a candidate.")

Stevenson made only a few remarks after his meeting with Truman. He described the talks as "pleasing" and departed before the former President told the reporters that he was responsible for the 1952 nomination of the former Illinois governor.

Truman came to Chicago for a dinner tonight when a Greek-American committee will make a $20,000 contribution to his memorial library at Independence, Mo.

He conferred with Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, leader of the powerful Democratic organization in the city, and Stephen Mitchell, former national party chairman before meeting Stevenson.

By the United Press.

In his speech Truman said "an atomic war is unthinkable," but "we may find ourselves in World War III sooner than we think "unless a solution is found to disturbed conditions in the Middle East.

He said he was especially alarmed about the controversy between Greece and Turkey. He lashed out at the Republican administration for failing to take steps in the Middle East which would bring a halt to the bitter nationalistic rivalries.

"I am sorry that the people in Washington did not see fit to place the blame for the trouble between the Greeks and Turks where it belongs, and do something about it," he said.

CROP INSURANCE EXPERIMENT IS ENDED BY U.S.

BALLINGER, Tex., Oct. 29 (AP)—After losing $2,000,000 in four years the Federal Government is ending its experimental multiple-crop insurance program in Runnels County.

Drouth was blamed for failure of the program, set up in 1951 to cover farmers' losses on wheat, oats, cotton and grain sorghums. The idea was to decrease risk by spreading coverage in hopes that a loss in one crop might be offset by success with another. But over-all losses in this west Texas farm area outweighed successes each year.

Worst year for the plan here was 1952 when all but two of about 800 farmers participating claimed losses and the Federal Crop Insurance Corp. paid off $1,900,000. Premiums paid in that year totaled about $250,000.

The program started in 1951 with 400 farmers insured. The net loss that year was $500,000. In 1953, peak year for participation, 900 policyholders paid premiums of about $250,000 and entered claims of about $450,000. Claims this year totaled about $75,000, premiums paid in about $47,000.

As premiums were boosted because of the losses, participation dropped to 450 last year and was down to 250, its lowest, this year.

RED CHINESE GUNS SHELL ISLAND IN MATSU GROUP

TAIPEI, Sunday, Oct. 30 (AP)—The Chinese Communists fired 12 artillery rounds last night at Kaetong, five miles off the Red mainland coast and most exposed of the Nationalist-held Matsu group, the Nationalist Defense Ministry reported.

The shelling was the fifth to hit Kaetong this month. The Matsu island group lies 100 miles west of Formosa.

BENSON ASKS PRESIDENT TO EAT PORK BACON

DENVER, Oct. 29 (AP)—President Eisenhower, who has been showing a partiality for beef bacon to hold down his weight, promised with a laugh today to work some of the pork variety into his hospital menu.

An appeal for the President's help was made to him by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, who conferred with the convalescing chief executive at Fitzsimons Army Hospital.

Benson has been trying to get rid of pork surpluses. He noted at a press conference that Mr. Eisenhower has been eating quite a bit of beef bacon and beef sausage, which the doctors say do not have so great a fat content as the pork products.

Benson said he urged the President to work in some of the pork items, doctors permitting, and that Mr. Eisenhower responded he would be "very glad" to do so.

SCHEME TO GET EISENHOWER TO RESIGN CHARGED

Senator Kefauver Assails G.O.P. 'Right-Wing' — David Lawrence Replies.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Oct. 29 (AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, said tonight a "segment of right-wing" Republicans is "scheming to get President Eisenhower out of office before his term expires."

He accused columnist David Lawrence of putting out a "sadistic" feeler carrying the suggestion that Mr. Eisenhower might resign in January 1956 instead of serving out his current term, ending January 1957. He recalled that Lawrence recently wrote that "logic seems to point either to a resignation or a decision to accept renomination."

In Washington, Lawrence replied that he had merely "referred to the possibility" of resignation. He said that in fact he expects Mr. Eisenhower to recover, does not expect him to resign, and is confident he will run again and be re-elected.

Kefauver denounced the resignation idea as "mischievous" and "sadistic" and said that "the great majority of Americans, of whatever creed, party or race, thank God that President Eisenhower is making a good recovery and that his illness does not require that he transfer his powers as President."

In a speech to a Michigan ninth congressional district dinner meeting, Kefauver said that he was "proud that no such suggestion has come from Democrats" as a result of the heart attack suffered by Mr. Eisenhower last month.

"We Democrats will do our best to win the next election," he said, "but it will be fought out in the open. We will fight it on the issues . . ."

Kefauver, regarded as a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination next year, described Columnist Lawrence as "a spokesman for part of the reactionary Republican segment" who has put up feelers that "time and time again the right-wing has followed."

Kefauver said that he has disagreed with Mr. Eisenhower many times but "he was elected by a great majority of his fellow Americans to serve a four-year term and should be allowed to do so without such sadistic suggestions as those contained in this column."

U.N. ASKS ISRAEL, EGYPT TO STOP REPRISAL RAIDS

Hammarsjold Joins Truce Supervisor in Warning Against Offensive Action.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Oct. 29 (AP)—The United Nations called on Egypt and Israel tonight to halt reprisal raids and warned that "grave moral responsibility" would rest on the country that takes offensive action in the frontier hostilities.

U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold joined Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, Canadian supervisor of the U.N. truce set-up in Palestine, in a strong appeal to both countries to avoid action "which may result in the gravest consequences."

Burns addressed a letter to Israeli and Egyptian officials here but noted that he was authorized by Hammarskjold to say that the appeal is also made in his behalf.

New Flare-Ups.

The action came after new flare-ups in the El Auja area and at the end of a series of urgent diplomatic conferences here. They were climaxed by a meeting here this morning that included British and United States representatives.

After noting that the U.N. Security Council had repeatedly condemned armistice violations, Burns said in his appeal:

"In view of my responsibilities, I formally request both parties to issue orders to their forces in the vicinity of the El Auja demilitarized zone and at all other points where they are close together to cease all aggressive activities and retaliations and restrict their operations to defense in keeping with the terms of the general armistice agreement."

In a statement Hammarskjold said he and Burns had consulted with the "interested governments" on measures that would prevent deterioration of the situation, especially in the El Auja area. However, no Security Council meeting was planned.

Burns will fly back to Jerusalem next Thursday as he originally planned when he came here early this week for the consultations.

Special Mandate.

Sir Pierson Dixon, British chief delegate, and James Barco, United States minister-counsellor, took part in the final talks at which the appeal was outlined. The United States and Britain, along with France, have a special mandate under U.N. agreements to safeguard the security of the Arab-Israel area in the Middle East.

The French were consulted earlier in the week. So were Israel, Egypt and officials of the eight-nation Arab League.

Today's high level meeting came after Israel and Egypt had exchanged charges of new truce violations in the El Auja demilitarized zone on the Israeli-Egyptian frontier and an Egyptian spokesman in Cairo announced "we are ready for any eventuality," adding that it was up to the U.N. to ease the tension in the zone.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli Foreign Office spokesman said that Israel had again asked the U.N. truce officials to take immediate action. The spokesman charged that the Egyptians were spreading their "deliberate and unprovoked extension of hostilities" to the Gaza area. Gaza has been quiet for some time.

The Jerusalem spokesman repeated that "Israel asks nothing of Egypt except to be left alone," but warned that if Egyptian forces continued to occupy Israeli territory responsibility for the continuation "will rest entirely with Egypt."

At Gaza, however, a U.N. spokesman said he found no evidence that an Egyptian force had advanced, as the Israelis charged, into the Nirim area east of the Gaza frontier.

Election in Switzerland.

BERN, Oct. 29 (AP)—General elections take place in Switzerland today and tomorrow. The campaign has been quiet. The only issues between the government coalition parties and the Socialists are on minor domestic policy differences. Women do not vote.

Molotov Is Relaxed at Talks In Geneva, Life of Party in Bar

Still Says No, 'but With a Smile'—Behaving Like Volga Boatman on Saturday Night Off.

By EDDY GILMORE

GENEVA, Oct. 29 (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov is behaving at Geneva like a jolly Volga boatman on a Saturday night off.

"I've never seen him so relaxed," said an American delegate who has known Molotov for nine years, "and while he still says 'nyet' (no), he says it with a smile."

"I've watched him at many conferences," said a French delegate, "and he's never before behaved like this. He acts as if he hasn't a care in the world."

British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan is reported to have commented to his ministerial colleagues about Molotov's easy manners around the conference table—and his mellowness in the conference bar. After Macmillan followed French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay in the conference chairman's chair, Molotov is reported to have quipped:

"Mr. Macmillan is a better chairman—he lets me talk. Mr. Pinay shuts me up."

Asked if anyone at the conference table has questioned the Soviet Foreign Minister about his reported intention to reveal at Geneva his plans about retiring, the spokesman for the American delegation said:

"No, that question hasn't come up."

Members of other delegations said he hadn't given the slightest hint of imminent retirement.

"He's always joking," said one delegate. "Yesterday, when he saw another delegate drinking orange juice during the 'tea break,' Molotov said—'you'd better order something stronger for I'm going to make a speech.'"

One western delegate said Molotov was the life of the party in the conference bar.

"He started out on fruit juice," he explained, switched to strong tea and his latest move was to march up to the bar and say in very good French:

"Un Scotch et Seltz, s'il vous plait, mademoiselle."

GLORIA STOKOWSKI GETS DIVORCE IN JUAREZ, MEXICO

JUAREZ, Mexico, Oct. 29 (AP)—Gloria Vanderbilt Stokowski today obtained a Mexican divorce from her famed conductor husband, Leopold Stokowski.

The great-great-granddaughter of railroad builder Cornelius Vanderbilt arrived in El Paso by plane and immediately crossed to Juarez. A short time later, the heiress to one of America's greatest fortunes appeared in civil court and filed her divorce petition. The divorce was granted several minutes later. She left for New York early in the afternoon by plane.

She charged "incompatibility of characters." She is 31 years old; he is 68.

Her name has been linked romantically recently with that of singer Frank Sinatra but she did not mention any marriage plans.

The divorce petition said that the Stokowskis were married in Calexico, Calif., April 21, 1945. Two sons were born of the marriage.

100 Aspirin Tablets Fatal.

COVINGTON, Ky., Oct. 29 (AP)—Regina Carter, 15 years old, died yesterday after swallowing 100 aspirin tablets, Coroner E. L. Smith reported. Members of her family said they could give no reason for the girl's action.

WIDE BACKING AT HEARINGS FOR FARM SUBSIDY

Witnesses at Grassroot Sessions Favor U.S. Rental to Cut Down Producing Land.

BISMARCK, N.D., Oct. 29 (UP)—Testimony in five "grassroot" Midwest farm belt hearings today left Senate Agriculture Committee members impressed with the near-unanimous backing for a plan to cut the size of the nation's farm producing plant by a multi-millionaire dollar government subsidy.

The committee is on a month-long, 17-state tour of the nation to hear farmers' proposals for a new price-support law. Committee members inspected Garrison Dam near Riverdale, N.D., today and were to fly from here tomorrow to Pendleton, Ore., for a hearing scheduled Monday.

Farmer witnesses from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North and South Dakota, and Montana were divided last week on the issue of fixed vs. flexible federal price props for farm products. But nearly all agreed on their support for a government land rental scheme—a plan under which the Government would pay subsidies to farmers for keeping surplus-producing land out of production.

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.) Minnesota and Edward J. Thye (Rep.) Minnesota, agreed they noted what Thye termed "seeds of unrest" among normally-conservative Iowa farmers hit by slumping farm income.

Humphrey, reviewing the week's hearings, said the "raw material for a political revolt" against the Administration on farm issues is present in the Midwest.

Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (Rep.) Kansas, agreed "it would be wishful thinking" to say the farm income problem has not hurt his party politically. But he insisted the situation is "retrievable."

REVISED BUILDING CODE VIEWED AS AID IN AVERTING FIRE TRAGEDIES

Baum Says Stricter Rules Will Help Prevent Cases Similar to One in Which Four Children Perished.

Revisions now being made in the city's building code will strengthen it to help prevent cases similar to the one in which four children died in a fire in an illegally-occupied basement apartment, Albert H. Baum Jr., building commissioner, said yesterday.

Acknowledging that the present building code ordinance is "a weak one," Baum said the revisions, which should be completed in six weeks, will clarify the definition of a rooming house, light housekeeping rooms, flats and other buildings, and will redefine conditions under which rooms may be rented.

Acting Fire Chief James Sauerwine said the present ordinance is "unenforceable" in such cases as that of Mrs. Barbara Dawson, Negro, whose four children died in a fire Thursday at 1805 North Sarah street. The three rooms of Mrs. Dawson's basement apartment had defective wiring, cardboard box walls and only two windows, firemen reported.

Baum said when the building code revisions are completed they will be sent to interested agencies and departments in the city for study and approval. Then they will be drawn up in the form of an amendment to the present ordinance and presented to the Board of Aldermen.

Firemen Ordered to Aid.

Sauerwein issued orders to firemen to report to the fire chief's office any recognizable violations of the building code they might see in the course of their fire-fighting duties. He pointed out that firemen, unlike building inspectors, are not trained in the intricacies of the code.

Listing weaknesses in the present code, Sauerwein objected principally to clauses that exempt relatives of owners from being classified as roomers, even though they rent rooms, and another that defines a rooming house as a place where four or more rooms are rented. He contended anyone who pays rent for a room should be called a roomer and any owner who rents even one room should be classified as a rooming house operator.

The building in which Mrs. Dawson lived was a four-family flat, not classified as a rooming house although Mrs. Dawson rented the three rooms in the basement for $20 a month. The owner of the building, Mrs. Bertha Powell, Negro, did not apply for a permit to rent the rooms, Baum said; therefore the city did not know about it.

Charles Pregaldin, deputy building commissioner, said his staff of operators regularly inspect rooming houses and would have inspected Mrs. Dawson's rooms had they known she was there.

Provision in New Charter.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, in his drive for a new city charter, has said the proposed charter would provide for a centralized building inspection bureau with qualified personnel, trained in all phases of inspection necessary under the provisions of the building code.

As it is now, the Mayor said, city inspectors overlap each other in their work. There are separate inspectors for water meters, plumbing, electricity, zoning, building lines and fire prevention. And under the present ordinance's provisions, inspectors cannot go into a building except with the consent of the owner.

Mrs. Powell was booked by police with violating the building code in permitting occupancy of a basement, having cardboard walls and defective wiring. She also was held for the coroner.

Winning French Accent in Parade

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

This Delta Gamma sorority float adorned with girls dressed as French maids and giant perfume bottles, with the title "Scent of Victory," was one of 26 in a Homecoming parade by Washington University students to the Clayton Courthouse yesterday. In competition for the best decorated fraternity house, Phi Delta Theta was first and Kappa Alpha was second. The festivities ended last night with coronation of the Homecoming Queen, Miss Gay Griffin, at a campus dance.

YOUNG GOBLINS READY FOR YEARLY HAUNTING TRIP

A host of goblins, many of them extremely small goblins, will be making house-to-house surveys of the "trick-or-treat" situation here tomorrow night in the annual observance of Halloween.

Parties for children will be held in many neighborhoods, with school, church and civic groups as hosts.

In a number of areas instead of treats, youngsters will seek donations for the United Nations Children's Fund to help needy children in other lands.

Because of its manpower shortage and the number of parties being given by other groups, the Police Department will not hold any parties. Instead, members of the force and auxiliary police will be on the alert for any overly ambitious tricks. There will be no treats for the perpetrators.

MISSOURI G.O.P. $100 DINNERS TO BE HELD JAN. 20

Fund-raising "salute to Eisenhower" dinners—at $100 a plate—will be given by Missouri Republicans Jan. 20 here and in every county in the state, as part of a nation-wide Republican campaign effort, it was announced yesterday.

Perry Compton, state Republican chairman, who announced the plan at a state committee meeting in Jefferson City, said the dinners would be linked by a closed circuit television network.

Compton said the $100-a-plate price would prevail in St. Louis and Kansas City and probably in St. Joseph, Springfield and Joplin. The "salute" dinners will be somewhat less costly elsewhere, he added. Arthur K. Atkinson of St. Louis was named chairman of the dinner committee.

MINISTER DIES, TOLD FRIENDS HE TOOK 26 SLEEPING PILLS

The Rev. Charles R. Wilson, pastor of Alethelan Fellowship Church, 4268 Delor street, died yesterday at City Hospital, where he was rushed after he told a friend in Colorado by long-distance telephone that he had taken 26 sleeping pills.

The friend, Seymour Loucks, Fort Collins, Colo., reported that the Rev. Mr. Wilson informed him he had taken the pills, saying, "I don't have long to live." Loucks then sent an emergency message to the minister's physician, Dr. John N. Eversoll, 6356 Clayton road, Richmond Heights.

Dr. Eversoll called police, who went to the Rev. Mr. Wilson's home, also at 4268 Delor. Officers found the minister lying on the living room floor near the telephone, which was off its hook, and rushed him to the hospital. Dr. Eversoll said he had been treating the Rev. Mr. Wilson since 1953 for dieabetes.

2 SITES CALLED SUITABLE FOR NEW CITY WORKHOUSE

Two sites for the new City Workhouse were declared suitable by two representatives of the United States Bureau of Prisons after an inspection made with city officials yesterday. No recommendations were made, however.

The two sites were Missouri Hills, the city's correctional institution for boys in north St. Louis county, and Meramec Hills at Valley Park, a similar home for delinquent girls.

Top priority has been assigned to the proposed $3,000,000 workhouse after funds for its erection were approved in the $110,639,000 bond issue of last May 26. The present workhouse is an antiquated structure without modern facilities. Frequent escapes have been made. The federal officials were Myrl Alexander, assistant chief of the prison bureau, and Robert Barnes, senior architect.

SOUTH SIDE HOMES SHAKEN, JET SONIC BOOM IS BLAMED

Scores of homes in south and southwest St. Louis were shaken yesterday, apparently by a sonic boom produced by a jet airplane passing through the sound barrier.

A spokesman for McDonnell Aircraft Corp., said one of its jet F-101 Voodoos was making a flight at supersonic speed about 75 miles south of St. Louis about the time the sound was heard, 4:15 p.m. No other jets capable of speed faster than sound were reported in the St. Louis area at the time. The spokesman for McDonnell said a previous sonic boom felt in St. Louis county was traced to a plane 40 miles west of St. Charles.

The Carondelet police station was swamped with calls from district residents who feared a major explosion or an earthquake had occurred. However, police received no report of any blast and the seismograph at St. Louis University indicated no disturbances in this area.

Reports of houses vibrating and windows rattling came from various parts of the south side from the Mississippi river to west of South Kingshighway and from Telegraph road north to Magnolia and Tower Grove avenues. No reports of damage were received by police, however.

GOLD ORNAMENTS UNEARTHED IN OLD GREEK GRAVES

Five gold ornaments believed to be the oldest artifacts of gold ever unearthed in the vicinity of Athens, Greece, have been found by Dr. George E. Mylonas, head of the Washington University department of art and archeology, the university announced yesterday.

They were discovered last summer by Prof. Mylonas, now on leave to do research at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N.J. Used as circlets for women's hair, they date from 1800 to 1750 B.C. and were in one of 130 graves investigated at Eleusis, religious center 14 miles west of Athens.

The circlets, Mylonas wrote the university here, were used to hold a woman's hair tightly around her head. He added that even at that remote time "the ladies seem to have been anxious to appear at their best."

Other objects found by the Washington University expedition to Greece, which Mylonas heads, included figurines, knives, swords and a number of bronze coins. The coins were placed in the mouths of the dead, to pay their way across the River Styx to the lower world.

CITIZEN GROUPS TO HELP POLICE IN 2 DISTRICTS

Committees to Combat Rising Crime Rate May Be Formed in Others Later.

Plans for forming citizens' committees to work with St. Louis police in two districts in which the crime rate is highest were announced yesterday, following conferences of Police Board members with representatives of community, educational and religious groups interested in halting the rise in crime.

The first committees will be formed in the Ninth (Lucas avenue) and Tenth (Deer street) Police Districts. These districts are major crime areas, in which the department concentrated beat patrolmen six months ago in an effort to curb growing incidenceof crime there.

Purpose of the committees is better co-ordination of the efforts of police, community organizations and private citizens, a spokesman explained. He emphasized that it is not proposed that "citizens become vigilantes or that policemen become social workers."

The conferences leading to formation of the committees "recognized that responsibility for increased incidence of crime rests largely with the citizens of a community," it was stated. "The community can benefit by better understanding of police problems, and the police can become more efficient by having a more complete understanding and co-operation of citizens," the spokesman said.

Each committee will consist of 12 or more members who work or live in the district. While some members may represent organizations, the majority will be "ordinary citizens"—business men, filling station operators, housewives, factory workers or other individuals who know their neighborhood and have a genuine interest in its problems, it was announced.

The captain of each police district is expected to meet with members of the committee, and may assign an officer to work with the group as part of his regular duty. If the first two committees prove effective, similar groups may be organized in other police districts.

Among the committees' aims will be a reduction in crimes traceable to intergroup tensions, and development of a consciousness of the need for co-operation with police in maintaining law and order. It is planned to hold monthly meetings of the committees and reports will be forwarded to the founding groups periodically.

The St. Louis regional office of the National Conference of Christians and Jews served as co-ordinator of activities of the police board and other groups that have helped develop the plan.

Missed His Mother

POLICE SHOOT AT AUTO IN FALSE FIRE ALARM CHASE

Police fired three shots last night at an automobile containing one of two youths believed responsible for turning in seven false fire alarms within one hour in North St. Louis but the driver escaped, apparently unharmed.

As Detectives Edward Mitchell and Ralph Kube were parked in their automobile at Veronica avenue and Halls Ferry road, a cream colored Studebaker drove up to the fire alarm box. The automobile and its two youthful occupants answered the description given by witnesses of several false alarms turned in between 9:30 and 10:30 o'clock.

When one of the youths alighted and walked to the fire alarm box, the detectives left their automobile and went toward the youth. However, the youth fled on foot while the driver of the car tried to run over the officers, they said. One detective then fired the shots at the machine as it sped north on Halls Ferry road. All the alarms were in the Ruskin Avenue District.

BAREFOOT BOY, 3, FOUND IN STREET SEEKING MOTHER

Jerry Bowman, 3-year-old wanderer, went to bed early last night, tired from his early morning search for his mother. The boy was found shivering at 7 a.m. yesterday by police at Fifteenth street and Lafayette avenue, five blocks from home in his bare feet and clad only in blue jeans and a T-shirt.

At Lynch street police station, Jerry got warmed up but he wouldn't say anything except that he was looking for his mother. It was about an hour later when his father, George Bowman, 2022 Lafayette, came looking for the boy and the story unfolded.

At 2:30 a.m. Bowman rushed his wife to City Hospital where she gave birth to a daughter an hour later. Jerry, asleep at the time, was left at home. After Bowman assured himself that all was well at the hospital, he went home and to bed. When he wakened, Jerry was gone.

The youngster told his father that he woke up "real early" and saw that his mother was not in her bed, so he started out to look for her. Although he did not know she was taken to the hospital, he was right across the street from it when police picked him up.

URGES JUDGES TO SUE FOR A NEW COURTROOM

McLaughlin Suggests Legal Action to Force City to Make Chamber Available.

A recommendation that legal action be taken to compel city authorities to provide space for an additional courtroom in the Municipal Courts Building for trial of criminal cases was made yesterday by Circuit Judge James E. McLaughlin. At the same time, he reported a drop in the number of criminal cases awaiting trial.

Commenting upon the failure of city officials to act upon the circuit court's request to make available a courtroom on the first floor of the building, now used for storage by the public health nursing service, Judge McLaughlin said:

"If the proper city authorities do not act soon to provide the additional criminal court facilities required, the circuit judges should institute legal proceedings to force them to do so."

Nothing Done.

Judge McLaughlin was a member of a four-man committee of circuit judges which four weeks ago discussed the request for additional court facilities with the city's Board of Estimate and Apportionment. The judge said he left that meeting with the feeling that immediate action was going to be taken, but nothing has been done, he said.

"Another courtroom would enable us to bring the court docket up to date," he said.

In the past seven weeks, a total of 447 criminal cases have been disposed of, reducing the trial docket to 746 cases as compared with 957 cases awaiting trial Sept. 12. New cases filed during that period totaled 236.

118 Cases in Week.

A total of 118 cases were disposed of last week, Judge McLaughlin said, adding he believed that to be a record number for the criminal division in one week's time.

As a direct result of efforts made by the judges in the criminal divisions of the circuit court during the last seven weeks, the population of the city jail has dropped from 421 on Sept. 12 to 331 at present, the judge reported.

Of the 331 jail inmates, 34 are prisoners being held for the federal government and 37 are awaiting transportation to the Missouri penitentiary, or other penal institutions in the state.

PRESIDENT GIVES PERSONAL OK TO BENSON POLICIES

son said, includes the following measures:

1. A "stepped-up" program to dispose of farm surpluses and expanded exports of agricultural commodities.

2. A "vigorous purchase program to remove market gluts wherever they occur and assist farmers in adjusting to market demands." Benson said this phase of the over-all program has been inaugurated. He cited cash incentives of 50 cents a bushel paid to farmers to encourage them to sell potatoes to refineries to be converted into starch, flour and feed. In other instances, cherries, prunes and sweet potatoes have been purchased and allocated to the school lunch program, he said.

3. An enlarged program of soil conservation, with incentive payments to farmers to take crop lands out of production and plant them in grass, trees and forage.

Benson said this measure would be applied particularly in the Great Plains region between the Rocky Mountains and the corn belt and in "marginal" farming areas where the land is poor.

4. Expansion of the rural development program for low-income farm families.

5. A "stepped-up" program of research, emphasizing lower costs of production, new uses for farm products, new crops and expansion of markets.

6. Increased emphasis on the existing "Great Plains" program, which Benson said was aimed at better use of land and more balanced farming practices in that area. The states involved are Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

Federal Action Stressed.

The program emphasizes federal action to reduce farm surpluses and give farmers incentives to cut down on those crops which are already in too-great supply.

Benson said legislation would be needed to put some parts of it in effect; other measures can be begun by executive action. He did not estimate cost of the additional aid.

The conference with Benson marked the first time since his heart attack that Mr. Eisenhower has been permitted by his physicians to discuss a controversial issue.

Other participants in the conference were Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, the President's brother; Sherman Adams, chief presidential assistant, and Hagerty.

After Hagerty read Mr. Eisenhower's statement, Benson launched quickly into a statement of his own. Reaffirming his belief that the farm dilemma can be solved, outlining his suggestions and quoting statistics which he said would show that the future is bright.

Denies He Will Resign.

Reporters broke in to ask if Benson would resign as a result of the drumfire of criticism from Democrats and some Republicans in farm areas.

"Once and for all, I have never worried about tenure of the job," Benson replied. "I have been busy doing a job for agriculture, and I'm not worried about the other."

Hagerty said he knew of "no time when the President has even remotly thought about such a thing (Benson's resignation). The only time we've heard of it has been in the newspapers."

Benson said he had reviewed the farm situation with Mr. Eisenhower in general terms, stressing some relief measures that have already been taken. He mentioned a recent Agriculture Department decision to buy pork as a price support move.

He said the agricultural act of 1954, which set forth the flexible system of lower government price supports for basic farm commodities, provided a "sound foundation" to which the Administration will add additional farm assistance.

The farm problem is expected to be a hot issue, perhaps the hottest, in the 1956 elections.

Sixth Month of Decline.

Benson's visit coincided with an Agriculture Department announcement that farm prices had dropped 2 per cent in the month that ended Oct. 15, making it the sixth month this year that farmers' income has declined.

The new level of prices paid farmers for their products is 5 per cent below a year ago, the department announcement said.

While acknowledging that "we're not satisfied with farm prices and farm income," Benson said various statistics would show that "the future of agriculture is bright."

He said farm land values had increased 5 per cent this year; farm debts amount to only 11 per cent of total assets, compared with 19 per cent in 1940; per capita income of farmers is higher, and farm production is within 1 per cent of balancing consumption, meaning that surpluses should not continue to mount as rapidly.

Asked if he would say the President's statement constituted an indorsement by Mr. Eisenhower of Benson's policies, Hagerty replied firmly: "I sure would—completely."

Benson added: "And I sure would, too."

Benson said he and Mr. Eisenhower asked the President's brother to sit in on the conference. Dr. Milton Eisenhower, one of the President's closest advisers, has held Agriculture Department posts under both Democratic and Republican Administrations.

First Touchy Issue.

Hagerty said a previous bar against letting Mr. Eisenhower discuss controversial issues "no longer holds."

Mr. Eisenhower's previous conference with such top domestic advisers as Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey and Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. apparently avoided, so far as reporters could learn, any aspects that might be controversial.

Benson, who said last night he would not yield to political pressures and would stay in the Eisenhower cabinet as long as the President wants him, arrived at the Denver White House just before noon on the presidential plane Columbine.

He was accompanied by Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, Adams and Dr. Milton Eisenhower. The latter three men came out from Washington, stopping at Fargo, N.D., to pick up Benson. Summerfield, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, was scheduled to see Mr. Eisenhower Monday.

The decision to let Mr. Eisenhower work on "touchy" subjects, with the accompanying risk that he might become excited or upset, was another in the growing list of indications that his doctors now consider him greatly improved.

His chances for a full recovery from his heart attack were believed to have increased materially as a result of a medical finding on Friday that his heart thus far has not been enlarged by his illness.

A hospital bulletin today said: "The President's condition continues to progress satisfactorily without complications."

Works for 45 Minutes.

Ending his fifth week of convalescence, Mr. Eisenhower worked with his personal secretary, Mrs. Ann C. Whitman, on "routine" government business and dictation for 45 minutes this morning, Hagerty said.

Later he walked "at will" in his hospital room and began a new oil painting, using a regular floor easel and sitting up in a straight-backed chair. Previously Mr. Eisenhower had used a plastic portable easel.

The new painting will depict a Rocky Mountain scene. Hagerty said the President is working from a photograph taken near St. Louis Creek on the ranch of Aksel Nielsen near Fraser, Colo., one of Mr. Eisenhower's favorite vacation spots.

WEST REJECTS SECURITY PACT RUSSIA OFFERED

they met here in the summit conference last July.

Dulles said the directive specified that the problems of European security and German unification should be closely linked. The Western powers introduced a program for action covering both issues, he said, while Molotov had made a proposal only on European security.

This is a "rather serious deviation" from the summit conference directive, Dulles declared. He then cited provisions of the summit directive for taking up such matters as inspection, limitation and controls of armed forces in Europe and said the Soviet plan had failed to comply with the directive because it made no provision for solution of these problems.

West's Package Proposal.

The Western ministers praised, to no avail, their package proposal of an "assurance treaty" for the Soviet bloc and Eden-plan free elections to unify Germany.

Molotov indicated unshaken opposition to the West's double proposal.

The "assurance treaty" assumes that a reunited Germany will choose to remain in NATO. It promises "appropriate action to meet the common danger" by other NATO members if NATO Germany attacks the Soviet bloc.

A semi-demilitarized zone would be set up by the pact along a reunited Germany's frontier with Poland and Czechoslovakia. The Soviet bloc and NATO each would have a radar air warning system in each other's territory in this zone.

The Big Four deadlock over German unity spread new gloom in the Bonn republic. Foreign Minister Henrich von Brentano disclosed he will come here next week to see the three Allied ministers. Von Brentano has already renounced any claim to participate in the Geneva conference in its discussion of the German question, because that would open up a similar role for East German Communists.

But leading West German newspapers urged that he propose some new initiative from the western side to keep alive the unity issue, now apparently doomed.

Eastern satellite diplomats happily predicted Russia will sit tight on Germany, at least until a new Bonn chancellor is elected in 1957 to replace Konrad Adenauer, ailing 79-year-old champion of the Atlantic alliance.

All the satellites, headed by Poland and Czechoslovakia, dread the rise of a reunited Germany bound to the West. Neutralization is demanded as the minimum price for any agreement to end Germany's division.

BRITAIN PROTESTS TO MOLOTOV ON ARMS TO EGYPT

upset the region's existing frontiers.

Suggested by the United States, the Western move is intended to douse the heated passions of Israeli and Arab forces facing each other at gunpoint over windswept desert frontiers. It would have the twin aim of:

Meeting precise Israeli pleas for protection against the flow of Soviet bloc arms into Egypt;

Reminding any trigger-happy Israelis they would not easily get away with any preventive action they may contemplate against their Arab neighbors.

Two-Part Declaration.

In their two-part 1950 declaration, the Western allies pledged to: (1) Maintain a "reasonable" arms level in the area, sufficient to enable local states to take care of their internal security, self defense and play a role in the defense of the area, and (2) resist by all means, inside and outside the United Nations, any forcible attempts to upset the existing frontiers of the region.

As acrimony in the area periodically has risen, the Allies have come out publicly with clear statements that their 1950 promise means just what it says. Prime Minister Eden recently reaffirmed the declaration in the House of Commons, adding that Britain saw no need to meet Israeli requests for tighter guaranties.

Prime Minister Sharett flew in from Israel earlier this week for conferences here and in Paris with each of the Big Four foreign ministers. He was under stiff pressure at home to seek new security pledges—or failing that, more arms to match the inflow of Soviet bloc arms to neighboring Egypt. All he got thus far has been the indication that the 1950 promise might be dusted off and that the United States will consider any specific arms requirements he might make.

The Israeli leader is due to confer with Secretary of State Dulles again tomorrow. Early Monday he is due to see Molotov. The results of that meeting will be discussed with Macmillan later in the day, before Sharett flies back to Jerusalem.

Aids said Sharett's approach to Molotov will be highlighted by two main arguments:

1. The cold war, like peace, is indivisible. Russia cannot expect to play cold war politics in the Mideast while professing to respect the "Geneva spirit" in Europe.

2. Cynicism marks Russia's Mideastern policies even within Soviet terms. It has sworn hostility toward the Western-sponsored Bagdad alliance of states along the Mideastern northern tier. Yet Israel, too, is resisting it. By selling arms to the Egyptians, and not to the Israelis, the Soviet bloc is penalizing Israel.

With the muffled boom of border shooting between Arabs and Israelis in the background, these other backstage developments in the Mideastern situation were reported tonight:

Macmillan and Dulles slated early separate meetings with Molotov, possibly within 24 hours. They were expected to arrange detailed discussion on the Middle East.

American Ambassador to Egypt Henry Byroade flew back to Cairo after talks with Dulles and other State Department officials. He presumably will see Premier Masser soon.

The United States is understood to be considering whether to hurry up its ultimately planned adherence to the Bagdad pact binding Turkey, Iraq, Iran, Pakistan and Britain.

The Western powers are thinking of slapping a total embargo of new arms supplies to Egypt if it seems to them that the Nasser regime's involvement with the Soviet bloc is extending rather than ending.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzi who has been at the United Nations Assembly in New York is stopping off this weekend in Zurich, Switzerland, on his way to Cairo. He is reported to have asked for a meeting with Molotov here Monday.

Moscow Radio Blames West for Mideast Tension.

LONDON, Oct. 29 (AP) — Moscow Radio tonight blamed Western policy for tension in the Middle East and applauded the new Egyptian-Syrian and Egyptian Saudi Arabian military alliances.

Political commentator Yury Bochkarev said shipment of arms from Czechoslovakia to Egypt in exchange for cotton was "an ordinary commercial deal profitable to both sides." Saudi Arabia has said it is considering an offer of arms from the Soviet Union.

In his broadcast, Bochkarev said the real cause of tension "lies in gross interference of the Western nations in internal affairs of the Middle East and their wish to set up an aggressive military group there."

Shostokovich Work Premiered.

LENINGRAD, Oct. 29 (AP)— Dmitri Shostokovich's latest work, "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra," had its premiere here tonight. The soloist was the famous Russian violinist David Oistrakh, who is expected to play it on his American tour starting next month under auspices of the Soviet Ministry of Culture.

tioned as candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor—Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr., Jefferson City attorney; State Attorney General John M. Dalton of Kennett, and State Commissioner of Agriculture C. L. Carpenter.

Most Democratic leaders in the Kansas City area have discounted recent reports that Blair might not run. He is expected to make a formal announcement of his candidacy in a few weeks.

Carpenter, who is backed by some agricultural and labor leaders in a stop-Blair movement, made no secret of the fact that he would like to be a candidate, but said he still has not decided whether to seek the nomination.

Dalton, who has been advised by friends not to throw his hat into the ring too soon, said: "I appreciate very much the fine offers of support that I have received. Personally, I feel it is too early to make a definite statement on my plans. I still have many important jobs to take care of as Attorney General, but I do expect to make some statement before too long."

A group of 25 Kennett residents, backing Dalton for the nomination for Governor, drove from southeast Missouri to attend the meeting.

Lieutenant Governor Candidates.

Many regard State Senator Edward V. Long of Clarksville as the leading candidate for lieutenant governor to succeed Blair. Also mentioned as a possible candidate is former Attorney General J. E. Taylor of Jefferson City, who was defeated for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator by Symington in 1952. Some, however, think that Taylor will run for his former post of Attorney General.

There was some talk that two St. Louisans might want to run for lieutenant governor. Those mentioned in this connection were Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd and Nicholas Blassie, head of the AFL Meat Cutters' Union.

Other possible candidates included: for Attorney General, McDonald County Prosecuting Attorney James Paul and former Congressman Clare Magee of Unionville; for state treasurer, Director of Revenue M. E. Morris, who served as treasurer from 1948 to 1952; for secretary of state, the incumbent Walter H. Toberman of St. Louis and Leroy Schantz, Greene county recorder of deeds.

Also present were Mark R. Holloran of St. Louis, who is expected to seek re-election as Democratic national committeeman from Missouri, and James H. Meredith, St. Louis attorney, who may run against Holloran.

Holloran presided at a breakfast meeting of newspaper editors at which plans were made to reactivate the Missouri Democratic Press Association.

only answer to the farm problem, but "it is a better program than sliding supports that slide only one way."

Minnesota Democrats were reported ready to call on Stevenson at a breakfast meeting tomorrow to run for the presidential nomination in 1956.

Aids said, however, that his announcement would not be made here but in Illinois.

Stevenson to Be Invited to Enter Minnesota Primary.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 29 (AP)—A Minnesota Democratic-Farmer-Labor party spokesman said today Adlai Stevenson will be invited to enter the Minnesota primary election March 20 as the Democratic candidate for President.

The spokesman, who declined use of his name, said a resolution terming Stevenson as "the best qualified man to lead the party and guide the nation's destiny" will be presented tomorrow morning to the D.-F.-L. state central committee at Duluth, by L. J. Lee, Ninth District chairman.

Another resolution asking Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, to become a candidate for Vice President, the spokesman said, will be submitted by Mrs. M. W. Malone, Second District chairwoman. The Lee resolution will call on Stevenson to actively seek the nomination as the Democratic party standard bearer and pledge him the support of the Minnesota D.-F.-L. party.

Senator Humphrey has declared his support of Stevenson.

Mrs. Malone's resolution, it was reported, will ask Humphrey to consider making the race for Vice President and urge the national convention to support him. A plea also is expected to be made to other Midwest states for similar action.

doubtedly would hold that Greenlease should bear the loss instead of someone who obtains a ransom bill in good faith.

"To hold otherwise would be to defeat the underlying social and economic policy of negotiable paper," Vining said. "It would be unreasonable, in the course of commerce, to expect those handling money to check serial numbers of every bill."

The professor pointed out that the "equities" would be on Greenlease's side and he could recover, if the money were pound in possession of hoodlums who obtained it illegally.

INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE OF LABOR GROUPS URGED

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29 (AP)—Executive board members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union called yesterday for an exchange of labor delegations between the United States, Europe and the Orient.

The board, ending a two-day session, said it believes the "time is ripe for an exchange of union delegations, not only with the U.S.S.R. (Soviet Russia), and its neighboring states, but also with China."

"The principal objective of such delegations should be the furtherance of trade expansion," the board declared.

Truman 'Glad' Liberal Party Man Backed Him, 'Most Didn't'

Ex-President Comments on Exchange With New Yorker Miffed by His 'Ain't You Funny' Note

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (UP) — Former President Harry S. Truman said today he was glad to learn that Nicholas C. Evans, chairman of the Monroe county (N.Y.) Liberal party, had supported him for President in 1948.

Most of Evans's fellow party members did not, he said.

On Truman's arrival from Kansas City, reporters asked him about the letter exchange with Evans, disclosed yesterday.

At Rochester, Evans had said he sent a "friend to friend" letter to Truman at Kansas City some days ago, asking for financial aid in the Liberal party's present campaign and saying in part "remember 1948 . . . our people were diligently working for your success. . . ."

He got in reply the letter with an unsigned note in ink across the bottom, saying "that was the year you worked and voted for Henry Wallace and carried the state for Dewey! Ain't you funny!"

So Evans wrote another letter saying he had worked for Truman's election "after you had gone to bed election night."

Today, Truman was asked if he actually wrote the letter back to Evans.

"Of course I did," said the former President.

"Evans said he supported you," a reporter reminded him.

"I'm glad he did," said Truman. "Most of them (Liberal party) didn't."

Ear specialists know your hearing loss is different. This means that your hearing loss must be tested and analyzed.
Giving you the hearing help that you need has nothing to do with just making all sounds louder. 1288 'Lost' Income Taxpayers, Third of Total, Apply for Refunds

Most of Them Saw Names in Printed Lists — 711 Checks for $30,000 Mailed So Far.

A total of 1288 persons have applied in person or by mail for federal income tax refunds due them since the Post-Dispatch began publication of names of "lost" taxpayers last Oct. 16, Assistant Revenue Director Ernest M. Flinn of the eastern district of Missouri said yesterday.

Those applying constitute more than a third of the 3705 taxpayers whose names are being printed. Most of the applicants saw their names in the printed lists; in a few cases they were reminded by the publication that they had refunds due and made inquiry before their own names were printed.

Flinn said checks have been mailed to 711 persons, for a total of about $30,000. Refunds are on 1953 and 1954 taxes.

Applications are made at the basement office of the revenue service in the Federal Building, Twelfth boulevard and Market street. Identification should be presented or inclosed in the letter, preferably a copy of the tax return or of the W-2 form. Telephone calls cannot be handled.

DENIES POLITICS HAD PART IN JOB AWARD BY STROBEL

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 29 (AP)—L. W. (Chip) Robert said yesterday "there couldn't be by any stretch of the imagination any political implications" in a $24,000 additional contract awarded his Atlanta engineering firm by Peter A. Strobel as federal public buildings commissioner.

Strobel, appearing before a House judiciary subcommittee in Washington, was asked if the contract was in any way connected with the fact that Robert was a former customer of Strobel's New York engineering firm and Robert was one-time Democratic party treasurer. He asserted there was no connection.

Robert, on reading a report of the hearing said Strobel had given an "eminently correct and fair" account of the transactions.

The $24,000 contract was for designing changes which the Public Health Service desired in a communicable disease center in Atlanta, for which Robert & Co. had drawn the original plans. Robert said that "it is almost unheard of to change designers for additions" and in following accepted practice in hiring his firm to handle the change Strobel also "saved the Government money."

TRANSIT DISPUTE MEDIATOR TO TRY AGAIN TOMORROW

Asks P.S. Co., Union to Reappraise Positions and Meet With Him Again.

A new effort to settle a wage dispute between the Public Service Co. and its employes will be made tomorrow by Daniel C. Rogers, chairman of the State Board of Mediation, when he returns here from Jefferson City.

Before leaving for the weekend, he asked both sides to reappraise their positions and be prepared to meet with him again. He had not brought them together since Wednesday, when the union voted to reject the company's latest offer, a graduated increase of 13 cents an hour and other improvements.

The union, Division 788, AFL Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, went on strike Oct. 11 but returned to work 3½ days later. The company was seized by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly under the King-Thompson act shortly after the strike began.

Under a contract that expired last Feb. 28, the men are receiving maximum wages of $1.87 an hour for operators and $2.12 for mechanics. They asked for a 26-cent increase, and struck after a public hearing panel recommended a graduated 12-cent increase.

The union has asked the St. Louis circuit court to compel Gov. Donnelly to lift the seizure, arguing that the King-Thompson act is unconstitutional. In a brief filed Friday, the office of the Attorney General said the public would suffer damage and inconvenience far outweighing any possible benefits to the union if the seizure were ended by injunction.

"The chaos in traffic, the inconvenience and the loss to the public generally which followed the strike are so well known as to require no elaboration," the brief said, pointing out that about 450,000 passengers use the transit facilities daily.

Circuit Judge Robert L. Aronson, before whom the case is pending, said he hoped to rule by Thursday on the union's request for a temporary injunction. He added he plans to spend Friday and Saturday in Washington. He permitted the union to file a reply brief to the state's brief. Union conusel said they would try to have the brief filed by Tuesday.

A.D.A. HEAD URGES PARTIES TO ADOPT RIGHTS PLANKS

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 29 (AP)—Joseph L. Rauh Jr., national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action called on both major parties today to place in their 1956 platforms a "spelled-out, no-fence-straddling" civil liberties plank.

In an address to a conference on constitutional rights sponsored by the Indiana state CIOI council, Rauh said:

"In 1952 we had McCarthyism. Both political parties chose to look the other way...A lot of good things have happened in this area of civil liberties since the 1952 campaign. The climate is clearer; hysteria is going. We have remembered our freedoms.

"But neither the return of reason, nor the oblivion of Senator McCarthy, has removed civil liberties as a political issue...Today's climate may be better than 1952's, or 1953's, or 1954's. But we still have loyalty oaths, secret informers, a defunct and much-abused Attorney General's list of subversive organizations, guilt by kinship, security investigations of meat inspectors and washroom attendants, and a myriad other un-American habits."

CHINESE BUSINESS MEN, MEET MAO IN PEIPING

TOKYO, Sunday, Oct. 30 (AP)—Mao Tse-tung, ruler of Red China, met in Peiping yesterday with Chinese industrialists and business men to discuss the socialization of private enterprise, Peiping radio said today.

The broadcast said Mao met with the "All-China Federation of Industry and Commerce," which is the government organization or wedge to drive out what remains of private enterprise.

Red China has taken over most of the private plants and businesses gradually. Those private enterprises that remain are allowed to operate so that they can train Communist workers to take over.

EAST COAST STATES SWITCH BACK TO STANDARD TIME

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—Nine East Coast states and some Midwest cities will switch back to standard time Sunday.

Abandoning daylight saving time are Connecticut, Vermont, Massachusetts, Delaware, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, and some cities in Illinois, including Chicago, and Ohio. Several Pennsylvania municipalities, including Philadelphia, also move their clocks back one hour.

LUKE E. HART RE-ELECTED

Luke E. Hart, attorney of St. Louis and New Haven, Conn., was re-elected supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus at the quarterly meeting of the board of directors at Asheville, N.C., it was announced yesterday. He moved to New Haven, the organization's headquarters, when he was elected to his first term two years ago, but also maintains a St. Louis residence and law office.

OFFICER MISSES $100,000 QUESTION ON TV QUIZ SHOW

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—A Brooklyn policeman tonight failed to win $100,000 on a television quiz — the biggest cash prize in history of TV giveaways.

Detective Sgt. Barney Arluck was allowed, however, to keep $50,000 he won last Saturday on the NBC-TV "Big Surprise" program.

The $100,000 question asked of Arluck dealt with criminal law and was written for the program by United States Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Arluck was able to answer only the first of four parts—to define the ordeal used by early American courts to force an accused person to plea. He called it "strong and sustained punishment."

He missed on the year the practice was ended in New York state (1772); whether a court or Congress first ordered federal judges to enter a plea of innocent for persons who declined to plead (Congress); and whether the United States Supreme Court affirmed or reversed the conviction of a man after records showed that he did not enter any plea (affirmed).

STOCKTON, Calif., Oct. 29 (AP)—A soldier mailed home an automatic carbine piece by piece from Korea, then used it in three holdups, police reported today.

Robert Kirby, 23 years old, a Korean veteran, and a 16-year-old companion have been arrested on first degree robbery charges.

A total of $340 was stolen from two taverns and a store in a four-day period.

WOMAN DIPLOMAT FINDS U.N. BRAIN POWER 'TERRIFIC'

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 29 (AP) — Miss Frances Elizabeth Willis, United States ambassador to Switzerland, is pleased at the brain power she has found here—and she sees hope for the world in it.

"There is the most terrific collection of talent at the U.N.," she said in an interview.

"Look at the General Assembly and see the brain power there. No other place in the world do you have it. They are trying to get agreement and to work together, and that in itself is a tremendous thing. It is encouraging. There is some hope in it."

Ambassador Willis is here as an adviser to the United States delegation in Political Committee No. 2.

She was at Vassar teaching government in the '20s when she decided she would learn something about it first-hand. So she took the foreign service examination and was off on a career abroad.

Miss Willis was born in Metropolis, Ill., but lives now at Redlands, Calif.

DEPUTIES MEET TO DEBATE VOTE PLAN IN FRANCE

Sunday Session Unusual for Assembly as Faure Pushes December Election Proposal.

PARIS, Oct. 29 (AP)—The French National Assembly meets tomorrow in an unusual Sunday session to open debate on new general elections in December.

The discussion on the Assembly floor will continue through a night session Tuesday. Premier Faure has asked the deputies to declare their term at an end Jan. 2. This would permit elections in December, probably on the 11th.

All parties declare themselves in favor of this idea. But several parties, and many individual deputies, insist a change in the election law must be made first. Lobby talks will center on ways of rallying a majority for some new system. So far, there seems to be little hope for agreement.

Faure has threatened to bring an end to the efforts Tuesday night if no solution has been found. At that time, he says, he will ask for a confidence vote on the single issue of ending the Assembly mandate. He probably can win on this, since the deputies will not want to be recorded as opposed to elections.

The Assembly's committee on universal suffrage, which must make recommendations on the voting system, met today. Its first decision was to base discussions on a system of outright proportional representation. It is unlikely this will be accepted, however, since it would increase Communist representation in the Assembly.

LIBRARY EXHIBIT ON AID TO RETARDED CHILDREN

An exhibit illustrating the theme "Retarded Children Can Be Helped" will be on display in the main hall of the Central Public library, 1301 Olive street, during November under the sponsorship of the St. Louis Association for Retarded Children.

A variety of projects and activities performed by retarded children in basketry, embroidery, leathercraft, painting, weaving and simple sewing is included in the display. The objects were made by children at the St. Louis State Training School located in the Egen-Tudor School, 7327 Lansdowne avenue, Shrewsbury.

Other portions of the exhibit include pamphlets, bulletins and other publications showing work done by retarded children in other parts of the country as well as a large chart indicating the work still to be done in St. Louis to improve the educational and welfare program for the retarded child. The sponsoring association is a member of United Fund.

TB SOCIETY PUBLICATION DISTRIBUTED IN SCHOOLS

A total of 27,290 copies of the October issue of "Health Shield," published by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, are being distributed through 139 public, private and parochial schools in the St. Louis area, it was announced yesterday.

The publication, locally written, is a four-page paper for elementary school pupils. It features articles of general interest to younger children and stories accenting approved health habits.

The society also reported it has received requests for more than 1600 copies of "Tuberculosis Abstracts," a monthly publication distributed to medical and nursing schools and individual physicians.

INFIRMARY BENEFIT PARTY

The fifth annual benefit card party will be given at 8 p.m. Friday by the City Infirmary's Cheer-Up Club in the recreation room of the infirmary, 5300 Arsenal street. Proceeds will be used for the patient welfare program of the club, Mrs. Lillian Cundiff, president said.

COPYWRITER

This is a key copy opening.

We'd prefer your experience be in an advertising agency, but we're open-minded. Writers now employed in key copy positions in retail, consumer products, or industrial advertising will get serious consideration.

Reason for this opening: we are revamping and expanding our Copy Department.

We are most interested in people who "live to write" (not write to live) advertising. People whose greatest interest lies in advertising copy—which they work on expertly, imaginatively, lovingly. We want another sales thinker who works in terms of campaigns, as well as single ads . . . an ad-maker able to create the entire advertisement from headline through suggested visual approach, to writing the final text.

If you'd like to share what we consider a bright future, you're invited to contact us. We prefer that you write a brief letter outlining your qualifications. Your confidence will be respected. Address Tom J. Connelly.

YOUTH CAPTURED IN ONE BURGLARY ADMITS OTHERS

Caught With Companion by Waiting Police, He Implicates Four in Robberies.

One of two 17-year-old burglars captured early yesterday by police officers waiting for them in the Pork House Market, 2035 Gravois avenue, has admitted two other recent burglaries and implicated four companions, police announced.

The youth, who identified himself as Oliver Blase, living in the 2600 block of Lemp avenue, said he and two companions obtained $101 in a burglary at the Pork House Market Oct. 7. He also was quoted as admitting breaking into the Schaeffer Manufacturing Co., 102 Barton street, with two other companions Oct. 17.

In the previous Pork House Market burglary, police said, Blase implicated Gerald Jackson, 16, who was shot and seriously wounded by St. Louis county police following a wild ride in a stolen automobile last Thursday. Jackson lives in the 1900 block of Victor street.

Captured with Blase in yesterday's burglary was a youth who identified himself as Robert Goff, living in the 1200 block of State street, East St. Louis.

Officer Was Tipped Off.

They were caught by Patrolmen Alex Mattus and Charles Beezley who had lain in wait for six and one-half hours. The officers hid inside the store when it closed at 9 p.m. after being directed to do so as a result of information obtained by veteran beat Patrolman Maurice Felstein. Felstein had been told the store would be robbed.

About 3:45 a.m., the officers said, an automobile was driven into the store's parking lot. The two youths emerged and climbed a pole to the store roof.

They removed a temporary cover over a hole through which Blase and his companions had entered on the previous burglary. Then they kicked in a section of the fiberboard ceiling, the officers said, and dropped to the floor.

As the youths were preparing to open a cash register, Mattus and Beezley emerged from hiding and placed them under arrest. The youths offered no resistance.

The Pork House Market has been entered by burglars several times in recent months, police said. Patrolman Felstein, keeping a close watch on the place since the Oct. 7 burglary, learned that suspicious strangers had been in the market recently. He then obtained the information about the impending burglary.

Visited Store to Lay Plans.

Goff and Blase made oral admissions they had visited the store several times planning the burglary, police said. They decided to try it again because the hole in the roof had not been patched.

The second companion implicated by Blase in the Oct. 7 burglary is a 15-year-old boy arrested with Jackson in the stolen automobile. He is being held at Children's Building.

Jackson was still reported in serious condition at County Hospital yesterday. He suffered shotgun wounds in the right shoulder and hip when Patrolman Donald Cronk fired as he and two companions fled after the stolen machine overturned at Grant and Pardee roads.

Blase, Goff and a 17-year-old laborer identified as James Tubbs, living in the 1000 block of Victor street, broke into the Schaeffer Manufacturing Co. Oct. 17, they admitted to police. They obtained an electric saw and $4, but were unsuccessful in efforts to open the safe.

Oil Station Robbed.

Thomas Nelson, operator of a gasoline filling station at 35 South Grand boulevard, reported he was robbed of $125 early yesterday by an armed man who walked into his office.

The robber, a Negro wearing a handkerchief mask, ordered Nelson to hand him the money which was in Nelson's two shirt pockets. Then he forced Nelson and a customer, Luther Nelson, who is not related, the filling station operator, to go into a storeroom. After closing the door the robber left on foot.

County police reported yesterday burglars broke into the Gravois Bank, 8301 Gravois avenue, Affton, some time Friday night, but apparently failed to obtain any money after prying open 12 drawers.

Entry was gained through a basement window. All bank funds had been placed in the vault, which is protected by a burglar alarm.

ORDNANCE GUARD WOUNDED, REPORTS HE WAS ABDUCTED

Maple Nelson, a guard of the St. Louis Ordnance District building at 1016 Olive street, suffered five severe cuts yesterday at the hands of two men who forced him to drive them to Scott Air orce Base. He is a Negro, and lives at 5127 Raymond avenue.

A motorist found Nelson staggering on the highway near the base shortly before 5 a.m., and the car he had been using was nearby. He was taken to the base hospital.

He said two men entered the building, forced him to change from his uniform into ordinary clothing and then take them to the East Side. He was not robbed, and St. Clair county sheriff's deputies were unable to learn a reason for the abduction.

DEMONSTRATORS CALL FOR RETURN OF BEN YOUSSEF

Nationalist Delegation Flies to France to Greet Ex-Sultan Back From Exile.

RABAT, Morocco, Oct. 29 (UP) — Moroccan nationalists conducted frenzied demonstrations in major cities of this French protectorate today demanding the return of exiled Sultan Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef to the throne.

The demonstrations occurred as a five-man deelgation of the Nationalist Istiqlal party flew to France to welcome the ex-sultan on his return from two years of exile in Madagascar.

Moroccan Premier-desgnate Si Fatmi Ben Slimane also announced he would fly to France to greet the nationalist-minded sultan. He said he would urge the Frnech government to reconsider plans to keep Ben Youssef permanently in France.

The exiled sultan is scheduled to leave Madagascar by air tomorrow for France, where he is to be lodged in a luxury hotel on the Riviera.

Thousands of Ben Youssef's supporters poured out of the native Medinas today, waving flags and carrying his portrait. An artillery salvo marked the opening of the three-day Moslem yestival of Mouloud, which commemorates the birth of the prophet Mohammed.

In Casablanca, the nearly hysterical processions held up traffic on the main boulevards while demonstrators chanted: "Vive Ben Youssef. Ben Youssef on the throne."

Troops were called out to cordon off certain areas of the city but no incidents were reported in the demonstrations.

ENGINES, STOVES, TELEPHONES GET POWER FROM SUN

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 29 (UP) —An exhibit of engines, stoves and other articles in which the sun has been put to use as a source of energy was opened today, previewing the first world symposium on applied solar energy scheduled here next week.

Monday, a two-day international conference on the scientific basis of applied solar energy will begin for scientists from more than 20 nations at the University of Arizona in Tucson. The first world symposium on applied solar energy starts here Wednesday and continues through Friday.

"The sun at work" is the theme for the exhibit today at the Phoenix civic center.

Among articles on display were an engine demonstrated by Enrico Gasperino of the Societia Motori Recuperi, Italy, a solar-powered telephone of the Bell Telephone Co. which already has been used on a rural line in Georgia, and a searchlight mirror converted by Convair of San Diego and described as the largest solar furnace in the United States.

Food cooked through use of solar energy and models of solar-heated homes also are on display.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY SCENES TO BE FILMED FOR TV USE

A motion picture of the historical romance of the Mississippi river valley will be made by Continental Pictures, Inc., of Hollywood for distribution to television stations throughout the country, it was announced yesterday by Dr. H. W. Trovillion.

Dr. Trovillion, a retired dentist of Godfrey in Madison county, Ill., and chairman of the Mississippi Scenic Parkway Commission, said camera crews are to start immediately to take full advantage of the autumn colors. The picture will be made in color for wide and standard screens.

The preliminary script, Dr. Trovillion said, deals with the history of the river valley from the time of the explorer DeSoto through the Lewis & Clark expedition, Mark Twain's time and will be climaxed with some of the modern developments on the river.

$250,000 FOR RESEARCH INTO HOUSING PROBLEMS

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—The Ford Foundation has granted $250,000 for research into housing problems. It was made to the American Council to Improve Our Neighborhoods to seek ways to remove obstacles to better housing.

CALLS ALUMNI AID ONLY WAY TO SAVE COLLEGES

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 29 (AP) —An alumni-led financial "crusade" will be necessary to save the private colleges in the United States, Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said today at a convocation marking the 125th anniversary of the University of Richmond.

Corporate aid to education is no "magic panacea," he said, even though such aid now amounts to $100,000,000 a year and can be expected to increase.

Funston said that although business men are determined "that private colleges shall not go under," leaving the nation with only state-supported schools, "the job of meeting the colleges' needs is simply too big for the larger companies that have shown the most conspicuous leadership."

Noting that private colleges need an additional $250,000,000 annually, he pointed out that if the 4,500,000 alumni of private colleges would each contribute the modest sum of $25 a year the total would amount "to the astonishing figure of over $100,000,000 a year."

"This sum," Funston said, "together with what business is giving and can be expected to give under such a stimulus, and together with philanthropic grants, would serve most of the colleges' immediate financial needs."

M'KAY POLICIES STIR UP BITTER POLITICAL CLASH

G.O.P. Terms Article Misleading — Democrats Say Many Points Are Unanswered.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP) —Republicans and Democrats today traded brickbats over a recent article in the Democratic Digest which criticized the power, oil and public land policies of Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay.

The Republican National Committee issued a 13-point denial of various statements in the article, which it said was "replete with misleading innuendo."

The committee charged the digest with "making use of the big lie mass propaganda techniques that all thinking Americans repudiate."

The Democratic National Committee, in turn, issued a rebuttal statement on behalf of the digest which, among other things, pointed out that the G.O.P. gave no answer at all to several charges dealing with public power and the grazing interests.

The digest is a monthly publication of the Democratic committee.

One of the main bones of contention was the digest statement that a high dam proposed by the Truman administration for Hell's Canyon in the Pacific Northwest would produce twice as much power as three smaller dams proposed by the Idaho Power Co.

Opposed by Examiner.

The Republican statement said "the difference in power is very slight" and, in addition, Federal Power Commission Examiner William J. Costello "actually opposed the high federal dam."

The Democratic statement quoted Costello to the effect that "the high dam would be dollar for dollar the better investment . . ." It said FPC official findings showed that the three dams would produce 505,000 kilowatts of prime power while the federal project would produce 924,000.

Taking up a digest charge that McKay sold for 25 cents on the dollar a $40,000,000 Government plant in Louisiana, Mo., the Republican statement said the Interior Department never owned the plant so disposal would be impossible.

The plant was on the verge of producing oil from coal, according to the digest. The Hercules Powder Co., which bought the plant, dealt solely with the Army, the G.O.P. statement said.

Scientists Not Consulted.

The Democrats replied that the Interior Department controlled part of the plant after World War II. They said McKay, on advice of the petroleum council, told Congress not to appropriate any more money for the synthetic fuel research. The recommendation was made without consultation with scientists on the spot and despite the new construction of a $5,000,000 pilot plant to experiment with a totally new process, the Democrats said.

The plant reverted to the Army, which disposed of it, and "the entire $5,000,000 in investment went to waste," the Democrats said.

The digest also accused McKay of giving a "nod of approval" to the oil industry to take over a Rifle, Colo., plant that is working on extracting oil from shale. The Republican statement said the process is not yet feasible on a commercial scale and besides the plant is Navy property.

The Democrats replied that the plant is located on Navy land but "was built, operated and owned by the Interior Department."

The digest article said McKay has recommended that the Federal Government dispose of its facilities for making helium gas and that coal mine safety regulations be returned to the states.

G.O.P. Reply.

The G.O.P. statement said McKay, on the contrary, "has flatly opposed the disposal of the Government's helium plants" and "has opposed returning mine inspection responsibility to the states unless their standards are raised to meet the federal requirements."

In reply, the Democrats quoted a newspaper dispatch of July 28, 1954, which reported McKay's attitude as the digest stated it.

The Democrats said the Republicans apparently have no answer to the charge that recent major changes in federal electric power regulations were authored by a Washington lobbyist for the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

"Nor does it seek to refute the charge made by Marion Clawson that he could have held his job under McKay as director of the bureau of land management if he had been willing to grant the request of the 'grazing interests,' the Democrat statement.

BRITISH M.P. TO SPEAK BEFORE CIVITAN CLUB FRIDAY

MEETING IN WEST END ON ANTI-BLIGHT PROGRESS

West End residents will review what has been accomplished in their neighborhood conservation program Tuesday night at a meeting of the Central West End Improvement Association. Problems that remain to be solved also will be studied at the meeting, to be held at 8 o'clock at the Cathedral School, Maryland and Newstead avenues.

The association was organized last spring to prevent spread of blight in the area bounded generally by Boyle avenue, Union and West Pine boulevards and Westminster place.

Thirty blocks units have been organized, and 13 organizations have affiliated with the association.

CLAIMS 12 ATOM BLASTS IN RUSSIA IN 13 MONTHS

Scientist Says U.S. Government Refuses to Tell People About Soviet Progress.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 29 (AP)—An atomic scientist said yesterday that there have been more than 12 atomic detonations in Russia in the last 13 months, and that the United States Government refuses to tell the people about it.

"We can assume that the Soviets know of their own projects, but for some reason the American Government has declined to let our own people know about it," said Dr. Ralph E. Lapp.

Dr. Lapp, director of the Nuclear Science Service which he established in Washington to act as a consultant to industry on atomic energy, addressed 1000 school teachers at the Connecticut Education Association convention.

Dr. Lapp did not say what his source of information was on the reported Russian atomic detonations and could not be reached later for questioning on that point. He apparently was on his way back to Washington.

In his criticism of what he termed the withholding of information, Dr. Lapp said:

"The Atomic Energy Commission, in typical one-sentence announcements, has stated that it will inform the people about Soviet atomic explosions when they are of particular importance.

"I believe that the detonation of more than a dozen bombs by the Soviet Union since September of last year is of great significance. Why are the American people not being given these facts by our Government?

"It seems to me the answer is multiple. Either they think American people will panic, or that they will resist a balanced budget, or perhaps they will turn pacifist."

Dr. Lapp also asserted that "the facts of the past 13 months show clearly that the Russians are drawing abreast of us in the art of making atomic bombs."

Dr. Lapp was division director of the Manhattan project during World War II, and more recently assistant director of the Argonne National Laboratory and scientific adviser to the War Department general staff.

The Atomic Energy Commission, informed in Washington of Dr. Lapp's criticism, had no immediate comment.

Opposes 'Veil of Secrecy' on Work to Tame H-Bomb.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—A former atomic energy commissioner yesterday urged that the "veil of secrecy" be lifted on research seeking to tame H-bomb energy to produce abundant electric power throughout the world.

Dr. Henry D. Smyth said less secrecy might speed discovery of methods of controlling the H-bomb reaction.

Dr. Smyth said he did not think that current work to try to control the powerful H-bomb or thermonuclear reaction has any "significant military importance."

He said that learning how to tame this reaction for peaceful power is a long-range, extremely difficult problem "of great eventual economic importance."

"Should we," he asked, "proceed under the clumsy cloak of secrecy, hoping that we will discover techniques that we will keep as national trade secrets, or would we be better off to expose our ideas and results to the free criticism and suggestions which have so invigorated our scientific and technological progress in the past? I for one believe the veil of secrecy should be lifted."

Dr. Smyth, now of Princeton University, said one possible means of controlling the reaction might be to heat a gas—for example, double weight hydrogen or deuterium—electromagnetically to start the fusing or merging of light atoms. The reacting gas might then be confined within a controlled space by some arrangement of electric and magnetic fields.

Dr. Smyth and another atomic expert said chances are slim that the H-bomb reaction can be tamed or controlled soon to give the world abundant power.

Dr. Hans Thirring, prominent Austrian physicist, said he sees little hope of taming thermonuclear reactions "unless a new, unexpected discovery turns up."

The Atomic Energy Commission recently announced that research on control of thermonuclear reactions is under way in a number of United States centers.

DEADLINE SET ON COLLEGE DRAFT DEFERMENT TESTS

College students who wish to take Selective Service college qualification tests on Nov. 17 must mail their applications by midnight Tuesday, the Rev. Jerome J. Marchetti S.J., test supervisor and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at St. Louis University, announced yesterday. The university is the test center for this area.

The test will be given college students across the nation next month and again on April 19. Students making a grade of 70 or above, or who maintain grades which put them in specified percentages of their classes, may be considered for educational deferment by their local draft boards.

Application cards for the test are available at any local draft board, Father Marchetti said. A Selective Service announcement from Washington pointed out that local boards have the final authority, subject to appeal, in saying whether a youth is to be given an educational deferment.

DIEM CALLS OLD CABINET, RETAINS EARLIER PROGRAM

SAIGON, South Viet Nam, Oct. 29 (AP)—President Ngo Dinh Diem today summoned all members of his old cabinet to form the first government of the young Vietnamese republic.

Diem made only one shift in the cabinet, which turned in its collective resignation Wednesday after the republic was proclaimed. He withdrew the ministry of economic affairs from Tran Huu Phuong, who had administered it jointly with finance, and turned it over to the minister of public works, Tran Van Meo.

The president retained the defense portfolio.

Diem told the cabinet the program he traced last May would remain in force. This calls for adoption of a constitution and election of a legislature before the end of this year.

He promised to undertake a vigorous program of national reconstruction. The new president then lashed out without naming them at French and Chinese capitalists who have controlled the wealth of the country for years.

Lost and Found Problem.

ATLANTA, Oct. 29 (UP) — Police said today no one has come forward to claim a loaded revolver found secreted in a restroom at the city jail.

CONGRESSMAN URGES INQUIRY INTO ANDREWS

Eberharter Says Retiring Revenue Chief Granted Relief to Firm He Is Joining.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP) —Representative Herman P. Eberharter (Dem.), Pennsylvania, today demanded a congressional investigation of the role played by retiring Internal Revenue Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews in a tax case involving the company he will head.

Eberharter said he would ask the House Ways and Means Committee, of which he is a member, to investigate reports that Andrews on two occasions granted relief to the company, the American Fidelity and Casualty Co., Inc. of Richmond, Va.

Andrews will leave his job as the nation's top tax collector on Monday to become chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the company.

Andrews was in Richmond, Va., to deliver a speech today and was not immediately available for comment.

Letter By Andrews.

In a letter to Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey earlier this month, Andrews noted that the company was involved in a $5,000,000 tax case now pending in the courts.

But Andrews said that he had "not gotten into the case at all" except to inquire about its progress.

On the basis of Andrews's assurances, Humphrey told him it was "proper" for him to take the job with the company.

Eberharter said that Andrews's letter gave the impression that he knew little about the tax case and had taken no action on it.

Jeopardy Assessment.

But he said he has heard that Andrews in July, 1953, reduced the jeopardy assessment, which ties up certain funds of the company pending the outcome of the court case, from $1,800,000 to $1,400,000.

In December, 1953, Eberr harter said, Andrews released the remaining $1,400,000 jeopardy assessment.

He said that Andrews action enabled the company to use the $1,800,000 in funds previously frozen.

Eberharter said he believes that in view of these facts the Ways and Means committee, which has jurisdiction over the Treasury Department and the Internal Revenue Service, should look into the entire matter.

Internal revenue officials, who refused to be quoted by name, told reporters that Andrews' actions on the jeopardy assessments were merely a "routine matter."

They confirmed that Andrews approved the reduction and later elimination of so-called jeopardy assessments in July and December, 1953, respectively.

U. S. Bonds Tied Up.

Jeopardy assessments, they said, are levied by internal revenue when there is some doubt that the Government may collect what it believes is owed in back taxes and penalties before a case is settled. In this case some $2,000,000 in government securities belonging to the company were tied up.

A change in the Internal Revenue Law in 1933 gave the commissioner authority to review and reduce, eliminate or increase jeopardy assessments.

A revenue official said the assessment was reduced and later eliminated, at the company's request.

He said internal revenue decided there was no longer any necessity for tying up the firm's assets, because it was established that adequate resources existed in the company from which to collect whatever back taxes may finally be levied.

Ransom's talk on "The Critic's Job" will be followed by a panel discussion by Mrs. Newell S. He is director of the Pneumoconiosis Research Unit at Wales, England. Pneumoconiosis is a lung disease often found among persons working in dusty atmospheres.

RAIN LETS BANK ROBBER'S LOOT OUT OF THE BAG

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 29 (AP)—Rain and darkness reduced the confusion late yesterday when a fleeing bank robber littered a city block with $8800 in currency.

He fled the bank with $15,512, but the currency broke through when rain hit the paper bag he used to collect it.

He entered the Broadway branch of the First National Bank near the closing hour, commanded manager Clarence M. Kelley to collect the money from the line of tellers and escaped on foot.

Charles F. Edwards, a truck driver, happened along just after the robber fled and discovered the trail of money.

"I looked at all that money on the sidewalk and I said, 'That ain't real,'" he related.

He called employes of a nearby appliance firm who helped gather up the $8800 and return it to the bank. Bank officers were unable to learn if others picked up bills and kept going.

Predicts Rocket Planes Will Fly New York to London in Hour

McDonnell Engineer Says Rockets Will Have Only Military Applications for Next 15 Years.

Rocket - powered airplanes, capable of making the flight between New York and London in one hour's time, will be developed some time in the next 25 to 50 years, P. Whitson Godfrey, of the McDonnell Aircraft Corp., predicted yesterday.

Godfrey, an aeronautical engineer who has spent the last five years at McDonnell studying the propulsion problems of supersonic missiles, told the Post-Dispatch that for the next 15 years the high-speed rocket would be almost entirely a military tool in its immediate practical application.

By 1970, however, work on the inter-continental ballistic missile and on the sending of passengerless rockets to the moon—now on the horizon—will have developed sufficient know-how in the rocket field so that a rocket-powered flight from New York to London "can be talked about seriously," he said.

Reported IBM Characteristics.

Godfrey said security restrictions prevented discussion of the intercontinental ballistic missile, known as the IBM. Previous reports have described it as a rocket weighing 15 tons or more, reaching a speed of more than 20 times the speed of sound at maximum acceleration, and attaining a height of some 600 miles above the earth.

Developing a rocket which can reach the moon is already "only a matter of money and organization," Godfrey said.

But application of rocket power to commercial air transport requires much additional knowledge of the problems of flying at extremely high speeds and high altitudes, he explained. Both the IBM project and the dispatching of moon - bound rockets will produce "tremendous know-how about the operating characteristics of this type of power," he added.

For the immediate future, Godfrey said, the rocket is largely a military tool because of the high costs of developing rocket engines and the special precautions which must be taken when handling rocket fuels —often highly corrosive, explosive, and poisonous — on the ground.

Not Reliable Enough.

Also, he said, the types of rockets developed so far are not yet reliable enough for peacetime application. An aircraft engine has to start successfully every time, has to deliver a desired thrust, and must be able to be turned off safely.

Rocket engines, Godfrey explained, have not yet achieved these characteristics.

There are a few special exceptions, such as the use of jet boosters to assist aircraft take-offs at the high altitudes of Mexico City, he added.

"But I don't feel that rocket systems would be practical for take-offs at Lambert Field, for example—and most of the airports in this country are not more than 1000 feet above sea level," he added.

Godfrey said rockets were not of immediate practical use "unless you consider war as a practical solution to international disagreements." However, they are already contributing greatly to scientists' study of the higher regions of the earth's atmosphere, he added.

They identified themselves as Miss Gladys Case, 49 years old, and Miss Rose Ann Rury, 43, living in the 9300 block of Manchester road, Rock Hill.

Ferguson police said the women were detected by John Garrone, store manager, and were arrested outside the store. They were wearing heavy denim bloomers, police said, in which they had concealed chickens, pork chops, coffee, cosmetics and other articles.

PHONE WORKERS PLEDGE $101,106 TO UNITED FUND

Southwestern Bell Employes Exceed Their $86,000 Quota by 17 Per Cent.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. employes in St. Louis and St. Louis county pledged $101,106 to the United Fund, exceeding their $86,000 quota by 17 per cent, in an intensive two-week campaign ended yesterday.

Contribution of the company's 6700 employes may be even larger when complete returns are available this week, it was reported. Goal of the United Fund campaign is $8,245,925.

E. C. Smith, the telephone company's division manager, termed the drive "the most successful charitable solicitation our company has ever participated in." He said pledges of more than $92,000 were received within the first six days.

The telephone company's traffic department subscribed 141 per cent of its set quota.

First report meeting of the general United Fund campaign will be Tuesday at noon at Hotel Statler, when the first tabulations of contributions and pledges are to be heard by approximately 450 volunteer workers.

The Rev. Dr. O. Walter Wagner, executive secretary of the Metropolitan Church Federation, will offer an invocation prayer at the meeting. A quartet from Scott Air Force Base will sing, and there will be brief talks by four members of the cast of "The Pajama Game," musical comedy now playing here.

Mrs. Lee I. Niedringhaus, county chairman for the United Fund effort, said three regions of the county reported having exceeded their quotas yesterday. They will continue to solicit funds, however, because of the urgent need, she said.

The Berkeley area, where the drive is headed by Mrs. James W. Kern, obtained pledges and contributions of $1317, or 150 per cent of its quota. A team led by Mrs. Vincent Mahoney reached 720 per cent of the amount it had been asked to obtain.

St. Ann's has raised $1575, or 108 per cent of its goal, while in Shrewsbury pledges and contributions reached $1600, 104 per cent of the set sum. Sheldon Collier is regional chairman for St. Ann's and Mrs. J. H. Spethman for Shrewsbury.

AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY LACKS ENGINEERS, SKILLED WORKERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP) — The Department of Labor estimated today that almost half the aircraft industry is suffering from a shortage of engineers, highly-skilled production workers and managerial personnel.

The department surveyed 194 aircraft and aircraft parts plants employing 95 per cent of the industry's workers. It said almost half reported difficulty obtaining some of the specialized workers they needed, compared to a third in January 1954.

In August, the department said, aircraft plants sent the public employment service orders for 3689 scarce workers —mainly engineers and highly-skilled production workers—to be recruited from other areas. The shortage of workers "almost never impedes production," the department said, but requires more efficient use of workers, overtime work and "intensive recruiting."

NLRB ELECTION ORDERED AT PERFECT CIRCLE PLANTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP) —The National Labor Relations Board today ordered secret elections within the next 30 days to determine whether the CIO United Auto Workers should be ousted as official bargaining agent for workers at three plants of the Perfect Circle Corporation in Indiana.

Acting on a "de-certification" petition filed by non-union employes, the board ordered the separate elections to be held among production and maintenance workers at Perfect Circle's two plants in Richmond, Ind., and its plant at Hagerstown, Ind. The order did not apply to the Perfect Circle plant at Newcastle, Ind., scene of bloody fighting earlier this month.

UAW members have been on strike at all four of the plants since July 25 in a dispute involving demands for a union shop and pay increases.

WOMAN LOSES FOOT, ANKLE IN CORN-LOADING MACHINE

HARDIN, Mo., Oct. 29 (AP)— A 20-year-old farm wife lost her left foot and ankle today when her leg was caught in a corn-loading machine.

The victim, Mrs. Nancy Halterman, was taken to an Excelsior Springs hospital where she was reported in serious condition.

Fellow workers at the scene, the Charlie Thomas farm northwest of Hardin, said it took several minutes to extricate her from the machine which carries the corn from the wagons to the bin.

ALASKA CRASH SURVIVORS SLEPT ON MILK TO THAW IT

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Oct. 29 (UP)—Three men who survived a 6-day ordeal after their plane crash-landed in frozen Alaska wasteland a week ago told today how they battled to keep from freezing and starving to death.

The pilot, Keith Lenhart; Harold N. Brazell, a Western Electric engineer, and R. F. Castling, General Electric engineer told of sitting up for six nights to keep warm. Castling suffered a strained back when the plate hit a snowbank.

They had four sleeping bags and a case of fresh milk. The milk soon froze so each took a quart to bed at night to thaw it out for "breakfast."

CGT OUSTERS END STRIKE THREAT IN ARGENTINA

Workers' Newspaper Warns Firing of Labor Chief May Lead to 'Civil War.'

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 29 (UP)—The government's abrupt dismissal of Peronist union leaders headed off a threatened general strike today.

A "workers' newspaper" warned, however, that the action might lead to civil war.

President Eduardo Lonardi's revolutionary government last night ousted officials of the 2400 member unions of the General Federation of Labor—most of whom owed their jobs to deposed dictator Juan D. Peron—and ordered the unions to elect new officers in four months.

A special committee appointed by the federation ordered workers who were to have walked out today to "remain at their posts, confident that their rights will be protected."

No Trouble Develops.

Police riot trucks and patrol cars were stationed throughout the city but no trouble developed. Public services operated normally, and most employes of private business reported for work as usual.

The labor federation committee was closeted with Labor Minister Luis B. Cerrutti through the day.

The decree dismissing the union officers made the armed forces responsible for the unions until new officers are elected, but provided that "observers" appointed by the labor ministry shall handle routine union affairs.

It also authorized the ministry to appoint special administrators in cases where they are considered necessary.

The newspaper El Lider, Argentina's only remaining Peronist organ, denounced the government's action today as an "attack against the nation itself," amounting to "dissolution of the CGT."

"Dissolution of the CGT — never mind such terms as 'observer' or 'administrator' — means the disintegration of the working class," El Lider said.

Class Hatred.

"Anarchy in labor circles will result in hatred between social levels, and hatred in a community automatically creates an atmosphere favorable to civil war."

The CGT had threatened a general strike in an effort to regain control of unions taken over by anti-Peronist leaders after Peron was overthrown by Lonardi in a revolution last month.

GENEVA BOOMED FOR U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 29 (AP) — Geneva is being boomed as the site of the 1956 United Nations General Assembly. U.N. officials prefer to hold the autumnal assemblies outside the United States in presidential election years.

Paris has been favored in the past but is considered too controversial since France staged a walkout on the U.N. over the North African disputes.

DALE SCHAUFELBERGER NEW PRESIDENT OF MILK GROUP

Milton M. (Mink) Mueller of Highland, Ill., president of Square Deal Milk Producers Association for 19 years, was defeated for re-election yesterday by Dale Schaufelberger of Greenville, who received 292 votes to Mueller's 246. A third candidate, Max Rogier of Highland, got 14 votes. The association met at Breese, Ill.

The new president of the milk marketing co-operative has expressed the intention of seeking members for the Square Deal group among Missouri producers. Membership is now confined to Illinois. Sanitary Milk Producers, largest dairy co-operative in this area, has members in both states.

Mueller served his district as a state representative from 1940 to 1946 and was a state senator from 1946 to 1954, when he was defeated by James O. Monroe, Collinsville editor. He served as chairman of the Senate committee on agriculture. Presidency of the Square Deal organization, formed in 1935, carries a salary of $300 a month.

BOND ISSUE BACKED BY COUNTY C. OF C.

Board Says 8 Propositions Will Enable Area to 'Take a Real Step Forward.'

The proposed $39,712,000 St. Louis county bond issue has received the unanimous indorsement of the board of directors of the St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce, Girard C. Varnum, president, announced yesterday.

Representing about 1000 business firms, industries and individual business men in the county, the chamber's directors reviewed each of the eight propositions to be on the ballot Nov. 22 and said their passage will enable the county "to take a real step forward."

Approval by the board followed similar indorsement of the bond issue by the St. Louis County League of Municipalities which represents elected officials of the 96 municipalities in the county.

One of the points stressed by the Chamber resolution was the fact that the federal and state governments would spend $6.50 for every $1 expended by the county on the three radial expressways listed in one of the propositions.

It was also noted in the resolution that "tax experts estimate the tax rate increase resulting from the entire bond issue will probably not exceed 13 cents on the $100 valuation."

Varnum said the county's population and the number of automobiles using county streets and roads have doubled in the last 15 years.

"The result," he said, "is that there are parts of St. Louis county where traffic moves even more slowly than in the central business district of downtown St. Louis." Traffic forced off inadequate main streets onto residential streets constitutes a growing hazard for children, he added.

"St. Louis county cannot continue to be a booming, prosperous area without the public improvements provided by this bond issue," he said.

'HOT ROD' MOORE CASE IN SUPREME COURT WEDNESDAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 29 —The Missouri Supreme Court en banc will have a hearing Wednesday at which Robert H. (Hot Rod) Moore will seek to get out of jail on a writ of habeas corpus.

The court agreed yesterday to take jurisdiction of the case, and directed service of a writ on Sheriff Arthur C. Mosley of St. Louis county, where Moore is serving a 60-day sentence for a traffic violation.

The question whether the notorius traffic violator must remain in jail will be decided by the Supreme Court after Wednesday's hearing. It could order Moore returned to custody or send the case back to Pike county circuit court for a new trial on appeal.

Moore, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harry G. Moore, 1 Portland place, St. Louis, was convicted for a traffic offense in Glendale. On appeal, the Pike county court upheld the sentence by default, when Moore and his attorneys failed to appear.

PHILIP J. HICKEY NOMINATED

Philip J. Hickey, superintendent of instruction in the St. Louis public school system, is among three school administrators who have received the highest number of votes in a primary ballot for president-elect of the American Association of School Administrators, the association announced yesterday in Washington.

The president-elect will be chosen next month in ballots mailed the group's 10,114 members. Other nominees are Omer Carmichael, superintendent of schools in Louisville, Ky., and C. J. Trillingham, county superintendent of schools, Los Angeles.

SECOND CHICAGO AIRPORT OPEN TO PASSENGER TRAFFIC

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (UP) — Midway airport was given a little more "breathing space" today as Chicago opened its second airport for commercial passenger traffic.

The new terminal — O'Hare Field—was inaugurated during an all-day air show of jet planes. O'Hare Field, on Chicago's far northwest side, will take over 5 per cent of Chicago's commercial passenger traffic beginning tomorrow.

Four airlines — American, Northwest, Trans World and United—are expected to transfer 10 per cent of their schedules from Midway to O'Hare by the end of the year.

FIRED BY UNESCO AWARDED $30,000

Tribunal Upholds Americans Who Refused Loyalty Tests.

GENEVA, Oct. 29 (AP)—The Specialized Agencies Administrative Tribunal ordered the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization today to pay more than $30,000 damages to four American women employes dismissed after refusing to appear before a United States loyalty board in Paris.

The three-member tribunal rejected as "entirely unfounded" the UNESCO claim that the four women's attitude to the loyalty board caused serious damage to the organization, and declared that investigations of the loyalty of international officials by individual governments would, if tolerated, disrupt the administration of international organizations.

The tribunal ordered each of the applicants reinstated and, in case of expected refusal by UNESCO, awarded them compensation equivalent to two years salary plus $300 costs. Their attorney had demanded three years' salary plus a "special indemnity" of $100 for each.

Miss Ruth Froma of New York City, the only professional-grade official among the three, was awarded $11,100, including costs. Mrs. Kathryn Bernstein, the only applicant who did not have a permanent contract, received $7580. Miss Helene van Gelder, New York City, a secretary on the UNESCO staff for seven years, received $7028, and Mrs. Kathryn Pankey, also a secretary, $5864.

The tribunal declared their attitude toward the loyalty board "in no way justifies the existence of serious doubt as to the high standards required by an international official."

Head of Georgetown Alumni.

William P. Carleton Jr., 8 Tuscany park, Clayton, has been elected president of the Georgetown University Alumni Association of St. Louis, it was announced yesterday. Other officers are Henry A. Griesedieck, secretary, and James L. Nouss, treasurer.

UNIVERSITY DROPS EX-RED PROF. FUCHS

He Testified Before House Committee He Once Was Communist.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)—The trustees of American University decided today to drop Prof. Herbert Fuchs, an admitted former Communist, from the school's law faculty.

Fuchs, 50 years old, has been on inactive status with the faculty since he told a congressional committee last summer he once was a Communist.

He did not appear at today's trustee meeting. He said he wasn't invited and didn't ask to attend.

Informed of the trustees' action, Fuchs told a reporter, "I'm just very much disappointed."

Asked whether he had any plans, he replied, "I'll have to think about it."

The trustee board's 10-member executive committee had recommended that Fuchs be dropped when his current contract expires June 30. Meanwhile, he would remain on inactive status with pay, as he has been.

Action Unanimous.

President Hurst R. Anderson of the university issued a statement saying only: "The action of the executive committee on the Fuchs case has been unanimously approved by the board of trustees."

The full board is made up of 50 members, including former President Herbert Hoover.

Fuchs testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in closed door session last June. His testimony has not been released, but committee members said he told of having been active in the Communist party from 1934 to 1946, including membership in three party cells in the Government. Fuchs was quoted as saying he became "disillusioned" and quit the party before he joined the university faculty in 1949.

Committee members said Fuchs at first refused to name others with whom he was associated in Communist activity, but later gave details. Fuchs said last month he gave fuller testimony partly at the urging of university officials.

Had Quit Party.

Not long after Fuchs testified, Anderson said he did not believe a Communist party member should be employed by a university but that it had been established Fuchs had quit the party.

"He made a serious mistake in the past, which he has recognized and declared," Anderson said. "The American University therefore would support his right as a citizen to pursue his chosen professional activities."

Last month, however, Anderson recommended to the executive committee that Fuchs's appointment be allowed to expire next June.

Besides Hoover, prominent board members include Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, Mrs. Alben Barkley, wife of the Kentucky Senator, and Bertha Adkins, head of the women's division of the Republican National Committee.

The university, operated by the Methodist Church, occupies a 76-acre campus in the northwest section of Washington, about five miles from the White House. Its enrollment numbers about 5000 students.

FOUR MORE GROUPS ON SUBVERSIVE LIST

Brownell Names Alleged Pro-Red Organizations —Total Now 279.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP) — Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. has named four more organizations as subversive.

That brings to 279 the number of groups cited in the last eight years by the Attorney General's office and to 87 the number cited by Brownell.

Those listed yesterday were the Elsinore Progressive League, Elsinore, Calif.; Everybody's Committee to Outlaw War, Los Angeles; the Idaho Pension Union, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and the Massachusetts Committee for the Bill of Rights, Boston.

The four organizations were among 27 which Brownell notified in December 1954 that he would designate as subversive. All of the groups were alleged to be Communist-dominated.

Brownell gave the organizations opportunity to contest the designation. He said that the four listed yesterday had filed notice of contest but failed to follow up this action.

SOUTH KOREA DENOUNCES RED PLEA FOR UNITY PARLEY

SEOUL, Oct. 29 (AP)—South Korea today denounced North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung's call for a Far Eastern conference on Korean unification as a "Communist campaign for the extinction of freedom through coexistence."

Government spokesman Hong kee Karl said such a conference "would load the attendance with pro-Communists and neutralist countries, and thus bring pressure on the United States and our United Nation allies to give up their fight for a free, independent and united Korea."

A Pyongyang radio broadcast Thursday said the Communist North Korean boss told an Indian newsman such a conference should represent a "wide area" of Asia.

8 NATIONS OPEN DEFENSE TALKS IN HAWAII TUESDAY

PEARL HARBOR, T.H., Oct. 29 (UP)—Military men of eight nations will meet here Tuesday to plan joint defense strategy against the possibility of future Communist aggression in Southeast Asia.

The 118 staff planners to the military advisers of the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty alliance, will be holding their first meeting on American soil. Adm. Felix B. Stump, Pacific Navy commander-in-chief, will act as host at the three-week session.

The conference will work toward improving the collective defense of the eight nations—the United States, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, Thailand, Pakistan, the Philippines, Australia, and France. Most of the conference will be devoted to the study of eight important phases of joint military efforts which were formulated at meetings in Asia earlier this year.

The treaty binding the eight nations together was signed in Manila in September.

ANOTHER FIRM HIKES PRICE OF NEWSPRINT

Western Canada's Biggest Producer Announces $4 Increase.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 29 (UP)—Western Canada's biggest newsprint producer, the Powell River Co., today hiked its price of newsprint $4 a ton.

The price increase was the latest in a series of newsprint price boosts to Canadian and United States publishers.

M. J. Foley, president of the Powell River Sales Company Limited, said the price would go up $4 a ton for newsprint wound on non-returnable cores and $4.50 a ton for newsprint wound on metal-tipped returnable cores.

Foley added the increase would average out to a 3 per cent hike.

The increase is effective Nov. 15.

Humane Society Officer Loses Pet, Coon Evicted by Mistake

Bonnie Freed in Woods by Conservation Agent After Occupying Snug Home in St. Louis.

Because James Loggins is an officer of the Humane Society of Missouri, he has access to all the dogs and cats anyone would want, but the animal he has long wanted as a pet is a racoon.

Last week he got one that wandered into the city and was found wedged between two buildings in the 900 block of Franklin avenue. It was a female, and he thought so much of her he named her Bonnie, after his sister.

It soon became clear that Bonnie would become a mother before long. Loggins fixed up a snug place for her in a packing crate at the Humane Society shelter, 1219 Macklind avenue.

Yesterday he was away from the shelter for about three hours. When he returned Bonnie was gone. An agent of the State Conservation Commission had stopped for a periodic visit, and a kennel worker, unaware of Loggins's special interest in the raccoon, had given the animal to the agent.

Loggins made a frantic call to Rockwoods reservation to stop the agent from releasing Bonnie, only to learn that she was last seen making her way into the woods.

ACTION TO CUT OFF WATER DISMISSED

Court Reserves Ruling on Sewer Districts in Maline Creek Row.

An application for an order requesting that St. Louis County Water Co. be directed to cut off water to 5000 householders dumping sewage into Maline creek was dismissed yesterday by Circuit Judge Franklin Ferriss at Clayton.

The action eliminated the water company as a defendant in a suit brought by 12 residents of Berkeley and Kinloch, living near Maline creek, against the utility and three sewer districts. Motions to dismiss, argued by the Carsonville and Walton road sewer districts and the Metropolitan Sewer District, were taken under advisement by Judge Ferriss.

At attorney for the plaintiffs argued that the water should be cut off in order to make it impossible for sewage to be carried into the creek. Judge Ferriss upheld a defense argument that the plaintiff's petition failed to state a sufficient cause of action.

The suit seeks an unspecified amount of damages and seeks to enjoin the sewer districts from permitting raw sewage to flow into the creek. This action, the suit stated, continues "to foul and render noxious" the creek water.

Other defense attorneys argued the 12 plaintiffs lacked jurisdiction to sue as individuals. The arguments before Judge Ferriss were heard on a change of venue from Circuit Judge Douglas L. C. Jones after T. Douglas Moore, representing the Walton road district, charged that Judge Jones was "biased and prejudiced."

MAKES 300,000 FAKE COINS, LITTLE ERROR TRIPS HIM UP

CLEVELAND, Oct. 29 (AP)—Accused of manufacturing at least 300,000 bogus coins, a 64-year-old engineer was in jail today. Secret Service agents said "he made one slight mistake and it tripped him up.

Using a 250,000-pound press in Erial, N.J., Francis L. Henning managed to make $5000 worth of nickels that he successfully deposited at banks in Philadelphia and Camden, N.J., and for which he later withdraw genuine money, Cleveland Secret Service Chief R. E. Holmes said.

But Henning forgot that coins minted in Philadtlphia before 1944 bore a letter P on the back. When 1944 coins lacking the letter turned up last June at the Federal Reserve bank there agent got on Henning's trail and he was arrested yesterday on a warrant issued in Philadelphia.

Holmes said Henning, who came here six months ago as a $700-a-month mechanical engineer for a construction firm, had become frightened by newspaper accounts of the discovery of the bad nilckels and dumped $10,000 worth of them into a creek.

PANAMA CANAL CO. REFUND HEARING ORDERED BY COURT

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (UP) — United States District Judge David Edenstein ordered the Panama Canal Co. yesterday to show cause why it should not refund $27,000,000 to 12 United States steamship companies.

The demand for the refund was made by the 12 steamship companies, who contend that the canal company overcharged users of the canal by that sum between 1951 and 1954.

The ship companies based their contention on the audit report of the General Accounting Office. According to law, the Panama Canal Co. is not permitted to show any profit.

DUBLIN STUDENTS COVER LORD NELSON'S STATUE

DUBLIN, Oct. 29 (UP)—Students seized the 134-foot Lord Nelson column in Dublin today and covered the British naval hero's bronze statue with a portrait of an executed Irishman.

More than 10,000 cheering Dubliners watched from busy O'Connell street as the students tried to burn the statue loose with blowtorches, and then unfurled a giant banner bearing the portrait of Kevin Barry. Traffic was snarled for two hours before police overcame the students.

Barry, an 18-year-old medical student, was hanged in 1920 by the then British administration for his part in Irish Republic army action against the British black-and-tan forces.

BOY TURNS IN LOST WALLET AND GETS SCHOOL FREE MOVIE

DETROIT, Oct. 29 (AP)—Bernard Dodyk, 10 years old, found on the street a wallet containing $75 and the credentials of Dr. Walter E. Haduck, an osteopathic physician. The boy turned the wallet over to his teacher at school.

The principal, Sister Marie Henry, called the doctor. He was not yet aware he had lost his wallet, but figured he must have lost it on an emergency sick call.

To show his appreciation, Dr. Haduck gave $20 to provide a free Halloween movie for the 45 children in the boy's fifth grade class at Presentation Roman Catholic School.

MANY ARE POOR DESPITE BOOM, STUDY SHOWS

South, Farms and Non-White Population Main Segments of Low-Income Group.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)—Many Americans are still chronically poor despite general prosperity, a congressional staff report said today. It said this poverty endangers the future economic strength of the nation.

In general, the study pointed to the South, farms, and the non-white population as areas having a disproportionate share of poor folks. But there are depressed areas outside the South, and in cities as well as on the farm.

The report was written by the staff of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, the major economic study group in Congress. It was prepared for a subcommittee, headed by Senator James J. Sparkman (Dem.), Alabama, which from Nov. 18 to 23 will hold hearings on the problems of poverty.

The report was signed by Grover W. Ensley, staff director for the joint committee. Ensley said it was written for the most part by staff economist Eleanor M. Snyder. It drew on statistical studies by a wide range of Government agencies and private organizations.

'Paradox of Modern' Life.

The report called it a "paradox of modern economic society" that there should be in continuing existence, during periods of (generally) full employment, geographic pockets in which chronic unemployment and underemployment are excessively high."

It said that in 1950 the Department of Agriculture estimated there was a farm population of 5,100,000 in areas characterized by "serious low-income problems."

Of the 145 major labor market areas in the country, the report said, 23 were classified by the Bureau of Employment Security as having a "substantial labor surplus" in September 1955. In addition, there were 94 smaller areas with a substantial labor surplus, defined as 6 per cent or more of unemployment.

These economically submerged areas, the report added, will probably continue as time passes to contain relatively more of the low-income group, unless "positive action" is taken to improve their status.

For the most part, the report dealt with developments from 1948 through 1954, spanning the prosperous era between the recessions of 1948-49 and 1953-1954, but beginning and ending with years that were partly in recession times.

Gain in Higher Incomes.

The figures showed that during these seven years the number of the nation's families with high income showed a dramatic gain, but the number with "permanently inadequate economic resources" of up to $2000 income a year showed little improvement.

The gainers from the nation's rising standard of living were the middle income families, with incomes in 1948 of $2000 to $5000.

The low part of this middle income group, with incomes of from $2000 to $3000 in terms of 1948 purchasing power, shrank from 20 to 15 per cent of the nation's families from 1948 through 1954. The next income bracket, from $3000 to $5000, shrank during the same years from 34 to 33 per cent of all families, although this bracket absorbed many newcomers moving up from the $2000 to $3000 group. At the same time, the "over $5000" families increased, from 21 to 30 per cent of all families.

Meanwhile, families with less than $1000 annual income remained at a steady 10 per cent of all families, and families with $1000 to $2000 a year declined only from 15 to 12 per cent.

The study gave the following major characteristics of the chronically poor families:

"Low income families tend to be smaller than those with moderate income" because this group contains many of the lonely aged. But where the low income family is young, families tend to be big, meaning that "low income families carry a disproportionate share of responsibility for rearing the nation's children."

"Broken families (mostly widows with children) are more common in the low-income group."

Lack of Education Cited.

"Seven-tenths of the heads of urban low income families and three-quarters of those in rural areas had not had any formal education."

"More than half the low-income urban families were headed by persons of very limited or no productive effort," such as the retired, students, or housewives.

"Almost half the urban low-income families, and three-fifths of the rural families with low income . . . live in the South.

"About one-sixth of the lowest income group (up to $1000 income a year) are farm operators."

However, the report noted that homegrown food and fuel, available in significant proportions to farmers, is not counted as income by the Census Bureau, the source for the study of low-income family characteristics.

In 1948, the report said, 13 per cent of city families had less than $2000 income, while 35 per cent of farm families were in this plight (not counting their home-produced food and fuel). By 1954, 9 per cent of city families were in the under $2000 class, while 27 per cent of farm families still had less than $2000 cash income.

The report said that a study by the Franklin D. Roosevelt Foundation in 1950 indicated that about 9 per cent of all households had "low economic status" in that year, but that 20 per cent of non-white families in the cities were in this class. On the farm, in the same year, an Agriculture Department study indicated that 80 per cent of non-white families were in the "low income" group, compared with 42 per cent of white farm operators.

CIO Assails Restrictions on Housing Credit.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP)—The CIO criticized the Administration today for taking steps to restrict housing credit. It said at least one out of every three families still needs "a decent home."

In its monthly publication, Economic Outlook, the CIO said "the national housing policy is moving tragically in the wrong direction."

It referred specifically to the "piteous" 45,000-unit public housing program for this year and the tightening of restrictions last July on housing loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration.

The CIO said the country needs 2,000,000 new homes a year for the next 15 years to satisfy present and future requirements.

Instead, it said, the rate of new home building has declined from 1,430,000 units a year last winter to 1,230,000 a year this fall.

Federal housing officials said this week that the credit restrictions probably will be removed if the downward trend in home building continues.

Angler Hooks a Foursome.

CAROLINA BEACH, N. C., Oct. 29 (UP)—Fisherman Raymond Boyd of Durham, N. C., cast a two-hook line and came up with four bluefish. His line had two blues and he snagged another fisherman's line with two bluefish also on the hook.

STASSEN TO FLY TO GENEVA TONIGHT FOR ARMS TALKS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)—Harold E. Stassen, President Eisenhower's special assistant for disarmament, will leave tomorrow night for the Big Four foreign ministers' meeting at Geneva.

The White House said Stassen will fly to Geneva "specifically" for the ministers' forthcoming discussion of disarmament.

Stassen will be accompanied by Director Robert E. Matteson of the President's special study staff, McKay Donkin and Air Force Col. Benjamin G. Willis.

15-POUND MUSHROOM FOUND ON FARM IN MICHIGAN

DEARBORN, Mich., Oct. 29 (AP)—George T. Rudy, a restaurant owner, stumbled across a 15-pound mushroom on a farm in southeastern Michigan. He was hunting squirrels.

The mushroom was 34 inches in diameter and eight inches high.

"I was afraid to pick it up," Rudy said. "It looked like something out of this world. I thought it was a wild animal or something."

AIMEE SCHWEIG WINS ARTISTS' GUILD PRIZE

Reinhardt and Dreher Take Other Awards—Total Is $400.

Aimee Schweig, Mary Institute art teacher, has been awarded the Artists' Guild's $275 purchase prize for her "Still Life With Blue Cloth," one of only 13 paintings accepted for the guild's 1955 oil and sculpture exhibition. The show will open today at 3 p.m. at the guild galleries, 812 Union boulevard.

The $75 second prize went to Siegfried Reinhardt, Washington University School of Fine Arts instructor, for "Symbols No. 2," with third, $50, going to Fred Dreher, John Burroughs School art teacher, for a large hanging mobile, "Plant Forms." Dreher's entry was the sole "sculpture" accepted.

Awards were determined and work was chosen by a two-man jury, David Strout, Kansas City Art Institute director, and Edward Betts, artist who teaches at the University of Illinois.

After rejecting 298 other entries, both out-of-town experts got safely out of town yesterday, but then one — Strout — telephoned from Lambert-St. Louis Field to say he was returning to defend the jury's action in a talk last night at the guild.

In his talk, however, he omitted comment on rejected work, saying the jury action spoke for itself. The public airing of an art controversy, he said, does not in his present opinion advance the cause of art. At one time, he added, he believed otherwise but has had reason in his more recent experience to change this view. Guild speakers indicated general agreement with him.

The show, which will close Nov. 21 includes two paintings by Warren Spaulding of the Washington University art school faculty and one by each of the following:

Louis Bartig, Edward Boccia, Herbert Cummings, Margery Dodson, Arthur Kanak, Daniel Leavitt, Stanley Tasker, Rodney Winfield and Hoot von Zitzewitz.

The show, which leaves one gallery empty and the other only sparsely decorated, is the smallest in the 88-year history of the guild. Once in recent years, however, a guild jury declined to award prizes, on the ground the work was of inferior quality.

FRENCH POSITION TO U.N. UNCHANGED, DIPLOMAT SAYS

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (UP)—Ambassador Herve Alphand, permanent French representative to the United Nations Security Council, said today on his arrival from Paris tha France's "position toward the U.N. has not changed."

Alphand said the French delegation's boycott of the General Assembly will continue although France will participate in other U.N. activities such as the U.N. Security Council, Economic and Social Council, Trusteeship Council and Disarmament Commission.

The French delegation walked out of the General Assembly several weeks ago when its members voted to include the Algerian question on its agenda. France has taken the position that the Algerian affair is a domestic problem.

TRANSLATION BUSINESS OF STUDENT THRIVES

A translation service handling everything from business correspondence in Japanese to personal letters in Estonian is the growing business enterprise of Dan Sacks, a St. Louis University senior, it was announced yesterday.

Sacks started the business last July, offering to translate material from more than 20 languages. He has a staff of approximately 12 interpreters, natives of foreign countries and advanced language students. Business has grown so rapidly that Sacks, majoring in French and speech, believes he can make the work a full-time career when he is graduated in June.

Rates vary depending upon the rarity of the language, length and subject of material to be translated, Sacks explained. Several bills to customers have been near $1000, he said. His office is his home, 21 Ladue Manor lane, Ladue.

In addition to running the business, Sacks, 21 years old, hopes to learn several languages in the next few years. At present he only reads French and Spanish, and has all translating work done by his part-time associates.

CALLS NEW SUPER CARRIER MOST POTENT U.S. WEAPON

A retired reserve rear admiral last night declared the Navy's new super aircraft carrier, Forrestal, equipped with guided missiles and capable of carrying jet planes loaded with atomic bombs, was this country's "most potent" weapon.

Charles L. LaBarge, a St. Louisan and president of the National Reserve Officers' Association, said it was "folly" to suppose the 60,000 ton ship, the Navy's largest, was outmoded and vulnerable.

"The Forrestal is capable of catapulting and landing jet aircraft simultaneously on its 1000-foot long deck which is almost a city block wide," LaBarge said. He addressed members of Navy Post 293 of the American Legion, gathered at the York Hotel to observe Navy day.

EAST SIDE AIRMAN KILLED IN CANADIAN AUTO CRASH

Airman First Class Ernest C. Wright, of 918 Kutter avenue, East St. Louis, was killed yesterday when an automobile in which he was riding hit a utility pole near Hakshaw, New Brunswick, Canada. A second Air Force man was killed and another injured in the accident.

Wright, 26-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wright, was assigned to Loring Air Force Base at Limestone, Me. The accident occurred on Route 2, 25 miles south of Woodstock, N. B. Also dead was Staff Sgt. Felton Williams, 26, of Los Angeles.

Wright, a Negro, joined the Air Force four years ago and intended to make it a career, relatives here said. Besides his parents, survivors include four brothers and seven sisters.

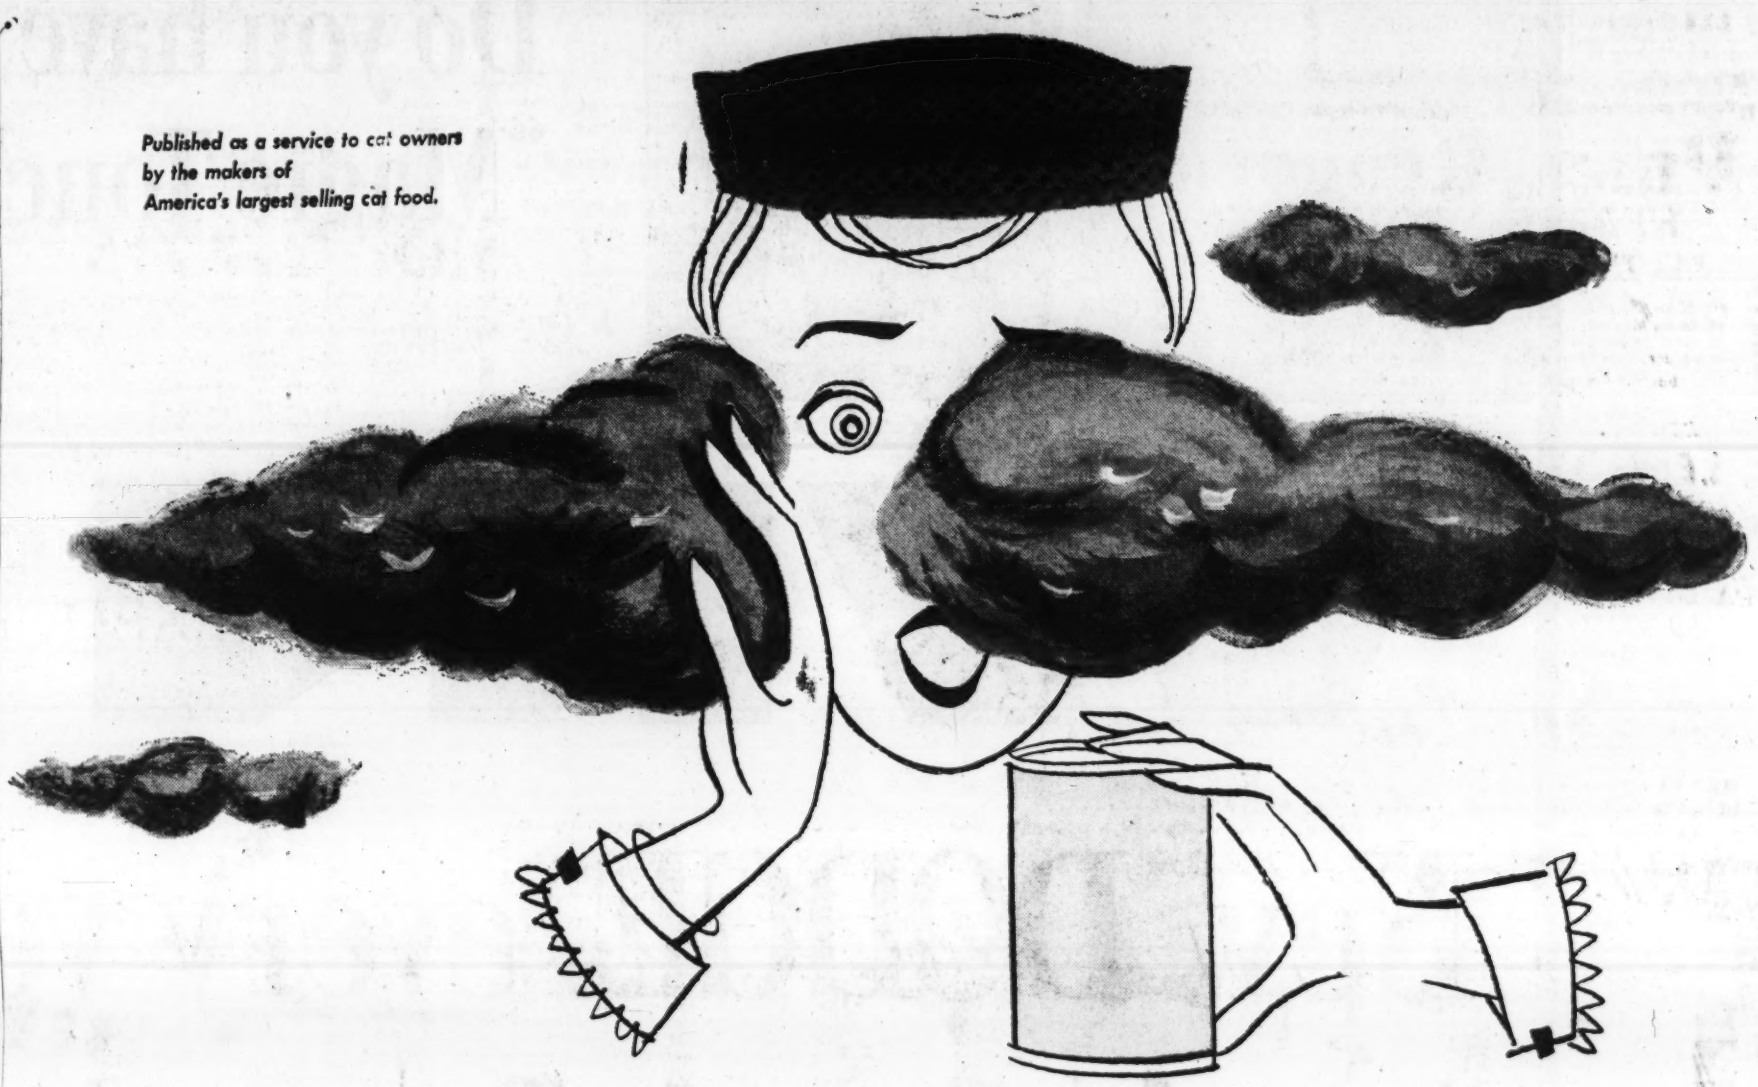
Published as a service to cat owners by the makers of America's largest selling cat food.



let's clear up the confusion about cat foods!

- Does "All Fish" mean the same as "Whole Fish"?
- How does a cat get necessary "vegetable and salad greens"?
- Are meats from the butcher better for your cat?
- Why does Puss 'n Boots Cat Food cost a little more?

● Does "All Fish" mean the same as "Whole Fish"?

Certainly not! "All fish" does not mean "all of the fish." An "all fish" cat food may be made from scraps, such as heads, tails, bone, and other rejected by-products of fish primarily prepared for human consumption.

Whole fish cat food is prepared from all of the fish . . . the fillets with their high-quality proteins, the liver and glands with their precious vitamins and minerals, even the bone structure (made soft and crumbly) with its frame-building calcium.

Puss 'n Boots Cat Food is made from fresh-caught, deep-sea whole fish, processed exclusively for cats!

● How does a cat get necessary "vegetable and salad greens"?

A cat needs vegetable nutrients and greens for all-round nutrition just as much as you need them, but he can't get them the way you do. A cat can't eat a lettuce and tomato salad, or corn on the cob. But he can eat selected cereals, if they are properly chosen and mixed with his food. An "all fish" cat food does not include cereals.

Puss 'n Boots Cat Food contains seven cereals, carefully selected for all-round nutrition. They are mixed with the finely ground whole fish, and the complete food is pressure-cooked in the can.

● Are meats from the butcher better for your cat?

No! Hamburger and liver, for example, are wonderful sources of some vital nutrients, but they are deficient in others. They are fine foods for you, because you supplement them with many other foods. But they do not supply your cat with a balance of all the nutrients he needs.

A cat food made from whole fish contains nature's own life balance of nutrients. Biologists explain that this balance marvelously approaches the balance required by a cat.

● Why does Puss 'n Boots cat food cost a little more?

Actually Puss 'n Boots costs only a cent or two more. But it obviously costs more to catch deep sea fish just for cats . . . to process them whole, just for cats! In the Puss 'n Boots cannery, the protein-laden fillets are not reserved for human consumption; the liver and glands, with their precious vitamins, are not sold for medicinal use. All is retained for your cat . . . because your cat needs all these vital nutrients, in nature's own balance.

Don't short-change your cat!

Start feeding Puss 'n Boots regularly, and in three weeks or less you will see improvement in your cat's playful energy . . . his lovable disposition! Pick up a week's supply of Puss 'n Boots at your food store now! Your money will be gladly refunded, if you are not completely satisfied.

How the Natural Life Balance of WHOLE FISH is retained in Puss 'n Boots

BONE STRUCTURE for calcium and phosphorus for sturdy frame. Made crumbly and digestible, retained in Puss 'n Boots.

FILLETS OR FLESH for proteins that promote growth. Generally reserved for human food, but retained in Puss 'n Boots.

LIVER, GLANDS. For vitamins and minerals. Often extracted for medicinal use, but they are retained in Puss 'n Boots.

Listen to "HOTEL FOR PETS." A delightful radio program, starring Frank McHugh. Monday through Friday afternoons, NBC Radio Network.

3-YEAR-OLD GIRL KILLED IN ELSBERRY (MO.) CRASH

Dinah Rae Serandos, 3 years old, of Louisiana, Mo., was killed yesterday and five other persons were injured when the car in which she was a passenger collided with another automobile yesterday on State Route 79, near Elsberry, Mo. Elsberry is 65 miles north of St. Louis.

The Serandos girl was dead on arrival at St. Joseph Hospital, Kirkwood, where she was transferred from Lincoln County County Memorial Hospital, Troy, Mo. In serious condition at St. Joseph Hospital were her mother, Mrs. Thomas P. Serandos, and a passenger in the second automobile, MarshaH F. Byrd, 1619 North Union boulevard, St. Louis. Both suffered head injuries.

Another Serandos child, Andrew, 2, was held for observation at the Kirkwood hospital, while two others, Thomas, 6, and Deanna Ann, 5, were released after treatment at Troy for minor injuries. Police were unable to identify the driver of the car in which Byrd was believed to have been a passenger.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE UNIT URGED FOR CITY

Crime Commission Director to Make Proposal to Grand Jury.

Formation of an intelligence unit in the St. Louis Police Department will be urged by James W. Connor, operating director of the St. Louis Crime Commission, when he appears by invitation before the circuit court grand jury next month, he said last night.

The grand jury has asked police officials and several other persons to suggest means to prevent a recurrence of conditions which led to the current police pay-off inquiry, resulting so far in indictments against three officers.

"We need in our department a squad of officers whose main duty would be to obtain information on organized crime in the St. Louis area," Connor told the Post-Dispatch.

"They would not only keep informed on such activities as prostitution, narcotics and labor racketeering, but also would maintain dossiers of individuals engaged in these forms of crime.

"The intelligence unit officers would be bound to find out within a short time if there were any crooked cops in the rackets."

Connor said the Los Angeles Police Department has an intelligence unit, which has proved very effective. It reports directly to the chief.

The crime commission's operating director said he also will suggest to the grand jury that applicants for jobs as policemen be "screened" very carefully, and that a high school certificate be a requirement.

Others invited to appear before the grand jury next month told the Post-Dispatch they intended to do so, although they were not prepared to discuss their suggestions at this time.

Included were I. A. Long, Police Board president; H. Sam Priest, former board president; Victor D. Brannon, director of the Governamental Research Institute, and Isaac Gurman, head of the St. Louis Bureau for Men.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—The city has sold its smallest parcel of land in the Bronx. The piece was one by one foot and it netted $55.

SAUDI ARABIA PROTESTS ON SEIZURE OF OASIS

LONDON, Oct. 29 (AP)—Saudi Arabia has formally protested against the occupation of disputed Buraimi oasis by British-led troops.

The foreign office said today the note of protest was handed to Roderick Parkes, Britain's new ambassador in Saudi Arabia. Prime Minister Eden disclosed Wednesday British-led Arab troops had occupied the oasis.

In the summer of 1954 Britain, representing the rulers of Muscat and Abu Dhabi, with whom Britain is bound by treaty, reached agreement with Saudi Arabia that possession of the oasis should be arbitrated. Arbitration broke down recently in Geneva when British, Belgian and Cuban members of the five-man tribunal resigned. Britain said the Saudi Arabian representative was not impartial.

The Saudi Arabian embassy in London said the use of force in the oasis "contradicts the alleged British claim of supporting truth and justice."

Y.M.-Y.W.H.A. MEMBERSHIP DRIVE WILL OPEN TODAY

Membership drive of the Y.M.-Y.W.H.A., 724 Union boulevard, will open today at 9:30 a.m. with a brunch and open house for officials and guests of the real estate, construction, hardware and plumbing divisions of the organization.

The group also has been invited to the regular Sunday meeting of the Health Club at the "Y" at noon. The program will include an address on high blood pressure by a physician who specializes in heart ailments.

The Sunday open house program will continue throughout the membership drive campaign.

Plight of the Farmer.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 29 (INS)—Dan Turner, former governor of Iowa, had this to say about low agricultural prices at a farmers' meeting: "The farmer is being shoved out in the cold night of supply and demand and left to wiggle for himself."

POLICE APPLICANT LETS REALISM CLOUD HIS ANSWER

CENTRAL FALLS, R.I., Oct. 29 (AP)—An applicant for a job as a policeman was asked among other questions: "Upon what is the government of the city of Central Falls based?"

The aspirant wrote: "Politics."

Listed as the correct answer is: "The city charter."

The city's personnel board is studying the matter.

CANADA WARSHIP SEALABLE AGAINST ATOMIC DUST

MONTREAL, Oct. 29 (AP)—The chief of Canada's naval staff said today commissioning of the new-type destroyer escort St. Laurent marks a milestone in Canadian naval development.

V. Adm. E. R. Mainguy said the St. Laurent marks "not only the addition to the fleet of what we consider to be the most modern anti-submarine vessel in the world, but also the coming of age of naval ship design and construction in Canada."

He spoke at commissioning ceremonies at the shipyard of Canadian Vickers, Ltd., where the 2600-ton warship was built, the first of 14 of its class. It has rounded lines, much like those of a submarine, and can be completely sealed in and operated from below decks in case of an atomic dusting.

RAIL UNIONS REJECT WAGE BOOST OFFER

11 Nonoperating Groups Term 10½-Cent-an-Hour Proposal Inadequate.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (AP)—The 800,000 non-operating railroad employes have rejected as inadequate an offer of a wage boost of 10½ cents an hour.

The railroads' proposal of an 8½-cent wage increase and an additional 2 cents per hour to the present employer-contributed 2 cents for a health and welfare program was rejected in mediation sessions by negotiators for the 11 AFL unions.

The offer, made and rejected Thursday, was disclosed today by the unions.

The non-operating workers had asked for a 25-cent general wage increase, effective Sept. 1, above their current average wage of $1.78 an hour, and full payment of health-welfare costs by the employers. At present railroads and workers each pay $3.40 a month for health and welfare insurance.

Also rejected by the unions was a proposal by Francis A. O'Neill Jr. of the National (Railway) Mediation Board that the issues be submitted to arbitration. O'Neill is expected to report to the White House that an emergency exists and recommend appointment of a presidential fact-finding board if Chicago talks break down.

Although the union membership has voted in favor of a strike to support their demands, Jesse Clark, president of the Railroad Signalmen, said, "There will be no strike or threat of a strike as long as the Mediation Board certifies the dispute to the President and asks that an emergency board investigate it."

Daniel R. Loomis, president of the Association of Western Railways and chief negotiator for the carriers, said he had not been informed of the unions' refusal to arbitrate the dispute.

PEIPING INDICATES RELEASE OF 2 U.S. CITIZENS IS NEAR

TOKYO (Sunday), Oct. 30 (AP)—The Peiping radio indicated today that release is near for two Americans for whom a fruitless vigil has been kept at the Hong Kong border for two days.

For the first time, the Red radio mentioned Harriet C. Mills of New York City, and the Rev. Armand Proulx of Lowell, Mass. This is a necessary step in Red procedure followed so far before an American convicted of "crimes" is released.

The State Department said Thursday it had been advised the Peiping regime had agreed to free the two — first of 19 Americans in Chinese jails to be released under the Geneva agreement of six weeks ago.

Peiping said the two had been "found guilty of crimes committed in China" but "in view of their moderately good conduct while serving their sentences, the court has now decided to release them from China."

The United States consulate in Hong Kong has been watching for them.

PERJURY CHARGE AGAINST EX-G.O.P. LEADER DROPPED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (AP)—The Government has dropped a two-year-old perjury indictment against Warren L. Stephenson, former District of Columbia Republican leader who was executive secretary of the Eisenhower inaugural committee.

As an outgrowth of a congressional inquiry into influence peddling Stephenson was accused of swearing falsely in denying that he sought a $2000-a-month fee if a California manufacturer obtained a Navy contract.

Assistant United States Attorney Edward Troxell asked Federal Judge James W. Morris to dismiss the indictment because another jurist had ruled out use of a telephone recording on which the Government was relying for evidence. The request was granted.

ODD BRIDAL BLISS---NEITHER CAN UNDERSTAND THE OTHER

BRIGHTON, England, Oct. 29 (AP)—Pedro Santiago Operti of Argentina and Rita Clare of England were married today. Neither can understand a word the other says.

Operti is the 26-year-old second engineer of the freighter General Las Herras. Rita is a pretty 19-year-old blond waitress. He speaks and understands only Spanish, she English.

They met two months ago when Pedro dropped in at a cafe where she worked. He asked an English-speaking shipmate to make a date. Rita's bridesmaid was Lita Shaw, a shipping clerk who acted as interpreter during the courtship and during the marriage ceremony. Pedro's ship is due to sail on Tuesday. Rita hopes her papers will be ready in time to go with him.

Suess got face cuts and a chest injury. His passenger, James E. Nelson of Detroit, suffered a possible broken nose and face cuts.

Administration Gambling With 178 Electoral Votes on Farm Policies

Some G.O.P. Leaders Dismayed by Eisenhower's Statement of Support for Secretary Benson.

Republicans Said to Fear Loss of as Many as 17 Midwestern States in 1956.

By SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 29.

WHEN President Eisenhower announced his approval of Secretary of Agriculture Benson's flexible farm price support program at Denver tonight, many Midwest Republicans leaders were dismayed. Some expressed the opinion that as many as 178 electoral votes in 17 states will be jeopardized next year.

The President's statement making it clear that he was backing Benson and his program "100 per cent" followed a White House denial yesterday of reports that there was a split in the Cabinet over the farm program and that an attempt to oust Benson was being made by Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, Attorney General Herbert Brownell and Presidential Assistant Harold E. Stassen.

Summerfield, former Republican National Committee chairman, went to Denver today with Benson and will confer with Mr. Eisenhower on Monday. Also on the same plane were the President's brother, Dr. Milton Eisenhower of Pennsylvania State University, who was present during the conference in the President's room at Fitzsimons Army Hospital.

A six-point program that Benson submitted to the President and which was approved by him was stated only in the broadest and most general terms. It will be submitted to Congress in January in a special message.

As a result of the President's pledge of support to Benson, whose resignation has been demanded by many farm groups, it would appear that the price support issue in next year's election is clear-cut. Democratic leaders have declared for firm supports at 90 per cent of parity, and numerous high-ranking Republicans have also indorsed that plan.

Benson's summons to Denver was highly significant in view of the fact that President Eisenhower, by orders of his physicians following his heart attack Sept. 24, has been forbidden to hold conferences on controversial subjects.

The President always has stood firmly behind Benson, but the cost-price squeeze on the farmer has become more acute and the pressure of Republican politicians to force Benson to do something about it has become much greater since the President was stricken.

WORD OF WHAT THE party leaders outside their own circle prefer to call "unrest" among the corn-hog farmers was sent to Sherman Adams, presidential assistant at Denver, and to Milton Eisenhower nearly a month ago.

The President usually follows the counsel of his younger brother on farm questions. During the Hoover administration, Milton Eisenhower was an "information specialist" in the Department of Agriculture and he continued to serve under Henry A. Wallace during New Deal days, helping to promote the plan under which farmers were paid for taking land out of production.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon conferred with the President at Denver Oct. 8 and 9 after flying there from Washington with Adams. Milton Eisenhower visited the President Oct. 12 and flew back to Washington with Adams.

The next day Nixon and Benson had a conference on farm prices after which Benson announced that Nixon and all members of the cabinet were "solidly behind the Administration's farm program" including the flexible price support system.

Last Monday Benson announced an $85,000,000 pork and lard buying program which would extend through next August. It was described by some farm experts as "a drop in the bucket," equal to about two days' run during the heavy marketing season.

Nixon and Benson met again last Wednesday and cancellation of Benson's plans for a trip to Europe to find markets for surplus farm products was announced.

THE 17 STATES ABOUT which Republican politicians are particularly concerned are Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Michigan, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Their's may be an extreme view since several have substantial urban populations, but the farm vote there is large enough to weight a close decision. Furthermore, many of the 17 states are normally Republican. The total of 178 electoral votes is two-thirds of the 266 necessary to elect a President.

President Eisenhower carried each of these states as Franklin Roosevelt had done in 1932 and 1936. In 1940, Roosevelt carried nine states with 115 votes against Wendell L. Willkie with eight states and 74 votes. In 1944, Roosevelt carried seven states and Thomas E. Dewey 10, each receiving 91 votes from these states.

But it is Harry S. Truman's performance in 1948, when there was a grain storage issue, that has stuck in the mind of farm belt Republican leaders who are reconciling themselves to the belief that they won't have personally popular President Eisenhower to tow their tickets next year.

Truman won 11 of the states in question with 128 electoral votes; Dewey, who had taken the farm belt for granted, carried six states for 54 votes.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE BENSON announcing the Government's $85,000,000 pork and lard buying program which drew immediate criticism as "only a drop in the bucket" toward solution of the farmers' plight.

WHAT IS MADDENING to Republican politicians is statements from Benson contending that politicians were exaggerating the plight of the farmer and "kicking up a storm without a cause."

He fails to realize, they say, that the complaints are coming from Republicans in far greater numbers than from Democrats.

Long before Gallup Poll results were announced last week, the trend was obvious. The poll showed the mid-west 3 to 1 against the Administration's farm policies and 2½ to 1 in disapproving the way Benson had been handling the job.

Another Gallup study, in which those questioned were asked which party they thought "best serves the interests of people in your line of work," showed the following results from farmers: Democratic, 55 per cent; Republican 17; no difference or no opinion, 28.

When the same question was asked in April, 1952, the report showed: Democratic, 50 per cent; Republican, 28, no difference or no opinion, 22. Other factors affecting voters' choices, of course, are the popularity of candidates and the campaign issues.

Two months ago a spontaneous protest movement sprouted in heavily Republican southwest Iowa and spread into Missouri, Nebraska, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Illinois. It called itself the National Farm Organization.

Speakers in crowded sales barns, school houses and courthouses evoked prolonged cheers when they called for Benson's resignation and the restoration of rigid price supports at 100 per cent of parity to give the farmer his "fair share" of the national prosperity.

There have been no professional organizers or agitators and the loosely-knit organization set up with headquarters at Corning, Ia., with volunteer help has enthusiasm but no high pressure atmosphere.

It receives frequent calls for speakers such as former Gov. Daniel Webster Turner of Corning, a quiet-spoken, dignified farmer who, at 78, still rides his horse over his 2000-acre farm. He is a Republican.

Another speaker in demand at organization meetings is former Gov. N. G. Kraschel, a Democrat.

MEMBERSHIP IN THE National Farmers Organization cuts across all political lines and those of other affiliations, the speakers emphasize. It includes Republicans and Democrats and many members of the Grange and the Farm Bureau Federation, which have looked with favor on flexible farm price supports.

The National Farm Organization, it was explained, isn't going into competition with the older farm groups. Its purpose is to elect Congressmen and other officials who will be responsive to their demands for high rigid price supports.

"The protest movement that seems to be sweeping across Iowa and Northern Missouri," Fred V. Heinkel, president of the Missouri Farmers' Association, said, "is explainable by reference to statistics showing how the farmer has fared in comparison with the rest of the economy."

Comparing 1955 with 1952, he said farmers' net income was down 23 per cent while prices received by farmers were down 19 per cent.

"On the other hand," he went on, "everybody else is prospering. Dividends were up 19 per cent; stock prices, 62; corporate profits before taxes, 18; corporate profits after taxes, 32; factory workers' weekly earnings, 13, and the average person's income after taxes, 14."

A 2 per cent drop in the prices farmers received for crops and livestock in the month ended Oct. 15 was announced yesterday by the Department of Agriculture. This put prices 5 per cent below the figure for a year ago. Also, farmers' costs for the things they must buy rose ⅓ of 1 per cent during the month.

Farmers' earnings as of Oct. 15 were 82 per cent of parity compared with 84 on Sept. 15 and 87 a year ago.

AS HOG PRICES CONTINUED to decline, Gov. Leo A. Hoegh of Iowa asked Republican governors of seven other midwestern states to meet with him here to "plan bold action now to save the farm." No Democratic farmers were invited. The Republican governors made no bones about it; the meeting was for the purpose of repairing political fences for next year's election.

Governors of South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska and Indiana attended and representatives of Illinois, Wyoming and Wisconsin were present.

Governor Joe Foss of South Dakota, who shot down 26 Japanese planes in World War II, declared for 90 to 100 per cent firm price supports just like the Democrats and the National Farm Organization boys down in Republican southern Iowa.

Even Gov. Fred Hall of Kansas said he didn't fear a little expediency; after all this meeting was called "looking to 1956." He thought 90 per cent of parity for hogs would be a good expedient.

Gov. Victor Anderson of Nebraska, who praised Benson in a speech, also carried copies of the final resolutions of the conference back and forth from the room of Fred Seaton, deputy assistant to President Eisenhower, until they at last were typed in their final innocuous phrases.

The resolutions "recognized the urgent farm price squeeze the farmers are facing today," and "urged" the establishment of a purchasing and support program of farm commodities "for use and not for destruction," as well as adoption of "short-term emergency measures to restore to the farmer his fair share of the national income."

Congressman Ben Jensen of Exira, Ia., a Republican who also attended the Republican governors' conference, engaged in a little controversy with Earl Butz, assistant Secretary of Agriculture, who was sent to the meeting in place of Benson who was too busy to attend.

Butz told the meeting that the Administration was considering the modest pork-buying program, announcement of which was delayed until last Monday, 10 days later.

Jensen asserted that Butz left the impression that only $85,000,000 was available for hog buying. He declared that $2,500,000,000 was available for price support.

Benson, in announcing the program without enthusiasm, readily agreed that he did not know whether it would help hog prices which had sunk to an 11-year low.

He blamed the low market on the Democrats and the hogs. The price had started down because the Democrats had set up rigid 90 per cent of parity controls until this year. They had continued downward, he charged, because the last three pig crops were 9 to 12 per cent larger than normal.

SENATOR EDWARD J. THYE of Minnesota, a Republican, said: "They should have been buying 10 days or two weeks ago."

Another unhappy Republican was Senator Milton R. Young of North Dakota who said that feed grain prices also should have been strengthened to prevent a tendency to expand hog production.

Fred Stover of the Iowa Farmers' Union declared the action was "entirely too little and too late," while E. Howard Hill, president of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation said he was "glad they're moving on it; this is a good move."

The Senate Committee was told at its Des Moines session by H. E. Slusher, Missouri Farm Bureau Federation president that "the current farm program isn't working." He urged the committee to "take every opportunity to encourage the efficient farmer and discourage the inefficient."

Joining with Hill, he approved a proposal to provide federal rent subsidies to farmers who put surplus-producing

Round 2 at Geneva Testing Patience and Persistence Of West vs. Soviet Guile

Real Russian Object Believed to Be to Insert Themselves to Stay in the Middle East—Red Timing Apparent in Crisis Over Czech Arms for Egypt —Israel Talks of a Preventive War.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
Copyright, 1955, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.

GENEVA, Oct. 29.

THE second round at Geneva promises to be not so much a test of whether a peace can be concluded with the Soviet Union as a trial of the patience, the persistence and the resourcefulness of the West in this newest encounter with the East.

Russia wants a peace, but a peace on its own terms and those terms which mean the dismantling of the North Atlantic alliance are wholly unacceptable to the West. The goal of America, France and Britain becomes therefore to demonstrate to the world that they are willing to go a long way to meet Russia's demands for security, if only the Russians will yield a little on the reunification of Germany, which the West considers essential to lasting peace.

In this context, it is likely to develop quickly into a propaganda contest resembling not so much the determined sweetness and light of last summer and the Summit conference as the long struggle between East and West that took place in Berlin in the winter of 1954.

This does not mean that it will end with the two sides facing each other with drawn bayonets across opposed positions. The West is saying that if only the Russians will agree in principle to the need to reunify Germany on the basis of free elections, then the problem can be passed on at the end of the conference to working groups that will eventually translate the principles into practical steps to be approved at a later conference by the four foreign ministers.

THIS HOPEFUL TONE may be partly a reflection of the necessities of politics back home. Vice President Nixon, in his speech to the Herald Tribune Forum, made it clear that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was going to Geneva to advance one stage further the peace that President Eisenhower, and incidentally the Republican party, are laboring to bring to suffering humanity.

This puts Dulles in a somewhat awkward position. If Geneva No. 2 does not advance the cause of peace, but retards it, then where will the blame lie? Obviously on Dulles for nullifying the splendid beginning made by the President in July. Without the magic name of Eisenhower at the head of the Republican ticket, the slogan of peace and prosperity becomes an even more urgent necessity.

The draft of a security treaty including a reunified Germany put before the conference by the Western Big Three is the opening gun in the propaganda contest. With its five phases progressively tightening the guarantees for a free Germany with arms supervision and control it is meant to answer all the fears that Moscow alleges as the reason for opposing the reunion of the two halves of divided Germany.

The proposal for a security treaty put forward by the Soviet is equally uncompromising in that it calls once again for the dissolution of NATO within two or three years after the coming into being of an all-European pact. In return, the Communists will dissolve the Warsaw alliance.

This is, of course, convenient fiction, since the satellite states that are signatories of the Warsaw pact are not sovereign states and their military establishments are dominated by Moscow.

The West has repeatedly said that NATO was not negotiable. It is impossible at this stage to see how there can be any reconciliation of the opposing views. Even discussion seems to be ruled out on the major points of the agenda and how the conference can move off this dead center it is difficult to see since the disarmament issue has been similarly stalemated in the United Nations Disarmament Commission.

There is little left to talk about except the contacts between East and West and that subject is to be referred to experts on each delegation who will be instructed to report back to the foreign ministers toward the end of their session at Geneva.

As for Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, in his opening statement he repeated firmly, although without the oratorical abusiveness of the cold war era, the Soviet opposition to the position of the West. That same opposition was voiced openly by Marshal Nikolai Bulganin at the end of the Summit conference, thus belying the harmonious words of the final directive which instructed the foreign ministers at their meeting to join the problems of German reunification and European security.

In the three months that have intervened, it has been repeated again and again so that no one can mistake the Soviet determination to have a united Germany only on Soviet terms—that is to say a neutralized Germany oriented in the direction of Moscow.

On disarmament, Molotov's negative seemed to cover more ground than did Bulganin in his letter to Mr. Eisenhower. It appeared to reject inspection although it did not specifically veto the President's proposal for mutual reconnaissance and exchange of military blueprints. It repeated the familiar Soviet demand for prohibition of nuclear weapons as the beginning of any disarmament.

MOLOTOV WILL BEND every effort to keep the conferees talking about a security pact. By putting forward a detailed proposal which he can discuss indefinitely, the West has provided grist for the Molotov mill. What he wants, of course, is to concentrate on a pact to such an extent that German reunification is lost sight of.

The Russians' real objective at this conference may be to inject themselves into the Middle East in such a way that the West cannot keep them out. The belief is growing here that the sale of arms to Egypt by Czechoslovakia was timed to precipitate a crisis just as Geneva round two was beginning. If it was deliberately timed for that purpose it has succeeded brilliantly. The British are thoroughly alarmed and the Israeli Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Moshe Sharrett have been talking in private with an almost desperate urgency of the possibility of preventive war before Egypt can outstrip Israel in an arms race.

The pressures on America will be very great, particularly with a presidential election just a year away.

What if Molotov, against this background of crisis and near panic, steps forward and blandly offers to join the West in a security pact guaranteeing both the Arab and Israeli borders? Among those at Geneva who know Russia best, there is the belief that this is precisely what the Soviet Foreign Minister means to do. He could say that the Soviet Union was prepared to join in the guarantee given by the three Western powers to Israel in the pact of 1950.

THE WEST WOULD WANT to decline with thanks, but that might be hard to do in view of the alarm in Israel. The Russian goal would be to extend such a neutrality pact to take in those Arab countries —Iraq and Iran—that have joined in a security alliance with Britain, Turkey and Pakistan. It would, in other words, be a shrewd maneuver to neutralize the eastern anchor of the NATO alliance. With the bitter animosity between Greece and Turkey and Greece and Britain over the Cyprus issue that anchor is weak enough already.

Even on the last item of the agenda —contacts between East and West—Molotov has already shown his determination to get what the Communist bloc wants. Exchanges of cultural groups, ballet dancers and chess players, are all right, he has said in effect, but what we really want is unrestricted trade. This would mean lifting the Western bar on strategic goods.

The West, or at any rate the United States, can hardly agree to that. To do so would mean supplying the Communist states with the kind of machines that would immediately begin to increase their war-making capacity.

For a variety of reasons, therefore, Geneva No. 2 is not likely to revert to the exchange of hostilities that formerly characterized meetings between East and West.

The words are polite, but they do not conceal the fundamental differences. It is quite possible that the final communique will be dressed up in the same polite language. The Russians have no reason to be dissatisfied with things as they are.

In fact, they are doing very nicely at the new stand under the banner of peace and harmony.

Israelis Are Hoping for Peace, but Girding for War

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Retired)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.

SIX shipments of arms from Czechoslovakia have landed in Egypt since the agreement to supply Communist arms to that country. Israeli authorities fear that Communist tanks, heavy artillery and MIG fighters will overcome the slight military advantage that now rests with this little Jewish island with a population of 1,700,000 surrounded by a sea of Arabs numbering 44,000,000.

Premier and Foreign Minister Moshe Sharrett, when asked in Geneva Thursday whether Israel would launch a preventive war—this had been urged by Menachem Begin, leader of the second largest political party in Israel—replied: "I hope to God that Israel will not be driven to do this—to what might appear to be a short cut to the solution of our grave problem."

Then he added: "The danger is not of Israel launching a preventive war. The danger is of Israel again being the subject of wanton aggression."

NEITHER THE ARAB STATES nor Israel wants the war that may flame in the Near East at any moment. Israel needs a peace to proceed with the development of its industry and agriculture. The Arab states know that they would be defeated today in a war with Israel.

Israeli officials fear that even if they won a war it would only harden the hatred of the Arabs toward Israel and confirm their fear that Israel was aggressive in its intentions. In the long run they can see little chance that the small population of Israel can continue to defend itself against a hostile population superiority of more than 25 to 1.

Israel requires two years of military service for all citizens, male and female. These go into the reserve which is well organized and can be completely mobilized in 48 hours. Military training is also used as a school for the new citizens immigrating into Israel. Although the standing army of Israel is small, it can almost overnight have 240,000 men under arms.

The Arab states have no such effective system of reserves, but have larger standing forces. These are approximately:

Egypt	100,000
Iraq	60,000
Syria	40,000
Jordan	20,000
Lebanon	5,000
Saudi Arabia	15,000

It is doubtful today that Iraq would join in war against Israel without some particular provocation. Iraq and Israel have no common border and Egypt and Iraq are competing for a position of leadership among the Arab states.

THE ARAB STATES are far more wealthy than Israel, being the beneficiaries of Western exploitation of their oil resources. But their governments are feudal and disorganized. Their transportation facilities cannot maintain large forces today in a war against Israel. In time, all this can change and the Arab states might be able to support a war of some duration and intensity.

But when Israel mobilizes its reserves, they constitute such a large proportion of the population that economic life comes to a standstill. Israel cannot support a long drawn-out war.

In training, leadership and determination, the Israeli forces are far superior to the Arab today. This does not mean, though, that the Arabs cannot be brought up to a comparable state of efficiency.

This is one of the great dangers that Israel sees in the import of Communist armaments. Although Prime Minister Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt has declared that no technicians or instructors will come to Egypt with the Czech arms, he has not said that Egyptian officers and technicians will not go to Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union for training.

Neither has he said anything about the millions of Arabs under Soviet rule who could infiltrate into Egypt and train and indoctrinate the Egyptian army. Such stooges are prepared by the Russians to operate in Egypt just as Siberian Koreans were available to form the nucleus of the North Korean army.

If either Israel or Egypt wants war, the occasions are innumerable. The Arab states keep the Palestine refugees, supported by the United Nations, in camps on the borders of the homes and lands they once owned. Raids are inevitable and frequent.

The Israel border is so long — about 8000 miles due to the vagaries of the armistice line—that if the whole population were placed to guard the border they could provide only one person to every eight yards. It is impossible for the Israeli army to guard the entire border and to protect the farmers against raids.

THE RECOURSE IS THE LAW of the desert—retaliation. Israel officially has announced that it will retaliate against raids. Spokesman argue that this is the only way in which they can be prevented. This is probably true. Recent retaliatory actions have been directed against Egyptian and Syrian military posts and not against civilians.

While the mere presence of the state of Israel is a cause of war to the Arabs, Egypt in particular is providing Israel with definite occasions for military action.

The principal of these is the Egyptian blockade of Elath, the port on the gulf of Akabah, which leads to the Red Sea. Israel expected and planned to use this valuable port for its fisheries and for trade with Asia, the Far East and Africa.

Egypt has mounted signs on the two small islands of Tiran and Serifia, outside the port, and closed it to Israel. This is illegal in every sense except the unwillingness of the Arabs to recognize that Israel exists as a nation. Israel intends to open this port.

A second cause for war with Egypt is the blockade of shipping to Israel maintained by Egypt through the Suez Canal. This is contrary to the Suez Canal agreement and the Security Council of the United Nations has asked Egypt to cease its blockade.

A third eventuality that may cause war can arise from the disagreement over the development of the waters of the Jordan for irrigation. If the Arab states do not agree to the development proposal of Eric Johnston, Israel will proceed with its own scheme of development and will protect the work with troops.

A fourth possibility would be a renewal of the operations of Arab murder and

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Help Where Needed

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The current boasts of full employment and peak production tend to obscure the depressed conditions existing in many communities. In many of them this condition has existed for several years, and we have economic famine amidst plenty.

It is a distress born of declining industries, depleted mining resources, lack of industrial diversification, seasonal activities, and the closing of defense activities.

We must give this problem our attention so that all parts of our country may have the opportunity for reasonably full employment.

In August physical output was higher than it had been during the peak month of 1953. But there were about a million more unemployed than there had been then. In fact, out of 149 "major" labor market areas surveyed in July, there were 19 where unemployment was between 6 and 9 per cent.

In five areas it was between 9 and 12 per cent while in seven areas it was over 12 per cent. There were 101 "minor" labor market areas where there was a "substantial labor surplus," namely where the unemployed were more than 6 per cent of the working force.

The problem is widespread. It includes textile centers of New England and New York, railway and coal centers of Pennsylvania, and the coal region from West Virginia into Kentucky, and our own southern Illinois.

Unfortunately, our Illinois communities south of Route 40 and particularly south of Route 50 are among those hardest hit. This has crippled the lives of tens of thousands of our best citizens. It has done so through no fault of their own. Employment and income have shriveled away, and this has hurt everyone.

With no prospects of revival from other sources, I do not believe that the Government can be indifferent to this calamity. The Government helps people in trouble from drouths and floods. I believe it should act in these other disasters.

One of the features of any such program of help is the construction of useful public works. Congressman Gray and I have already been successful in getting an appropriation of $1,000,000 to start the construction of Devil's Kitchen lake, and work on this should start in a few months. We will try to get others.

But a wide and adequately financed general program is needed. I have therefore drafted and introduced a Depressed Areas Bill (S. 2663) and have obtained the sponsorship of a number of other Senators for it. It seeks to have the Government help communities and individuals trying to help themselves.

It creates a Depressed Areas Administration, co-ordinates the activities of the major offices of the Government which could deal with this problem, and provides for local industrial committees such as those which have been developed in southern Illinois. It provides for the construction of needed public works such as water supplies, sewage systems, hospitals, roads.

It also aims to encourage new industries by rapid tax write-offs and by loans up to two-thirds of the cost.

It also provides for training classes to develop skills among the unemployed and extends the benefit period under unemployment insurance an additional 13 weeks. There is also a provision for greater supplies of processed food for home and institutional use where it is needed.

I believe that such a measure is really needed and is constructive for the nation as well as for these hard-hit areas. Hearings will be started on it in January before a committee of which I am chairman. It can only be passed, however, if the public shows a real interest in it.

I am glad to read the announcement made at Denver by Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. I take it that the Eisenhower Administration will now back my bill, and I of course will welcome the Administration's support. I only hope that the Administration may be successful in persuading the stubborn reactionaries in its party to do likewise and really put this program into operation—and not to leave it as a mere slogan to influence the events of 1956.

I trust it is not unkind to point out that the Administration at long last is now promising to do what leaders of its party accused some of us Democrats of being "gloomers and doomers" for proposing a year ago.

I hope your readers, particularly in southern Illinois will think this plan over and, if they approve, give us their help. PAUL H. DOUGLAS.

United States Senator from Illinois.

Big Oil on the Move

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A very bad omen for the Democrats is the indication that some of them are trying to play footsie with the big oil men again. We common people have had a belly full of that in the past and present administrations.

We hear that some of the oil politicians are saying they have the money to defeat any presidential candidate not favorable to oil interests. Looks like we have an almighty-dollar government instead of a democratic one. DOC DUNCAN.

The Legion Goes It Alone

Most Americans know the American Legion well for its playgrounds and pools, sports programs, good citizenship awards, aid to the Scouts, boys' and girls' towns and other fine work at the community level.

It is a long climb, however, from the neighborhood Legion post through the state departments and districts to the national headquarters in Indianapolis. The national Legion has its own foreign policy and its own domestic policy. And since the Legion has prestige and influence, these policies deserve to be better understood, and may be illustrated in case after case.

Case 1. The Legion's national convention in Miami this month urged the United States to withdraw from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, but to stay in the United Nations itself. Thus the Legion disowned a thorough report from a committee led by former Legion National Commander Ray Murphy which exonerated UNESCO of every charge except that it was international.

Case 2: The same convention urged further congressional investigation of tax-exempt foundations. This was aimed at the Fund for the Republic, established by the Ford Foundation to study the Constitution and civil liberties. Seaborn Collins, previous National Commander, charged that the Fund, "by shrewd grants and expenditures, is threatening and may succeed in crippling the national security."

Case 3: The Legion's Illinois department, a source of many absurdities, found last year that the Girl Scout handbook showed "un-American influences" because it "gives the United Nations and one-world citizenship precedence over American citizenship." The national convention later accepted this unusual assertion, along with "corrections" in the handbook.

Case 4: Legion conventions have repeatedly demanded congressional investigation of the American Civil Liberties Union, which has defended the legal rights of citizens of every viewpoint. The A.C.L.U. in turn raised a good point in Americanism when it urged the Legion to "learn how to oppose what a man says while defending his constitutional right to say it."

Case 5: Another favorite target of the national Legion has been Consumers' Union, whose service of testing commercial products for consumers has somehow been considered dangerous.

Case 6: The Legion executive committee, following the path of the isolationists in the Senate, indorsed the Bricker amendment to restrict the President's conduct of foreign policy.

Case 7: The national convention carried the "go-it-alone" theory to its ultimate conclusion last year by questioning whether the Eisenhower Administration might be substituting "massive appeasement" for "massive retaliation." As a foreign policy declaration, this was a massive misuse of words.

Case 8: The Legion also went on record for giving more funds to the McCarthy investigation, and for outlawing the Communist party. Thus in its private war on Communism the national Legion went much farther than the Administration, Justice Department, FBI or Subversive Activities Control Board.

Individually these cases may appear to be a kind of aberration from national thinking, as reflected in our representative government. But taken together the eight cases do show consistency.

In each the Legion's top echelon has gone along with the right-wing extremists found in both political parties. It is following a stratospheric nationalism which is unlikely to put America first but could certainly put her alone in the world. And the Legion leadership wraps its attacks on fundamentals of foreign policy or institutions which meet with disfavor in a self-addressed package of purest patriotism.

Assuredly the American Legion has a right to speak out or to cry out on any subject. But can so many positions taken without regard to fact or national policy really have the support of most Legionnaires, or of many Americans?

Twilight for a Maharajah

It is the dashahara, the time of the autumn harvest, in India and all the nation is celebrating the Festival of the Ten Nights. Bulls and goats are being sacrificed to the Goddess Kali in the 10,000 temples of Bengal. Huge effigies of the Demon Ravana are being burned in Central India to celebrate his death at the hands of Rama, the god hero. But the most colorful celebration of all this year is at Mysore, ancient capital of the State of Mysore.

It is the last time that the State of Mysore will be able to celebrate since it is to be swallowed up shortly and replaced on the map by Karnataka as a part of India's plan to cut the number of states from 29 to 16. The Maharajah of Mysore never again will be able to hold a state durbar. So every evening, after the seventh Maharajah of Mysore circles his gold and emerald peacock throne at sunset and bows thrice to his gods, a million lights flash on to silhouette the capital against the sky. A thousand martial musicians play thunderously. Thirty thousand citizens of Mysore watch the sword dancers, clowns and royal elephants perform. They see the pageantry of princely India flaring for the last time in Mysore.

Thus passes some of the full scarlet pomp of old India. The Maharajahs do not like it nor do those who love princely spectacles. But under enlightened India it should mean more bread just as it means less circus.

Log Cabin to Legend

As every red-blooded American boy knows, the best place for the birth of Presidents and baseball players is a log cabin, and there are not many left, either log cabins or Presidents and ball players born in them. One of the last to go was Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, who was born 85 years ago in a cabin in Vernon county, Mo.

Mr. Griffith spent 69 years in baseball. As a pitcher, in the turning years of the century, he won 237 games and lost 149, setting this record with verve and invention, which included the screwball. As a manager, he persuaded Presidents to throw out the first ball at the first game. As an owner, he became known as a hard trader, once even selling his son-in-law, Joe Cronin, to the Boston Red Sox for $250,000 and one player. And he led the usually second-rate Senators to their only world championship in 1924.

That series turned on the arm of the Big Train, Walter Johnson. Johnson had spent two decades with the Senators, mostly in a losing cause. In time his blazing speed had to give way to skill and a fine curve. When he finally got his long-deserved chance in the World Series, he lost the first two games, but came back in the seventh to win the glory and the cash in a relief role.

Clark Griffith admitted that the development of the great Johnson was a peak in his own career, and even erected a monument to the Train. But Mr. Griffith held fame, in his own right, as his recognition in the Hall at Cooperstown proves. To baseball he gave service, records, legend and loyalty.

To Arrest a Decline

In his letter to Gov. Donnelly suggesting the need for an intensive program to attract new industry and population to Missouri, Congressman Frank M. Karsten touches on a subject we have frequently commented on. As he points out, the 20-year decline in the size of Missouri's House delegation from 16 to 11 is a measure of the loss of relative standing in the nation.

Several times in recent years the Post-Dispatch has called attention to gains and losses in population by states. A recent issue of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.'s Statistical Bulletin presents exceedingly interesting data on population changes due to civilian migration, April 1950 to June 1954. These changes do not reflect at all birth rates and death rates. They record only civilian population coming into a state and going out of it, per 1000 civilian population. We have arranged the states in the order of their attractiveness to migrants.

The 48 states and District of Columbia rank as follows:

STATE	PCT. OF GAIN	STATE	PCT. OF LOSS
Nevada	63.7	Montana (Less)	.0
Arizona	51.2	Wyoming (Than)	.0
Florida	47.6	Utah (1%)	.0
California	27.3	Virginia	1.6
Delaware	18.9	Kansas	2.1
Connecticut	14.5	Pennsylvania	3.0
New Jersey	9.2	Wisconsin	3.5
Maryland	8.7	Rhode Island	3.9
Michigan	8.2	Minnesota	4.4
Oregon	5.3	Nebraska	5.3
Ohio	4.8	Idaho	6.8
Massachusetts	4.7	Georgia	7.1
Indiana	3.8	New Hampshire	7.5
New Mexico	3.0	Maine	7.7
Dist. of Columbia	2.6	Vermont	7.9
Colorado	2.3	North Carolina	9.0
Illinois	1.7	Tennessee	9.1
Washington	1.7	Iowa	9.5
Texas	1.3	Oklahoma	10.4
Louisiana	1.1	North Dakota	11.3
Missouri	1.0	South Carolina	11.9
New York	.9	Alabama	12.1
		South Dakota	12.3
		Kentucky	13.0
		Mississippi	16.6
		Arkansas	16.8
		West Virginia	20.9

While Missourians may be glad that their state is not hit by the heavy exodus that some of our neighboring states are undergoing, still there is not too much comfort in being almost the last state to show a net gain in migration and that a gain of only 1 per cent.

Gov. Donnelly in his reply to Representative Karsten agrees that "there is more need for intelligent and adequately financed promotion to acquire new industry," but offers no proposals to meet the need. The Post-Dispatch continues to think that a special commission of carefully chosen Missourians ought to be at work on this problem right now.

Is TV a Lie Detector?

"You just can't reward a political hack and elect him any more," says Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall, in discussing how television has revolutionized political campaigning. Mr. Hall thus agrees with Robert Montgomery, the White House television consultant, who recently expressed the conviction that it is impossible for an insincere politician to fool the people on television.

We hope they both are right. It would be nice to feel that the television screen has some special magic which exposes "phonies," as Mr. Montgomery says it does. But we confess to a wee drap of skepticism.

Television after all is merely a means of communication, a way of bringing into one's room (or the corner saloon) the face and voice of a candidate. If a fraud can fool the people in person, why not on TV?

Undoubtedly television requires different techniques of fraud. But it is difficult to believe that, once the politicians learn this new medium, there won't be an occasional one who can temporarily enchant the voters into giving him what he does not deserve. Sure, the frauds who look like frauds will stand exposed on the TV screen. But what about the frauds who look and talk like honest men?

Unsegregated by Age

In announcing plans to build 216 special apartments for the aged in future public housing projects, the St. Louis Housing Authority is benefitting by the experience of other cities.

As a report in PICTURES last winter pointed out, all state-aided public housing in New York now includes by law a specified proportion of apartments for aged, with special equipment such as ramps, rough-textured bathroom floors, grab bars, and other conveniences and comforts.

This development recognizes the facts that a large percentage of people approach old age with limited financial reserves, and that the planning of public housing should take into special consideration the needs of this group.

The St. Louis Authority is also taking advantage of experience elsewhere when it plans to locate the apartments for aged in regular public housing projects along with other age groups, instead of concentrating them in separate projects as originally planned. The plan now is to build a special building for the aged in each of two projects when federal funds are allocated for the work.

While this is certainly to be preferred to an "old-folks-only" project, the Authority would do well to ask itself whether even this much segregation of the aged is not too much.

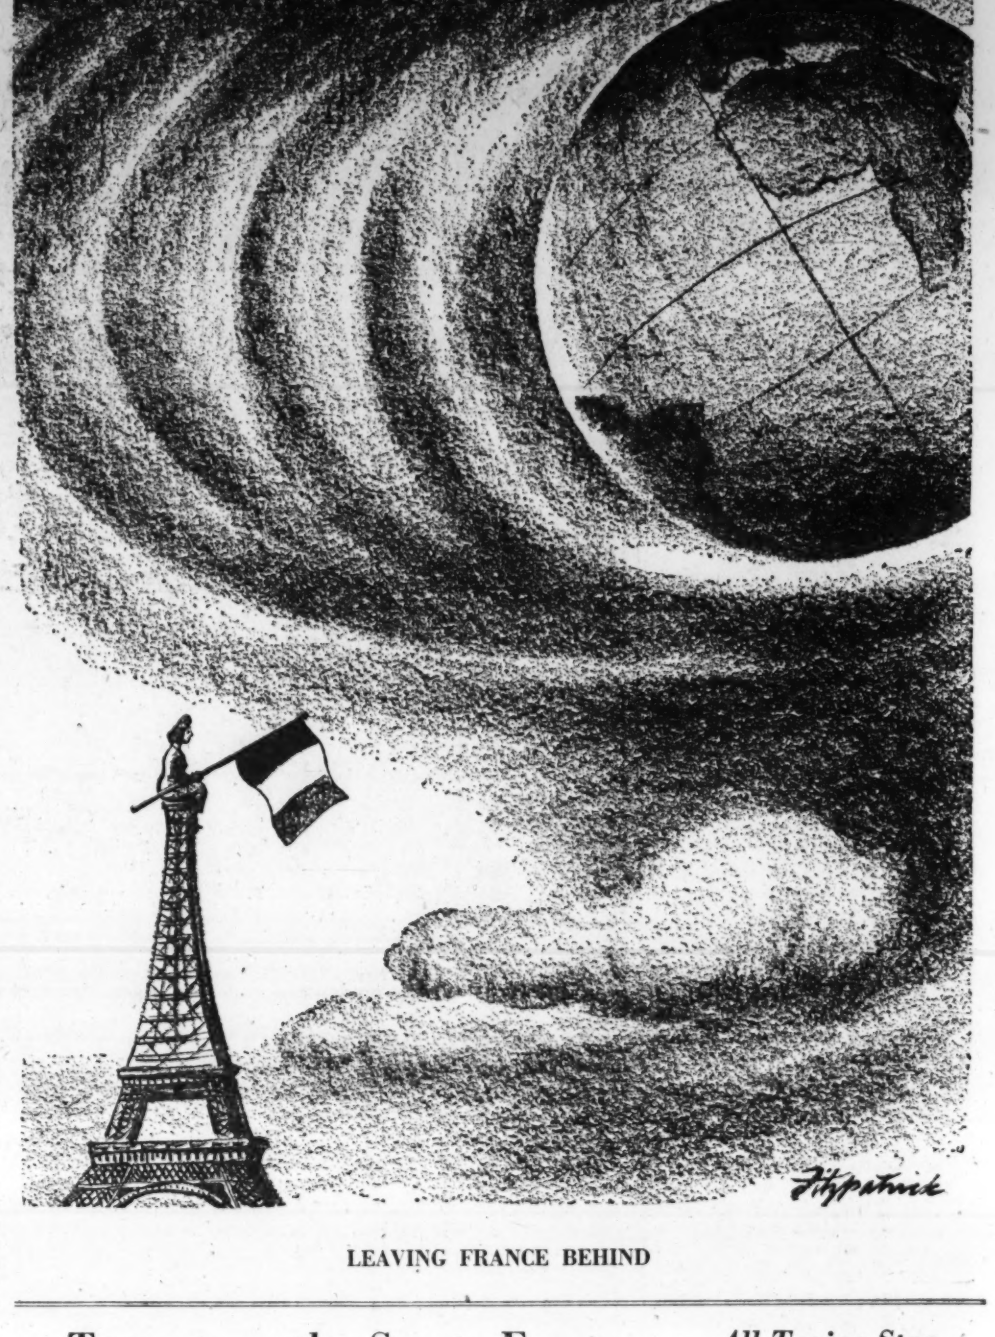
Needs of the World Air Routes

Seventy-five air lines from 40 nations were represented at the International Air Transport Association conference in New York last week. Their network literally covers the world. Using it, the traveler can fly around the world in a week.

Perhaps the most important piece of business transacted at the conference was adoption of a resolution that may be surprising even to many who frequently span the oceans in I.A.T.A. airliners. Deploring the present traffic control and navigation facilities for planes, the resolution formally called on all governments to modernize the facilities without delay.

With jet airliners about to enter the picture, it is indeed surprising that the facilities for handling these planes and the airports are several years behind the times. Juan Trippe, new president of I.A.T.A., summed it up when he said that "the disparity between what our aircraft are capable of doing and what they can do safely is the greatest single physical threat to the industry's future."

The nations of the world, including the United States, should pay the resolution the heed that it deserves.



LEAVING FRANCE BEHIND

Treason on the Sports Front

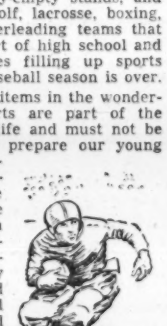
The Mirror of Public Opinion

Conservation editor admits to being disloyal to concept of spectator sports, in which a few compete and thousands sit and watch; do these contribute permanent value? he asks; but he still hunts and fishes, and suspects using the outdoors may do a man good.

Dan Saults, Editor, in the Missouri Conservationist, Published by the Missouri Conservation Commission

Even if it does irritate old grads, I'd like to think out loud for a while about football teams and their stadia, basketball squads with their monster field houses, track teams languishing in loneliness before vastly-empty stands, and the polo, tennis, golf, lacrosse, boxing, wrestling and cheerleading teams that are an integral part of high school and college life besides filling up sports pages when the baseball season is over.

Of course, these items in the wonderful world of sports are part of the American way of life and must not be questioned. They prepare our young men and fair womanhood for citizenship and teach true sportsmanship. We could not have won World War II without exhibition boxing matches by champions; and without the football squads of the armed services, how would the forces of truth and freedom ever have swept to glorious victory?



I do not question these virtues. But thinking aloud on a personal basis: I quit playing basketball 15 years ago and quit dreaming of stardom long before that; I haven't tossed a baseball for five years; I haven't engaged in fisticuffs since 1944, when an outranked second lieutenant decided to see if he should have been outranked.

But I still go fishing; I still hunt a little.

Nobody ever really taught me these sports I can practice as a middle-aged man; coaches were busy trying to develop a hook shot or a fast start in the dashes. I wish, now, someone had taught me how to fish a little better, because that sport will be open to me as a participant for a good many years yet, God willing. Gunning or angling, I don't have to confine myself to indulging in what we collitch-cultured journalists call "vicarious participation."

So at the risk of being disloyal to the sports sections of the free American press, I'm wondering—not suggesting, just wondering—if a course in plug casting or gun handling wouldn't prepare our American boyhood for life just as adequately as football casting or basketball handling. Seems to me the acquired skill might be more useful after boyhood has become manhood, might even teach a man or a woman to live with themselves better than they would learn by watching matched teams beat each other's collective brains out.

If this be treason, make the most of it.

You can't draw 50,000 people to a fly-casting contest, nor get Old Siwash's name in headlines with an exhibition of gun safety. But the air is fresher on Blue Bonnet creek than in Yankee Stadium and there's more exercise in following a dog across a field than in sitting on a hard board using eyeballs and vocal cords.

Techniques of live-bait fishing may not build school spirit but it surely wouldn't hurt academic standings any more than a 10-day jaunt to Madison Square Garden. Travel may be educational, but so few people get on basketball squads—someone has to be under seven feet.

It's hard to understand why so many schools resist hunting and fishing as "specialized interests" while paying a football coach more than the Dean of Men to instruct one fiftieth of the student body. There are required "gym" classes, of course, but these generally—there are notable exceptions — rate calisthenics more ennobling than plug-flipping. Push-ups may build bodies, but their value in soul therapy is doubtful . . . and how many of you do push-ups now you're at the age to need 'em?

Hunting and fishing aren't particularly virtuous pastimes, but they keep a practitioner in better shape now than he's kept by the memories of boxing he did 20 years ago. Can you honestly name any sport that's useful to you today, unless you're a young professional?

I'm not griping, you understand . . . just wondering if a course in using the outdoors wouldn't be as useful as a class in folk dancing?

Doctors Have Safety Ideas

From The Milwaukee Journal

The safety devices being added to many new automobiles for 1956—dished steering wheels, doors than won't pop open, recessed and padded dashes, seat belts—are all intended to protect occupants of a motorcar involved in an accident. As such, they indicate a welcome start toward safer vehicles.

But five California family doctors who have made personal observations while patching up victims of traffic accidents are urging the auto industry to go further. They want consideration also given to persons outside vehicles.

Take a look at the new cars for 1956. Virtually all are lower and longer—or made to look that way because of jutting visors over headlights, pointed hood ornaments and protruding bumper guards.

The doctors representing the California Academy of General Practice say: "If automobile designers would spend two weeks in an emergency hospital, their consciences would not allow them to design cars with such deadly features."

They propose smooth, rounded front ends and hard rubber bumpers that will absorb shocks, plus a moratorium on greater horsepower until braking systems catch up.

Styling, admittedly, is a major factor in sales appeal. The public likes—and buys—rakish models. But is there good reason why designers can't combine safety with style that will still sell?

Having made a start toward improving inside safety, auto makers should now give as sincere thought to safety outside.

RECRUIT FOR NONSENSE BRIGADE

John S. Knight in the Detroit Free Press

House Republican Leader Joseph Martin has joined the "nonsense brigade," headed by Senator Dirksen of Illinois and G.O.P. Chairman Leonard Hall, which is clamoring that President Eisenhower can run for a second term.

Says Martin, as reported by the Chicago Tribune Press Service:

"Another term in the White House would be no more strenuous for the President than retirement to his farm at Gettysburg."

If Joe Martin really believes that, he ought to see his doctor.

I suspect, however, that he knows better but wants another Republican victory even if it kills Ike.

All Trains Stop

Dr. Charles G. Hamilton is a clergyman and legislator in Mississippi. He is author of a new book with descriptions of every state in the Union, 48 in '48 (Christopher House, Boston, 77 pgs., $2).

Missouri

All of the states are somewhere in Missouri
So much of them that it all makes a Missourian
Like the Big Muddy draining half a continent
Missouri drains the nation into itself
Average central middle but not mediocre
As Northern as Parkville as Southern as Cape Girardeau
The men Missouri votes for get to be president
Though Lincoln got only one vote in Truman's county
A state that seceded and fought and cherished
A star in a crimson flag and one in a spangled
With a whole division where English was never uttered
And a Confederate capitol at Neosho
A Southern state with a Northern exposure
A Western state with an Eastern breeze
With 46 denominations in small towns
And a couple of hundred in Saint Lou and KC
And Mennonite farm houses with a special door for Sundays
And lead miners committing slow suicide that plumbing may prosper
The Kansas City Star reflects the West
And the Post-Dispatch is the nation's modern crusader
Exposing tideland oil and smoke and power
The smokestained memorial and the skyscraper lights
And steers waiting to be labeled KC
All trains stop at Saint Louis and Kansas City
Remains the gate to the opened and unopened West
And the Santa Fe Super Chief stops in Missouri
To give Pullman riders a glimpse of the United States
And of the courageous statesman of Independence

Illinois

Isolated from the world by Lake Michigan
And from the United States by the Chicago Tribune
Though its frontiers run to Prague and Lodz and Stettin
With English a foreign language to half its denizens
And the first English speaking university in the world
Chicago is dirt and Americanism
And vice and crime and murder and Pullman strikes
And Marshall Fields and Debs and State Street and the Irish
And South Chicago and Negro scholars and the Defender
In the midst of shanties and broken-down shacks and dilapidation
Grew the greatest American poems with Lindsay Masters and Sandburg
The Sun lets a little light into Chicago
And the Christian Century spreads religion
To Tasmania and Teheran
Distillery demagogues represent Peoria
Illinois is Altgeld, Douglas and Lincoln
And the Century of Progress with teachers rioting for cash
And the nations stores of Roebuck and Ward
Whose wish book kindles the dreams of every farm girl
Illinois is the 400 miles of flatness
Along the Illinois Central from the lake to Cairo
And Egypt with corn but still lacking a Joseph
And the canned culture of Champaign and Urbana
And the Evanston sign industries welcome
This is a Republican city
Where smokefilled rooms named Harding and Lincoln and Garner
And thousands cheered for Bryan and Franklin Roosevelt
To live in mankind is far more than to live in a name

Dulles's Visit to Tito Regarded As Effort to Show Satellites They Can Stand Up to Russia

U.S. Policy Believed to Be Attempt to Promote Yugoslav Independence as Example to Other States in Red Orbit — Skeptical Eye Kept on Belgrade.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.

THE FREE WORLD'S deep concern over the future of the little Balkan Communist state of Yugoslavia is shown by the high-level diplomatic attention the United States currently is paying to President Tito. A week from tomorrow Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will visit Tito at Brioni; only a month ago Deputy Under Secretary of State Robert Murphy conferred at length with Tito and other Yugoslav leaders.

Why is Dulles going? When asked that question in Paris last Tuesday the Secretary smiled and replied:

"I've never been to Yugoslavia before."

This statement, made against a background of reports that the West is increasingly concerned with the progress of "normalization" of relations between Yugoslavia and Soviet Russia, may have seemed a bit evasive, but there is no indication from United States or Yugoslav sources that any new crisis is impending.

Rather, it is held in responsible quarters, that the purpose of the Dulles-Murphy visits is the furtherance of this country's firm policy toward Yugoslavia. That is to promote the independence of the former Soviet satellite so it may stand as an example to other Soviet-dominated countries.

Interpreted Both Ways.

Oddly enough, the actions taken by Yugoslavia since the famous visit of the Russian hierarchy to Belgrade last May, have been interpreted both as proving Yugoslavia's independence and as indicating a tendency to harmony with Russia at the expense of the West.

United States policy-makers do not forget the Yugoslavs are Communists and that Balkan politics are Machiavellian, to say the least, so they keep a close and suspicious eye on what happens in Belgrade.

Nevertheless, there are reasons why this country thinks the Yugoslavs want to get along with the West. Not the least important of these is that if Yugoslavia has Western support its bargaining position with Soviet Russia is enhanced. This leads to a rather cynical but probably accurate observation that Yugoslavia is playing its cards for all they are worth and trying to balance off Russia against the United States. That is the historical objective of small independent states, and there are advantages and disadvantages in it for everyone.

Dulles's visit has been under discussion for some months. The Yugoslavs regard it as important and as further proof that their country is indeed independent and entitled to be treated as an equal by the other powers.

Friction Points Covered.

Most of the friction points in Yugoslav-United States relations were covered during the apparently successful mission of Murphy, a career diplomat who has known Tito for a long time. Dulles is thought likely to reassure the Yugoslav President on the continuance of American aid and Tito is expected, in turn, to express to Dulles his hope for good relations with both East and West and his refutation of any possibility Yugoslavia might rejoin the Soviet system.

Tito said in a major speech several months ago:

"Yugoslavia and we who are responsible for her policy want to maintain the best possible relations with the Western countries. There is no basis for believing that we are now turncoats, that since we have obtained what we required, as some have already stated, we are turning to the other side. No. We are still proceeding and will continue to proceed in the same direction, not deviating one iota from our independent course."

That independent course, taken in pursuit of the "normalization" of Soviet-Yugoslav relations, has caused disquiet among some persons who believe there can be no relations with Communist countries without compromises favorable to the Soviet. American diplomats are well aware that a country can slip into the Communist orbit imperceptibly and not of its own volition, and they are alert for signs of anything like this happening in Yugoslavia.

The case of Yugoslavia is a special one, however. Yugoslavia has an avowedly Communist government and is the only one-time Soviet satellite which has been able to escape Russian control. The Yugoslavs remember how Stalin fastened his grip on their country and are acutely aware of Soviet purposes and methods.

In this Yugoslavia differs from Indonesia, for example, where in a non-Communist country Communists have exerted an influence that has at times amounted almost to control of the government and where non-Communist leaders publicly scorn the possibility that the Reds could take over.

Caught U.S. Off Base.

One subject not covered by Murphy and one which may enter into the Dulles-Tito talks is Soviet backing of Yugoslavia for one of the six temporary seats on the United Nations Security Council. This was a shrewd maneuver on the part of Russia, because it caught the United States in a disadvantageous position.

For several years the Soviet Union, which holds one of the five permanent Council seats (the others are held by the United States, Britain, France and Nationalist China) has attempted to obtain a seat for one of its eastern European satellites. When the question of a replacement for Turkey, whose two-year term had expired, came up in the General Assembly this fall the Soviets backed satellite Poland. The United States supported the Philippines.

The assembly deadlocked when neither side could obtain the necessary two-thirds majority. The Soviets then switched their support to Yugoslavia. The United States could not support Yugoslavia because it was pledged to the Philippines, although it might have agreed to Yugoslavia under other circumstances. Since the onset of the cold war the United States has successfully opposed seats for the Russian satellites on the ground they are not "peace-loving" and hence do not comply with a U.N. requirement. The assembly again deadlocked last Thursday on the Philippine-Yugoslav issue and further balloting was postponed for 10 days.

May Discuss Cyprus.

Another question that may be discussed by Dulles and Tito is the dispute over the Mediterranean island of Cyprus. Neither the United States nor Yugoslavia is directly involved, but the interests of both are affected.

Cyprus is a British crown colony. It is 40 miles from the coast of Turkey and some 500 miles from Greece, but has a Greek majority and a Turkish minority. A new wave of riots occurred in Cyprus this week over the issue of Cypriot independence and there have been riots in Greece and Turkey. The British have proposed self-government but not full independence; this does not go far enough for the Greeks and goes too far for the Turks.

Yugoslavia enters the picture because of the western encouraged Yugoslav - Turkish - Greek alliance which puts Yugoslavia in the position of a sort of North Atlantic Treaty Organization partner. Greece and Turkey are NATO members, Yugoslavia is not.

Yugoslavia has advocated caution and negotiation in the British-Greek-Turk-Cypriot dispute. In a talk with some Greek correspondents Tito recently emphasized the importance of the alliance and Yugoslavia's moderate and constructive attitude toward the disputants. The United States naturally wishes to preserve the alliance as well as peace generally in the area, which is already threatened by the possibility of a renewal of hostilities between Israel and the Arab tes.

Stirrings of Rebellion?

A third topic that may come up for discussion in the Dulles-Tito talks (there is no formal agenda) is the situation in the satellites. There has as yet been no discernible major satellite movement in the direction Yugoslavia has taken, but any defection, it is held, would be likely to come suddenly. Balkan observers profess to see faint stirrings of rebellion; signs that Romanians, Bulgarians and others are seeking the means of escape from bondage.

Yugoslavia broke from the Soviet hold in 1948 and since shortly after the break has received military, economic and technical aid from the United States and other western countries; this has sustained the Yugoslav economy and still is being provided.

The last week in May of this year Soviet officials led by Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Nikita S. Khrushchev, Communist party boss, visited Belgrade to apologize for their previous attitude toward Tito and to sue for peace. Dulles at the time referred to the visit as a "humble pilgrimage" and said it did not mean Yugoslavia would return to the Soviet fold. After the visit the process of "normalizing" political and economic relations between Russia and Yugoslavia was begun.

During the summer Yugoslav political and economic delegations visited Moscow. It was stressed by the leader of the politicians, Vladimir Bakaric, that the visit to Russia was led by a delegation from an equal and not a subordinate country. This view was publicized by the Soviet press. The economic mission, under the chairmanship of Svetozar Vukmanovic-Tempo, took a similar stand and extracted from the Russians what was regarded as a "very favorable trade agreement."

Economic negotiations with the Soviet Union were conducted from Aug. 23 to Sept. 1 and an agreement providing for "considerable expansion of commercial exchange" was signed. The exchanges were to amount to $70,000,000 a year for three years with a subsequent expansion. Russia gave Yugoslavia a three-year $54,000,000 credit for Yugoslav purchases of raw materials in Russia and a $30,000,000 loan in foreign exchange or in gold at 2 per cent interest.

Dulles was expected to go to Brioni from Geneva, where he is participating in the big four foreign ministers conference. The State Department declined to speculate whether the Geneva meeting might be concluded before the Yugoslav visit, or whether Dulles might visit Tito during a recess of the foreign ministers conference.

Soviet 'Ears' Are Adopted By U.S. Agents

Resonator Found in American Embassy in Moscow Few Years Ago.

By JOSEPH AND STEWART ALSOP

WASHINGTON.

A LITTLE MORE than 3½ years ago, a routine inspection of the American embassy in Moscow brought the surprise of its collective life to one of the counter-intelligence teams that have to be employed to keep our embassy secure.

At an apparently irrelevant point, far away in enormous Spasso House, from the ambassador's office-library, the team's electronic equipment suddenly began to pick up the quiet conversation of the ambassador of that period, George F. Kennan, at his office desk. An intensive search unearthed something new to the investigators.

After all but tearing the place apart, the investigators took down the office-library's big, nornamental Great Seal of the United States, which had been sent out to be painted and repaired about four months earlier. In it, hidden behind the eagle, they discovered a matchbox-sized device composed of a specially machined metal cup, a thin metallic diaphragm that covered the cup, and a tiny antenna. There were no batteries, no wires, no connection with electric power of any kind.

The discovery was automatically muffled in security classifications. It took many months for the device to reach American experts qualified to identify it.

The experts discovered that it was a resonator, designed to receive and to bounce back a highly selective radio beam. Its diaphragm was simultaneously agitated both by the radio beam and nearby human voices. Thus the sounds of the voices were included in the electronic echo that the resonator bounced back.

This triumph of Soviet ingenuity long ago did all the harm it could do. There are good reasons now, however, for disclosing and discussing this somewhat startling episode of several years ago.

In the first place, both the episode itself and the device that produced it are still officially hidden from the American public, although the Soviet intelligence has of course known everything there was to know from the very beginning. There are reasons to believe, furthermore, that this is not just another example of the customary ostrich-headedness of American officialdom.

There seems to be another motive, in fact. The Moscow resonator is a wonderful easily-concealed listening device. Furthermore, since it requires no wiring, it does not come within the scope of the anti-wiretapping laws. According to credible report, it is now being used by the Federal agents to circumvent the limitations which the anti - wiretapping laws place upon police invasions of privacy.

Big Brother's ears, in short, may be anywhere and everywhere nowadays.

The ancient right of privacy of all American citizens is being rapidly eroded away by the triumph of electronic technology.

Administration Gambling 178 Electoral Votes on Farm Policy acreage into grass or other conservation crops.

Jake More, recently elected chairman of the Midwest Democratic conference, which includes 13 states, issued a statement saying: "I'm glad to see Secretary Benson responded so quickly in taking action that should have been taken many months ago."

More referred to demands for immediate action made at the Democratic conference here a week ago in which both Adlai Stevenson and Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, prospective candidates for the Democratic Presidential nomination, called for aid for the farmer with 90 per cent rigid farm price supports.

The Senate Agriculture Committee which continued its hearings here and elsewhere in the Midwest last week heard numerous vehement opponents of flexible price supports and several demands for Benson's resignation. Among measures which will be before the Senate at the next session of Congress in January will be a House-approved bill providing for farm price supports on basic commodities at 90 per cent of parity.

Emil W. Roufeldt of Anthon, Ia., representing the Farmers' Union, told the committee headed by Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana:

"We don't want another Hoover depression. We farmers also don't want politicians to make promises in order to win elections. We don't need or want any more of Benson and his sliding scale."

Oswald K. Ophaug, president of the Farmers' Union in Nelson county, N.D., told the Senate committee that his organization had adopted a resolution calling for Benson's resignation.

Congressman Harold O. Lovre, South Dakota Republican, wrote Benson last week that "the illness of agriculture has reached epidemic proportions" and urged immediate action. After a series of "open forum" meetings with farmers in his district, he reported, he is convinced that price supports at 90 per cent of parity should be reinstated "until such time as the development of new markets, new uses and increased consumers will give the farmer 100 per cent of parity."

Gov. Foss and former Gov. Turner, both Republicans, have been saying about the same thing. They want some definite action now along the line of firm price supports even if they aren't the final answer to the big farm problem.

"Labor has a 'floor' under wages," said the South Dakota governor. "Tariffs and fair trade acts serve as 'floors' under business. The farmer would be the first to go along with the elimination of 'floors.' But since everybody else has them, he wants them too."

Weather Makes It Risky.

Former Gov. Turner said: "It seems that they want to leave the farmer as the only one operating under the natural law of supply and demand. He wouldn't mind if other industries played the game under the same rules. The weather each year makes his venture a speculative enterprise. He has an increasingly high capital investment.

"An assurance of 100 per cent parity prices is our due. We can have solidity and rigidity in farm prices just as they do in business if we elect the right men to Congress."

Another problem which will rise to plague the Eisenhower administration next January is the provision in its 1954 agricultural act changing the formula for establishing "parity."

For years, parity has been a yardstick of farm income based on prices the farmer received for his production and costs he paid for the things he had to buy in the 1910-1914 period when agriculture was considered to have received a fair share of the national income.

But the present administration provided for "modernizing" the parity formula for corn, wheat, cotton, peanuts and burley tobacco, which have benefitted by new seeds, better machinery or new equipment used in production and harvesting.

The lower prices resulting are expected to amount to about $500,000,000 for 1956 crops under a provision that parity prices may not be reduced more than 5 per cent in one year until a reduction of 15 per cent is effected.

Parity price of corn for 1956 would be reduced 7 cents from $1.81 a bushel to $1.74 for a total reduction of approximately $210,000,000 in the value of the prospective corn crop. It also would drop 7 cents in each of the next two years.

Biggest Difference in Wheat.

Difference between the old and new formulas would be the greatest for wheat. The old formula of $2.49 a bushel ultimately would be reduced by 36 cents, about 12.5 cents next year, bringing the 1956 price to $2.36.

The new cotton support level would lower the price about $4.50 a bale or a total of $52,000,000 for 1956. Peanuts would be reduced about $12,000,000 and burley tobacco about $11,500,000.

It is possible that support prices might be even lower under the flexible system calling for 75 to 90 per cent of parity. The 1955 wheat crop was supported at 82.5 per cent of parity, but next year's will be at 76 per cent.

Whether the parity formula change should be postponed again is one of the questions being considered by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Edwin Christianson, president of the Minnesota Farmers' Union, told the committee last week that 95 per cent of Minnesota milk producers favored a "Brannan Plan" type of support under which dairy products would be sold for whatever price they would bring. The difference between this price and 90 or 100 per cent of parity would be made up by Government payments. The Eisenhower administration has denounced such plans.

With the election scarcely more than a year away, the Republican party faces a seemingly impossible task if it attempts to sell corn-hog farmers on flexible parity payments but weather, crops and Congress may make some changes.

ISRAELIS HOPE FOR PEACE BUT GIRD FOR FIGHT

sabotage squads in Israel. Premier Sharett has warned the Arab countries that they will be held responsible for such "murderous activities."

The Gaza strip, populated by refugees, and the remnant of Palestine protruding into Israel and administered by Jordan, give Israel very unfavorable borders of defense. In case of conflict in the near future it is quite possible militarily for the Israeli to wipe out the Gaza strip, to drive Egypt out of the Sinai peninsula and to extend their frontier to the Suez Canal.

It would be a simple matter also to cut off the remnant of Palestine and to extend the eastern border of Israel to the Jordan river. In case war were provoked, Israel could justify such moves as based on military necessity.

Officially, Israel asks that its frontiers be guaranteed by the Western powers and that it be supplied with arms to maintain a balance of military power between Israel and the Arab states.

Such a balance as it hopes for cannot be maintained indefinitely, due to the disparity of population, if the animosities of the Near East continue. Nor can another victorious war assure the future of Israel. Rather, it would animate the more populous and more wealthy Arab states to renewed efforts.

An effective solution must lie with diplomacy. The Soviet move to supply arms to the Arabs thus gives them a valuable asset to trade to the West in turn for concessions by us to them. They will not agree to withdraw from their penetration into the Arab states without a heavy payment in return.

50 AMERICAN SERVICE MEN IN JAPANESE PRISON

TOKYO, Oct. 29 (AP)—In the two years that American service men have been subject to Japanese law, 269 have been indicted and 50 are serving terms in Tokyo's Fuchu prison, Justice Ministry officials said today.

On Oct. 29, 1953, all American service men became subject to Japanese law when they are off duty and outside of United States military areas.

Most of the 50 Americans at Fuchi are serving three- or four-year terms, the ministry said. The highest sentence given an American service man was 15 years—for murder and burglary.

Partisan Wrangle Shaping Up Over President's Proposal for Domestic 'Point IV' Program

Senators Already Taking Issue With Eisenhower Adviser's Statement That Plan Comes to Grips With 'Depression Pocket' Problem for 'Very First Time.'

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.

ONE of President Eisenhower's bedside conferences at Denver this week focused national attention on a serious but neglected economic problem — the plight of depression "pockets" in an era of good times.

The plan for a sort of domestic Point IV aid to economically distressed areas of the United States was described by Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. He said President Eisenhower had given his general approval and wanted the details worked out quickly with a view to putting a bill before Congress in January.

Burns himself agreed to the "Point IV" nickname for the Administration's plan, when a reporter suggested a resemblance to former President Truman's proposal for technical assistance to underdeveloped areas of the world.

Like the foreign technical assistance program, a plan to aid depressed areas in the United States carries an appeal to Republicans and Democrats alike. This is not to say, however, that the two parties necessarily will get together on the same plan.

Already the possibility has appeared that the Democrats and Republicans each will have their own proposal, just as they backed rival highway bills in the last session of Congress.

Three Senators, two of them Republicans, immediately took issue with Burns's statement that "this program comes to grips realistically in a practical way for the very first time with this problem."

Echoes Douglas's Words.

Burns, perhaps unwittingly, used words almost identical with those Senator Paul H. Douglas (Dem.), Illinois, had used last July 28 when he introduced his own depressed areas bill. Douglas had said: "The purpose of the bill is to help distressed areas to help themselves." Describing the Administration proposal, Burns said: "Now the essence of this plan really is to help communities to help themselves."

Senator Frederick G. Payne (Rep.), Maine, says he had urged such a plan in a Senate speech last July 30, and Senator Ralph Flanders (Rep.), Vermont, says he was working on the problem five years ago.

Latest Government figures on the problem of regional unemployment came out this week in the Labor Department's "bimonthly summary of labor market developments in major areas."

The report lists 26 major areas of "substantial labor surplus"—more than 6 per cent unemployment. Six of these have more than 12 per cent unemployment.

Both St. Louis and Kansas City are just one step out of this "substantial labor surplus" category. They are listed as having somewhere between 3 and 6 per cent unemployment.

Illinois Areas Affected.

Senator Douglas is concerned about the three major areas in his state that fall into this class—Chicago, Rock Island-Moline (together with Davenport, Ia.) and Peoria.

Representative John A. Blatnik (Dem.), of Minnesota, plans to introduce a bill similar to Douglas's in the House. His district includes Duluth, a major Lake Superior commercial port where shipping orders have fallen off 35 per cent since the Korean war. This resulted, in turn, from a decreased demand for the lower-grade iron ore now remaining in the Mesabi iron range. The report this week lists the Duluth-Superior (Wis.) area as having a "substantial labor surplus"—6 to 9 per cent unemployment.

Ninety-four smaller distressed areas in 28 states—all listed as having more than 6 per cent unemployment — include coal-mining districts of southern Illinois, Pennsylvania and West Virginia; New England textile towns, where plants have been closed down or moved south; and scattered communities centered on declining railroad yards or other single industries.

One such area is the Herrin-Murphysboro - West Frankfort area of southern Illinois, where slackened demand for soft coal has brought chronic unemployment. Joplin, Mo., also is listed in this group.

Until last May, the Labor Department broke down its reports on the smaller areas into two groups—those with unemployment of 6 to 12 per cent, and those with more than 12 per cent. When the Department began lumping the two together, Senator Douglas objected in a letter to Under Secretary Arthur Larson.

Douglas wrote: "It reminds me of the man who, having a fever, fixed the thermometer so it would not register above 99 degrees—or rather did not differentiate between 99 degrees and 103 degrees."

Some Areas Skipped Over.

Possibly more serious is the objection that the smaller areas are surveyed only at the request of some local group. Requests ordinarily come from business firms who hope to benefit from some Federal program already set up to help depressed areas. Substantial unemployment in a community can qualify a business there for rapid tax amortization of a new plant, the right to supply part of a Government order by meeting the price of a successful bidder, and a special advantage in competing with foreign firms under the "Buy American" act.

If there happens to be no business man who sees an advantage in asking a survey of his distressed community, the chances are its plight will escape the attention of the Federal Government.

Burns, in his sketchy outline of the Administration plan, said a program had been developed for 80 industrial communities with substantial and persistent unemployment. He said both large and small areas were included, mentioning particularly New England textile towns and Pennsylvania and West Virginia coal towns. In answer to a question, he said he did not know whether any southern Illinois communities were included.

Three Principal Functions.

Under the Administration plan, a new agency inside one of the regular departments would perform three main functions:

1. Co-ordinate various federal activities aimed at helping local economies.

2. Provide "technical assistance" that communities need to "develop programs for their own economic development."

3. Help lend money to finance local industrial development projects. The Federal Government would put up only part of a loan, the rest being supplied by the state, the local government and private interests.

Senator Douglas's bill has a name for the new agency—the "Depressed Areas Administration"—and puts a tentative price tag on the program. He would earmark $100,000,000 for Federal construction loans for new industrial plants to alleviate unemployment. Another $100,000,000 would be available for grants or loans to start local public works.

Another feature of the Douglas proposal would use unemployment compensation to stimulate retraining of workers to fit changed job opportunities. By arrangement with the states, supplementary payments would go to persons taking part in retraining programs in depressed areas. In addition, the Federal Government would pay for an additional 13 weeks of compensation beyond the present 26, if an individual enters retraining.

Burns did not mention such a provision as being part of the administration plan. However, he made it clear that details would be presented later and has declined to elaborate on the brief outline he gave at Denver.

Thomas Mann's Last Is a Picaresque Tale.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THOMAS MANN

CONFESSIONS OF FELIX KRULL, CONFIDENCE MAN: by Thomas Mann, translated from the German by Denver Lindley. (Knopf, 384 pgs., $4.50.)

IN THE last days of his life, which were far from being the twilight of his career, Thomas Mann applied himself with undiminished zest to the completion of a chronicle he had begun as a young man. This was the history of a dedicated and engaging rascal named Felix Krull. What was started as a fragment back in 1921 is now a full-length novel called the "Confessions of Felix Krull, Confidence Man," but it is evident from the text itself that the history was still not complete.

That an even more extensive and complicated series of adventures lie ahead of Felix is foretold many times, an impression that is further verified by an appendage—"The Earlier Years"—to the main title.

Perhaps it is just as well that we are forced to part with Felix while he is at the top of his form, filled to bursting with youthful vitality and supremely confident of his ability to bring off any deception or intrigue that serves his purpose. I do not mean to suggest that Dr. Mann would have suffered from a waning invention. It is possible, however, that the essence of his hero's nature—an unflagging exuberance and an unlimited verbal adroitness in explaining himself — might have grown a little stale after a prolonged acquaintance. As it is the 384 pages seem far too few.

IN his early adolescence Felix awakens to a conviction of his uniqueness and in particular to his acute and varied responses to the pleasures of life. "Great Joy," he decides, should be the essence and the goal of all experience and with that in mind he instinctively disregards all social and moral scruples that might restrict his behavior. But the world being what it is—and he hasn't the slightest desire to change it—he realizes that he must cope with vulgar prejudice by ingenious deception whenever it's necessary.

Fortunately for him he is well equipped for the arts of subterfuge. He is a comely youth, whose golden brown complexion, blue eyes and ingratiating voice provoke the favorable attention of all and sundry. Moreover his creator — Dr. Mann — has thoughtfully endowed him with a quick, assimilative mind that enables him to turn every kind of situation to his profit.

Felix serves his apprenticeship in chicanery before leaving his Rhineland home, where his father is a struggling manufacturer of German "champagne," by feigning a desperate illness whenever he wants to escape the drudgery of school. This is ridiculously easy. Avoiding military service by counterfeiting the symptoms of epilepsy is a little more difficult but he pulls it off brilliantly and presently he is on his way to Paris to learn the hotel business at the Saint James and Albany.

Already he is practiced in thievery, not to mention the art of pleasing women and living off their gains, so when he comes into accidental possession of a lady's bag full of jewels, he quite naturally turns them into cash on arriving at his destination.

THE lady — a rich merchant's wife and a poet by avocation — turns up later at the Saint James and Albany and in the ecstasy of a quickly promoted love affair with Felix begs Felix to steal from her some more. It seems rather whimsical to Felix but he accommodates her.

Subsequently during his rise from elevator boy to waiter in the main dining room he is importuned by others of both sexes. He gently and tactfully resists the advances of a romantic girl from Manchester; and with equal tact says "No" to a Scottish nobleman who wants to make him his heir.

The Marquis de Vanosta is in a different case. Felix sees him as a highly promising connection with a rich and fashionable world; and an agreeable sophisticated companion in the bargain. The promise is soon fulfilled. Vanosta's parents, disturbed by their son's liaison with an actress, have decided to pack him off on a tour of the world. The Marquis proposes that Felix assume his identity and take his place, while he, the Marquis, remains in Paris to enjoy the charms of his mistress.

Despite the many foreseeable dangers of being detected Felix agrees and starts by journeying to Lisbon. Here he is soon involved in a campaign of seduction that has a surprising and ironically humorous outcome. What lies beyond the seas? Given the imaginative daring and the facility for improvisation of our hero the possibilities are endless.

IN FORM the "Confessions" is a picaresque novel or, in other words, the adventures of a rogue. As such, and with no consideration of its philosophical allusiveness or its social commentary, it is certainly a virtuoso piece, charged with high spirits and extravagantly decorated with verbal grace notes and cadenzas.

It may be assumed, however, that Dr. Mann intended something more than a blown-up, iridescent conceit. It is notable, for instance, that Felix, who obeys no rules but those of his own making inflicts no lasting injury on anybody. On the contrary even his victims are grateful to him.

From this we need not conclude that Dr. Mann is upholding the right of charming rascals to be unprincipled. What seems more likely is that he is merely underlining a simple fact of life: that most people prefer beguiling swindlers to heavy-handed idealists. Certainly a high style, such as Felix Krull has perfected, has a consistently disarming effect on moral indignation.

In concluding I must add that "Felix Krull" is not at all "plausible" even within the given framework. No book could be so described in which all the characters talk with such distinction of intellect and fancy. This makes it, first of all, an intellectual extravaganza but one so buoyant that even the most perverse anti-intellectual should find it entertaining.

Like any good photographer Pulitzer Prize winner Nat Fein has his favorite models. In his case they may not be of the blonde or brunette variety, but are more likely to be furred or striped. It took him a long time, however, to get the mother and baby pictured above with the stripes going just the right way. NAT FEIN'S ANIMALS, photographed by Nat Fein with text as told to Ferdi Backer and Ruth Biamiller (Gilbert Press, Julian Messner, Inc., $3.50) is a picture gallery of his favorite models—elephants, Royal Bengal tigers, Herbie the walrus, hippos, Mike the orangutan, and many others of whom he is especially fond—together with his own stories of how he got the pictures.

IF a book isn't about Africa these days, it's about animals. The perfect combination is a book about animals in Africa. These two volumes are respectively the fifth and sixth about animals to come to the attention of this reviewer in the past few months.

Mrs. Denis, the wife of Armand Denis, noted wildlife and movie photographer, has written a fascinating account of her travels with her husband into the wild places of the world—from their wedding at the highest point in the Andes, to her stand-in job for the star of "King Solomon's Mines," on location in Africa, and also of safaris to India, Australia and New Zealand, and a chapter on photographing sea lions off Southwest Africa.

She is a wise, observant companion on the journeys, helpful, and interested in everything. It is not an arty book, but Mrs. Denis has some philosophical comments which distinguish it, and the thread of her love and sympathy for wild creatures and native peoples make it appealing. Included, of course, are many remarkable photographs by Armand Denis, and the book results in a notable word portrait of Denis himself.

ALFRED COURT, the French-born animal trainer and circus man, copes with his animals in more civilized surroundings, but in his department, he too is outstanding and what he says is important. The animal trainer, it is obvious, must train himself as well as the animals, and simultaneously. For one who admires animals, the fine photographs also distinguish this book. This should be a "must" for young circus fans.

HISTORY

The Illusions of Charles I

Englishwoman Gains Top Rank With History of 'The Great Rebellion'.

THE KING'S PEACE, 1637-1641, by C. V. Wedgwood. (The Macmillan Co., 510 pgs., $5.50.)

Reviewed by
A. MERVYN DAVIES

THIS is the first volume of what promises to be one of the most important and readable historical works of our time. And to our knowledge it is the first, of this size and scope, that can be credited to a woman. Let it be stated here—Miss Wedgwood can from now on be ranked as a historian with the top rank, alongside such fellow-countrymen of hers as G. M. Trevelyan (to whom she dedicates this volume), Sir Arthur Bryant and A. L. Rowse.

The projected work is to be a three-volume history of the Great Rebellion of the British peoples against Charles I which broke out in 1642 and which cost Charles his head and turned Britain, for a while, into a republic. In this volume the author deals with Act I of the drama—the four years of ever increasing conflict in England before the contending parties of King and Parliament turned to the arbitrament of war, the Calvinist revolt in Scotland and the Irish uprising.

The author has been preparing herself for the writing of this magnum opus by doing a series of preliminary biographical volumes on Strafford, Cromwell and Montrose. She also has to her credit works on The Thirty Years War, William the Silent and Richelieu and the French Monarchy.

THE book opens on a note of superb historical irony, which gives the keynote to the theme. It is entitled "The King's Peace," and the opening section is entitled "The Happiest King in Christendom." That is actually the way Charles described himself in June, 1637, and the fact that he did so vividly illustrates the fantastic state of illusion in which he lived and reigned, for this was at the very moment when his people were beginning to seethe with discontent and the rumblings of the future storm could already be heard by those who had ears to hear.

Miss Wedgwood does a superb job of portraying this King. His fastidiousness in matters of artistic taste, his reserve, his love of horses and passion for the chase, his faithfulness as a husband, his piety and devotion to his beloved church, his high sense of duty—all on the one hand.

C. V. WEDGWOOD

And on the other: his complete isolation from his people, his ability amounting to genius for doing the politically inept thing and getting at odds with his subjects, his unlimited capacity to delude himself and indulge in optimistic day-dreams.

Never were King and people—both Scots and English—worse matched. Charles had the fixed idea that Kings possess divine right and that it rested with his good will alone to respect and uphold his people's liberties. This at the very moment in history when the two nations he ruled were becoming imbued with the opposite idea, that if anyone had divine right in those kingdoms it was the people and their representatives in parliament.

Other figures — Strafford, Laud, Pym in particular — stand out with equal clarity and brilliance of portrayal.

A CLASH, therefore, was inevitable, even if the King was the last to see it. At almost every point of policy he and the people were in conflict. In foreign policy, for instance, the people wanted to aid "the Protestant Cause"; the King consistently flirted with Catholic Spain, the chief enemy of that cause.

One straw suffices to show which way the royal wind was blowing—and why men close to the people like John Pym felt it had to be stopped and reversed, by force if necessary. To establish his authority over the judicial bench Charles altered the formula by which the judges were appointed. In the past they had held office "during good behavior." Now they were appointed "during the King's good pleasure."

As the conflict develops one see Charles using every kind of strategem and making all sorts of concessions in the face of superior force—but never yielding his aim—and in the process of conceding losing everybody's confidence. He even betrayed his great minister and the most devoted of all his servants, Strafford, thereby committing his worst blunder, both morally and politically, and preparing the way for his own downfall.

THE author's historiographical method merits an approving word. She does not claim to be either omniscient or infallible. She does not search for "underlying causes." She has avoided the temptation, so besetting to scholars proud of all their modern research, of arrogantly making the past merely the occasion for displaying their own analytical ingenuity — and their own illusions.

Miss Wedgwood has rather put herself on the level of the actors in the drama, accepting their motives and their illusions—at their full value. She is concerned with the actors, not as members of a group or of a class, nor as exemplifying a social trend, but as individuals—each with his own ideals, aims, characters, passions, weaknesses.

She is patently not trying to defend one side against the other, or to prove a thesis, or make a social study. Hers is "an attempt to understand how these men felt and why, in their own estimation, they acted as they did."

THIS is the explanation of why one gets such a wonderful sense of drama in her pages. This is living, pulsating—not dead and dissected—history. The issues at stake are, as the author truly says, live ones still: the conflict between the authority of the State and the liberty of the subject, between public responsibility and private conscience.

This is the very stuff of which the history of our own time has been made. It is deathless stuff; and as the author well says, by the time these problems have ceased to matter and the final, dispassionate history of this English Civil War can be wirtten—by that time it will not be worth writing. For as a free people we shall be dead.

Colonial Romance

LOUISIANA CAVALIER, by Everett Weber. (E. P. Dutton & Co., 315 pgs., $3.75.)

IN THIS story of early French colonization of Louisiana, the author embroils two arch enemies, the young Robert Sur de St. Brion and villainous Gaston de Flaviel, in continuous combat from this continent to the court of Louis XIV and back across the Atlantic Ocean. Throughout the book the reader will be inclined to remember similar details from a motion picture or television show. "Louisiana Cavalier" is written for popular taste, and no doubt it will be read by as many or more than the 300,000 persons who enjoyed the author's first novel, "Rampart Street."

FAY PROFILET

GEORGES SIMENON, president of the Mystery Writers of America, has added another fascinating story to his long list of successful mystery novels. A girl is found beaten to death in a dark Paris street. She is dressed in a shoddy blue satin evening gown, her wrap, purse and one slipper are missing. No one knows her and no one has the slightest interest in her, alive or dead. Inspector Maigret has one small clue—the tab in the dress. From this he reconstructs the girl's entife life to find out how and where she spent the last two hours before her death.

TRICK OR TREAT, by Doris Miles Disney. (Doubleday, 185 pgs., $2.75.)

MIKE MONROE is in love with his glamorous secretary. The fact that his wife, Edna, is a dull and no longer attractive woman is not grounds for divorce. He hopes that something will happen to set him free. While he is on a business trip in Texas, Edna gives a Hallowe'en party for her bridge club. The "girls" come dressed as children and during the gaiety of their arrival neighborhood kids in their costumes stroll in and out the house. But all the callers are not children. A sheeted figure appears at the door and whispers, "Trick or Treat!" Edna holds out a bowl of candy, the ghost whips a gun out of his paper bag and shoots her. This deftly written story will provide an added chill to All Hallows Eve.

THE CONCISE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ANTIQUES, Compiled by "The Connoisseur" and edited by L. G. G. Ramsey, F.S.A. (Hawthorn Books, 288 pgs., $8.95.)

MARY POWELL

THIS monumental volume offers detailed information on every type of object that usually falls into the category called antique. For its purpose the term applies to styles and designs before 1830. It includes in one volume for the first time furniture, ceramics, glass, enamels, pewter, silver, jewelry, clocks and watches, arms and armor, books, prints, drawings, needlework and embroidery, oriental carpets and rugs, miniatures and even paintings.

Twenty authoritative authors, each a regular contributor to the British magazine, The Connoisseur, cover their respective fields with compact analyses of subjects, periods and styles. Five hundred and seventy-seven half-tones and 211 drawings illustrate characteristic examples and indicate what to look for when searching for authentic articles. Each division presents a brief history of the subject and this is followed by an alphabetically arranged glossary of descriptions, techniques and terms that is intended to cover the whole ground of the subject considered.

At the end of each section is a list of "Books for Further Reading." This is a decided advantage since with such quick surveys for one volume inclusion no subject could be dealt with extensively and those seeking more specialized knowledge would be disappointed. However, as a guide and introduction this book is informative, practical and easy to consult. It will be of great benefit to all who collect and to those who are interested in antiques and wish to enjoy them.

America's International Role

THE PASSING OF AMERICAN NEUTRALITY, 1937-1941, by Donald F. Drummond. (University of Michigan Press, 409 pgs., $7.50.)

THE FIFTEEN WEEKS, by Joseph M. Jones. (The Viking Press, 296 pgs., $3.75.)

Reviewed by
THOMAS H. ELIOT

"THE United States broke from the isolationist tradition of American thought . . . and assumed a major responsibility in the guidance of world affairs" in "the most crucial years of change:"—1937 to 1941.

"The most revolutionary advance in United States foreign policy since 1823 would occur within the next 15 weeks" — Feb. 21, 1947 through June 5, 1947.

These inconsistent statements appear in two books published this fall. The first statement is the more familiar; it assumes that the totalitarian pressures of the thirties, and the rather gingerly Rooseveltian response to them, brought us inexorably to the position of world responsibility which we hold today. Yet Joseph Jones, in "The Fifteen Weeks," makes a strong case for the proposition that the real change, the permanent one, occurred under the leadership of President Truman.

To take the first book first: "The Passing of American Neutrality," by a Michigan history professor, is a scholarly, heavily foot-noted account of the development of our foreign policy from F.D.R.'s "quarantine speech" until Pearl Harbor. It is valuable because it reminds us that the real devils of the peace were in Berlin, Rome and Tokyo, and not in Washington. Far from suggesting, as have some more emotional writers, that our entry into the war was diabolically plotted by the man in the White House, Prof. Drummond implies that the circumstances often demanded stronger, firmer action by the Administration. On the whole, however, he passes a favorable judgment on Roosevelt's foreign policy.

FAR more exciting is Joseph Jones's book, "The Fifteen Weeks." It is a personal, dramatic, play-by-play account of the conception of the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan. The author, then in the State Department, was a draftsman of the President's message of March 12, 1947, calling for aid to Greece and Turkey and committing us broadly to the defense of the free world.

Today he can still evoke the passionate but controlled excitement, the sense of making history, which stirred him and his colleagues in those tense days. Furthermore, he reminds us that despite Franklin Roosevelt, war, victory and broad uninformed support of the United Nations, we were in fact heading back toward isolationism in early 1947.

Our retreat from responsibility might well have continued if the British withdrawal from Greece and Turkey had not suddenly created a dangerous power vacuum, and if Truman, Marshall, Acheson, and virtually all of the State Department officials most concerned had not decided promptly that we must fill that vacuum.

JONES gives us a graphic inside picture of the process of deciding questions of high policy. He traces the development of the Marshall Plan idea, which was first stated by Acheson in a speech in Mississippi a month before Secretary Marshall made it explicit in his Harvard address.

The author is obviously proud and glad of his own participation in this process, but is also aware of criticisms, especially of the Truman Doctrine. The criticism that bothered him the most, because it came from "internationalists," was that the President's message virtually ignored the United Nations.

Possibly Jones's own work on the Truman Doctrine leads him to overemphasize its significance in comparison with the far more affirmative Marshall Plan. The Truman Doctrine, after all, had a loophole. It committed us only to helping free nations where we considered that such help could be practically and effectively given. It was a lasting but limited commitment.

The Marshall Plan, in contrast, was temporary, but it did the fundamental job that had to be done: it saved the non-Communist European community. Both the Doctrine and the Plan provide overwhelming refutation of the irresponsible talk about "20 years of treason" and "softness toward Communism."

"THE FIFTEEN WEEKS" is exciting reading. It left an especially pleasant taste in this reviewer's mouth, because of its author's attitude toward public servants who carry the great responsibilities of shaping foreign policy. We are prone to be "always belittlin'" our high officials. This is probably a healthy habit.

Nevertheless, it is good to read Jones's not uncritical praise of such men as Truman, Marshall and Acheson, and to sense the spirit of high seriousness with which they met a highly serious challenge.

Family Takes to Wheels at Auction

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

The three children of Mr. and Mrs. William Slovacek, 4062 Schiller place, found something of a bonanza at yesterday's police auction. RONALD, 10 years old, (left) and FATENA, 12, (center) bought these bicycles early for $6 each. VERONICA, 8, had to wait a bit for her chance to bid.

190 UNCLAIMED BICYCLES SOLD AT POLICE AUCTION

Automobiles driving away from Police Headquarters, Twelfth boulevard and Clark street, with a bicycle protruding from the trunk was a common sight yesterday. The reason? Police were auctioning off unclaimed property accummulated in the past year, and it included 190 bicycles.

Police Lt. Walter Ziegenbein, who was in charge of the sale, said the crowd was the largest in recent years. By the time the auction got under way the sale room in the basement of the building was jammed, and the throng overflowed into the corridors.

Bicycle prices scaled downward from a top of $22, paid for a shiny red job which had a front tire missing. An assortment of shotguns and rifles, some of which appeared to be in dubious condition, brought good prices. There were three boxes of shiny hub caps—most of them for Cadillacs—which went for $20.

About $2500 was received from the sale, twice the amount of last year's auction. The money will go to the Police Relief Association.

2000 AFL PAINTERS HERE GET 13-CENT HOURLY BOOST

Two thousand AFL painters in the city, St. Louis county, and East St. Louis will receive an increase of 13½ cents an hour, to $3.08½, Tuesday, it was announced yesterday.

Arthur A. Hunn, secretary of the Painters' District Council, said the increase was agreed on last month in meetings with the Contracting Painters and Decorators Association in accordance with a wage formula in effect since 1926.

The formula provides for the automatic adjustment of the painters' wages, up or down, based on the wage scales of 10 other basic building trades, Hunn said.

TALTON T. FRANCIS FUNERAL IN MIAMI

Services to Be There Tomorrow for Former Broker.

Funeral services for Talton T. Francis, former St. Louis broker and son of the late Gov. David R. Francis, will be held tomorrow at Miami, Fla., with cremation there. Memorial services will be conducted here later.

Mr. Francis, 72 years old, died at his Florida home Friday night, following a paralytic stroke. He was born in St. Louis and was graduated from Yale University in 1907. He then entered the brokerage firm of Francis Bro. & Co., which his father founded in 1877.

He was a senior member of the firm, which had its offices and board room at 222 North Fourth street, when the company was sold in 1942. In 1944 Mr. Francis moved to Coconut Grove, Fla., a Miami suburb.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Francis, of Coconut Grove; two daughters, Mrs. Howard Williams, Sarasota, Fla., the former Jane Perry Francis, Veiled Prophet Queen in 1930, and Mrs. Miriam Francis Ray, Pinehurst, N.C.; and three brothers, Charles B. and Thomas Francis, St. Louis, and Sidney R. Francis, Coleman, Texas.

FINDS FRESHMEN OF 1927 WERE BETTER SPELLERS

CORVALLIS, Ore., Oct. 29 (AP)—Dr. Herbert B. Nelson, head of the English department at Oregon State College, tested this year's class of 1800 freshmen by giving them the same English examination that was given in 1927.

A comparison of the scores, Nelson said, showed the freshmen 28 years ago were better spellers and knew more about formal grammar. Both groups did about the same on sentence usage questions.

Spelling such words as similar, laboratory and apologize caused present day students a lot more trouble than those of the class of 1927, Nelson said.

Students taking the 163-question test in 1927 made an average of 53 errors. This fall the average was 66 mistakes.

STOCK MARKET CHANGES PACE WITH MIXED TREND

Three of Four Price Declines Since Recovery Drive Began Take Place in Week.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP) — The stock market had a change of pace this week and capped its recovery drive with a mixed and sometimes baffling performance. The great fall set off by the Eisenhower illness hit bottom Oct. 11, and since then the market has advanced nine times and declined four. This week saw three of those four declines. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down $1 at $168.90.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 3.62 points in the week to 554.85. The 20 rail index was off 1.35 at 150.10, while the 15 utilities gained .76 of a point at 63.25.)

The week's volume of 8,991,908 shares was a slight increase over the 8,665,559 of the preceding week. A total of 1372 issues changed hands of which 629 were lower, 563 higher and 180 unchanged.

There was a flood of record high earnings and a mass of excellent divident news. But you couldn't tell it by the way the market acted.

Here are some items and the immediate reaction of the stock:

United States Steel raised its dividend. The stock fell.

Bethlehem Steel reported record high earnings and declared the usual dividend. The stock fell.

Standard Oil (N.J.) reported record high earnings. The stock fell.

General Motors reported record high earnings and booming sales. The stock gained only a dollar.

New York Central declared the usual dividend. The stock fell.

Pennsylvania Railroad declared an extra dividend. The stock fell.

Reasons for Reaction.

There were several reasons why the stocks acted as they did. In many cases, speculators and investors had been buying these stocks for days in anticipation of favorable action. Sometimes they built their hopes so high that they would have been disappointed at almost any kind of dividend action taken. The measure of their disappointment was apparent in the selling that followed the news. In other cases, speculators had a profit and sold to turn that profit into cash as soon as the news broke.

One announcement brought joy to stockholders of Joy Mfg. Co., a maker of mining machinery. Directors raised the cash quarterly dividend, voted an extra cash dividend, and declared a 100 per cent stock dividend. The stock immediately jumped up $6.25, a rise of nearly 10 per cent.

Test October Lows.

The week's downward drift of prices in general evoked broker comments that the market was undoubtedly in the midst of a test of the old October lows.

In recent weeks many persons have been looking forward to the present time when high earnings and faborable dividend news could be counted on either to boost the market or brace it against a decline. Now brokers are asking, what will happen when all this news is out of the way?

The five most active issues this week on the American Stock Exchange were Great Sweetgrass Oils up 3-16 at 3¾ on 162,000 shares; Sapphire Petroleum up ¾ at 3 1-16; Eureka Corp. off 1-16 at 2 1-16; Webb & Knapp unchanged at 2½, and British Petroleum up 1⅞ at 16.

Steel Rod Price Rise.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 29 (AP)— American Steel & Wire division of United States Steel Corp. increased by $1 to $4 a ton its prices on hot rolled carbon steel wire rods in sizes 35-64 of an inch and smaller.

How $1000 Grew to $250,000 in A Bank Stock

$1000 invested in 1948 in stock of Franklin Nat'l Bank, a suburban institution, has grown to nearly $250,000 (with stock dividends and stock splits retained). YOU too, can make Rich Profits in bank stocks, the safe, conservative aristocrats of investments. But you must find a bank still in its early Big Growth stage.

Another Such Stock for You?

Our analysts just uncovered such a bank, similar to Franklin Nat'l. It's in an adjoining county whose population jumped 69% in 4½ years while manufacturing plants increased from 327 on Dec. 31, '53 to 710 on Aug. 1, '55. This bank's resources expanded from $44.5 million on Jan. 1, '55 to $79.8 million on June 30. Now 3rd largest bank in a big territory, recent mergers have given it branches in 7 towns. With more mergers pending, the stock of this bank, very active in a rising trend, may offer you great fortune-building potential.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

BIG GUNS HEARD

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP) — THE big guns of United States industry toted up their third quarter profits this week—and the score was never better. Old records were swept aside like dead leaves in autumn. Net income of General Motors was the highest for any third quarter in the country's history; profits for the first nine months nudged the billion-dollar mark after provision of well over one billion for income taxes.

Standard Oil Co. (N.J.), biggest of the world's petroleum giants, reported nine months' net of $532,000,000, up nearly 20 per cent from a year ago. The nation's No. 1 and No. 2 steelmakers, United States Steel Corp. and Bethlehem Steel, jubilantly announced new nine-month highs in profits, sales and production.

Behind many of the fat profits reported by industry this week lay the United States public's insatiable demand for faster, shinier and more powerful autos. Besides lifting GM's profits to unprecedented heights, booming production of cars was a major factor in the record-smashing performance of the steel industry. Record numbers of cars on the road contributed materially to the earnings of the oil companies. Wages paid the millions employed by the auto industry and its many suppliers this year have given a substantial boost to retail trade.

This week, as all of the big automakers plunged full tilt into production of 1956 models, Detroit's major role as a mainstay of prosperity became increasingly clear.

Auto Making Full Tilt.

Steelmakers—pressed to the limit to supply their biggest customer, the auto industry—once again scheduled their operations at more than 98 per cent of capacity. Steel output the week before, with the mills straining at 98.9 per cent of capacity, had been forced to a never-before-attained total of 2,386,000 tons. Industry leaders professed to see no hint of a letdown. Declared Bethlehem chairman Eugene Grace: "We're definitely oversold through the first 1956 quarter now. . . . I feel we're assured of full operations through the first six months next year."

In Detroit itself, a year-end auto production race of fantastic proportions was in progress. Ford aimed for a new weekly record of 39,000 cars; Chevrolet and Buick came back faster after a hurried changeover to 1956 models; Plymouth hoped to turn out more than 20,000 cars to break the record of 19,897 it set last spring. Total production for the week was estimated by Ward's Automotive Reports at 156,052 cars —up 14 per cent from the previous week and 128 per cent from the like week last year. The 1955 production score so far: nearly 6½ million passenger cars, or almost as many as the industry built in all of 1950, the previous record year. With forced-draft operations scheduled right through to New Year's Eve, the industry should wind up 1955 with a production total of around 8,000,000.

Fourth Quarter Record.

For business generally, the outlook this week was for a record fourth quarter which would top any of the three previous quarterly periods of booming '55. Retail sales continued strong, with department store volume running 8 per cent ahead of year-ago levels. Loans to business by leading New York banks were on the upbeat again; freight carloadings were 12 per cent higher than in the corresponding week of last year.

Looking farther ahead, economists predicted continued good business for the first six months of 1956, with a possible slowdown around midyear.

Two major props of the econ-

ALL GRAINS UP, FIRST TIME SINCE SEPT. 23

Technical Situation and Government Action Aids to Market.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 (AP) — All grains advanced on the Board of Trade this week—the first time there has been such unanimity on the upside since the week ended Sept. 23.

The advance wasn't accompanied by any large pickup in trading activity, although there were sporadic flurries of short covering in corn and wheat.

Wheat closed the week 1⅛@3½ cents higher, corn 2⅜@2⅞ higher, oats ⅜ to 1 cent higher, rye 1¾@2¾ higher, soybeans 2¼ to 3 cents higher and lard 25 to 35 cents a hundred pounds higher.

The upturn in corn was the first for this grain in five weeks. In wheat it was the first in four weeks. Of course, the gains weren't enough to get prices back to where they were at the start of this month.

One reason for the gains was the technical situation. After several declining weeks the market was pretty well sold out. It was in line for a rally. But there were other reasons.

Chief of these was the impression on the part of many traders that declining farm prices were going to provoke some Government action. In some areas they had already provoked action.

The Agriculture Department announced it would buy lard and pork products, starting Nov. 7, to help support live hog prices. Besides aiding lard, this news also helped corn. Hogs are the biggest outlet for the country's corn crop.

In the early part of the week cash corn sank to $1.13 a bushel for No. 2 yellow. This was a new low since the same grade corn sold at $1.11 in October, 1949. The cash article still was at a severe discount — about 9 cents — under the December future when the week ended. But the nominal price was $1.18.

There were some other Government actions to help corn prices. One was the fact the Government turned down bids exporters had offered for milo as too low. The Government had been selling milo, which competes with corn in the foreign market, to exporters.

Then, too, the Government announced it had withdrawn its offers of red wheat to exporters. Originally, the Government said it had 4,000,000 bushels for sale. But before half the sum was sold, the offers were withdrawn.

The exporters were obtaining the wheat, which could be used for feed in foreign countries, at a cheaper price than they could get corn in the free market.

Finally, the Government said it would stop selling its corn to exporters and would sharply reduce the amount of off-grade corn it is selling in the free market. This was called a temporary action. Grainmen felt these sales programs were depressing prices.

Another item attracted trading attention. Over the weekend two of the leading candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination came out for price supports at 90 per cent of parity to replace the present flexible price support system.

WEEK'S REVIEW OF BUSINESS AND FINANCE

omy still lagged. Farm income was weakened by falling livestock prices; the construction industry continued to recede from its previous peaks. Building permits issued in September declined in dollar volume from the levels of a year ago for the first time in 14 months.

Expansion Plans.

Hopes for good business were bolstered by new plans for expansion. United Airlines placed a $175,000,000 order with Douglas Aircraft Corp. for 30 huge 550-mile-an-hour jet airliners. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. announced a $115,000,000 expansion program; Wheeling Steel Corp. added $65,000,000 to its budget for new plant and equipment; Bethlehem Steel indicated a multi-million dollar expansion was in the works.

But there was a king-sized beef from Charles Hildreth, president of the National Wholesale Hardware Association. Manufacturers' profits may be booming, he declared, but the wholesaler today can't make a dime. Said he: "Let's have the guts to say 'No' to this rat race for volume without profit for the glory of the manufacturers."

Briefly over the business scene:

Assets of Ford Motor Co. shot past the two-billion-dollar mark in 1954. . . . Directors of Alexander Smith Inc. and Mohawk Carpet Mills approved plans for a merger. . . . The Associated Master Barbers and Beauticians of America, meeting in Boston this week, urged a nationwide minimum price for haircuts. The suggested fee: $2.

CALL FOR COPPER ABSORBS SUPPLY

Zinc Has Quiet Week at Old Price of 13c—Lead Sales Are Light.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—Call for copper for November and December delivery absorbed all of the metal available this week at the producers' price of 43 cents a pound. But demand for January delivery slacked off, particularly at the 45 cents a pound price asked by the custom smelters.

Zinc had a quiet week at the old price of 13 cents a pound, after last week's flurry when three producers tried unsuccessfully to boost the price to 13½ cents.

Sales of lead at 15½ cents a pound were light this week. Producers said the unusually heavy sales of the previous week may have satisfied most of current demand, although some lead users were still seeking prompt shipment and others sought November delivery.

Brass mills, copper wire mills and foundries shipped the equivalent of 113,628 tons of copper in September. They also added heavily to their inventories. Stocks in the hands of fabricators increased from 304,097 at the end of August to 334,996 tons at the end of September. Some shipments were held back because of flood damage to Connecticut brass mills.

Custom smelters reported they have relatively small amounts of copper for sale over the rest of the year. One said it was sold out for the rest of 1955, and others reported being sold out through November.

Demand for prime western grade of zinc was light at 13½ cents a pound. More producers raised the premium for special high grade zinc by a quarter cent to 1¾ cents a pound over the base price for prime western. Five sellers of special high grade have gone to the 14¾ cents delivered quotation.

Consumer buying of tin improved this week and cash tin in London climbed a little. The New York price held at 96¼ cents a pound.

COTTON TEXTILE PRICES TEND HIGHER IN WEEK

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—Rising price tendencies developed in the cotton textile market during the past week as converters found it increasingly difficult to find cloth for delivery this year. This reflected the heavily sold-up position of most mills on lighter weight fabrics.

Volume of sales was small, overall, except for flurries of buying in the popular 80 square print cloth, first at 19½ cents a yard and then at 19¾ cents. By the end of the week most holders were asking 20 cents for this bellwether number. It was estimated a few million yards of this fabric changed hands during the week. Other print cloths, broadcloths, drills and twills sold in a scattered way mostly for fourth quarter. The pace of buying slackened in wide industrial goods but prices were maintained.

GENERAL ELECTRIC TO DEVELOP ROCKET ENGINE for First Man-Made Satellites to be Launched Into Earth's Orbit

It's almost impossible to conceive of a scientific assignment that compares in interest with PROJECT "VANGUARD," — man's first attempt to propel instrument-bearing satellites 200 to 400 miles above the earth's surface, to record hitherto unobtainable information on the nature of the outer atmosphere.

You will share in an intellectual adventure of the first order, if you have a hand in solving the complex problems involved in designing and developing rocket motors for "VANGUARD." This is such an experience as creative scientists and engineers always seek, but seldom find. It will add immeasurably to the professional prestige of everyone concerned.

If your past experience has prepared you to join the group who have pioneered so many achievements in jet propulsion at General Electric, please get in touch promptly with GE. Time is of the essence, for "VANGUARD" is scheduled for launching in late '57 or '58, as the United States Government's contribution to the International Geophysical Year.

PERMANENT POSITIONS
These are permanent positions with General Electric. The success of "VANGUARD" will lead inevitably to ever more ambitious efforts to fill in the great gaps in man's knowledge of the universe around us. And men who do significant work on this pioneering project will be valued throughout the General Electric Company

Assignments for "VANGUARD" at both Cincinnati and Schenectady.

THE LEADER!

Life is a breeze for the average guy.
He never causes a hue and cry.
For the average man, life is just a song.
He can live in peace his whole life long.
But the one who rises above the crowd,
May find his critics many and loud.
On many a shoulder he'll find a chip.
For that's the penalty of leadership.
That ONE small lead and others follow.
Is' the Bitter pill—MOST must swallow.
The path of the LEADER is rocky and hard.
But the price of achievement is his reward.

Ailing Ace Paves Way To Tigers' First Win

Missouri	7	13	0	0	20
Colorado	0	0	0	12	12

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BOULDER, Colo., Oct. 29—Missouri's bearded football players won themselves some badly needed shaves and spoiled a homecoming celebration for favored Colorado with their first victory of the season today, 20-12, before 30,000 spectators who learned what a returning Jimmy Hunter could mean to the Tigers.

Missouri's well-deserved triumph was both a surprise and a disappointment for the season's largest crowd at Folsom field. Colorado's Buffaloes had been expected to atone for their 56-21 loss to Oklahoma last Saturday.

Colorado did make a comeback bid with two touchdowns on desperate passes in the final period after Missouri scored all its points in the first half.

It was Mizzou's first victory in seven games this season for a 1-2 Big Seven conference record. The Tiger players and their coach, Don Faurot, vowed two weeks ago not to shave until they had won a football game. Faurot now has a career record of 14 victories in 17 games against the Buffalos.

Missouri rolled to a 20-0 halftime lead on Hunter's brilliant manipulations with the Split-T offense invented by Faurot. His sharp passes to End Harold Burnine paved the way for all the touchdowns.

What a Difference!

Hunter back in the lineup after suffering a thigh injury five games ago, supplied the spark to a previously stumbling Tiger offense, wrecking the Buffalos, with key passes, scoring two touchdowns and recovering a Colorado fumble on the three-yard line to halt a third quarter home team drive.

Burnine, Missouri's talented target, contributed mightily to the Colorado downfall as he grabbed seven catches for 87 yards, including several clutch grabs en route to all the Tiger tallies.

Hunter and the running Tigers got fine support in the upset from a cold-fingered set of Buffalo backs who lost the ball on fumbles six times to wreck any Colorado offensive threat until the final quarter. The Buffs uncorked a pair of touchdown passes in the waning minutes, but it was a case of too little, too late as the Tigers ended a losing streak of seven straight since last Thanksgiving.

Missouri, picked to lose by 13 points, marched 61 yards in 13 plays for the first touchdown midway through the first period. Halfback Joe Wynn and Fullback Gene Roll handled the ground assignments with Hunter throwing to Burnine for a key 18-yard gain to the Buff 25. Sonny Stringer, who also had been hurt, got into the aerial act with a 10-yard halfback toss to Burnine to the two, from where Halfback Bill Rice crashed over with 10:59 gone. Roll converted and the Tigers were on their way.

Missouri added a pair of touchdowns in the second period and the handwriting loomed large on the wall for Colorado at the half as the Buffs trailed, 20-0, at the intermission.

Stringer launched the second touchdown drive following the Tiger kickoff when he scooped up a deflected Colorado pass

Polkinghorne Turns Quick Kick Into Gain for Bears

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Excellent blocking helped DON POLKINGHORNE (25) of Washington U. turn a strategic quick kick by Washington and Lee into an advantage for the Bears in the second quarter of the game at Francis Field. With the ball on their own five-yard line, the Generals tried to catch the Bears snoozing as Jack Daughtrey quick-kicked. However, Polkinghorne raced back toward his own goal, gathered up the ball on the run and, with help from his teammates, returned about 14 yards to the W. and L. 34. Earlier, Polkinghorne had scored a touchdown. Washington and Lee's No. 51 is DICK JOHNSON.

Prince John Takes World's Richest Race, $157,918 of $282,370

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 29 (UP)—Elmendorf Stable's Prince John, turning back two determined challenges in the stretch, won the $282,370 Garden State Stakes today by nosing out C. V. Whitney's Career Boy in the richest horse race in history.

After battling for the early lead in the mile and one-sixteenth race, Prince John, who never before had won a stakes race, took the lead as the field of 12 crack two-year-olds straightened out at the head of the stretch.

But, with little Jockey Angel Valenzuela in the saddle, Prince John still had his work cut out for him.

Up from the rear charged Career Boy and Needles, the favorite carrying the silks of the D. and H. stable of J. C. Dudley and B. T. Heath.

A crowd of 44,737 roared as Career Boy and Needles made their bids, for Career Boy was second choice and Needles an 8 to 5 favorite while Prince John was an ignored longshot at 24 to 1.

Down the straightaway the three horses pounded with Prince John losing ground slowly but giving up every inch reluctantly. Under that relentless drive, Needles was the first to crack. But then he came on again.

With Jockey Eric Guerin riding, Career Boy still closed the gap but he failed by inches as Prince John flashed under the wire the winner by the length of his nose for the $157,918 major cut of the purse.

The chestnut colt returned $50, $18.80 and $8.20 across the board while Career Boy paid $5.60 and $3.40. Needles, who only was a head farther back, paid $2.80.

Then came Happy New Year, Lawless, Call Me Lucky, Espea, Hohodah, Polly's Jet, Nail, Gun Shot and Bold Bazooka.

Prince John, second in the Sanford Stakes and the Washington Park Futurity, finished the mile and one-sixteenth in a sparkling 1:42 3-5, only three-fifths of a second off the track record and far faster than the 1:46 1-5 it took Turn-to to win the inaugural running two years ago and the 1:45 recorded by Summer Tan last season.

It was Nail, the Belmont Futurity winner, which went to the front at the start with Prince John close up. On the turn, Prince John went to the front while Career Boy still was back in fifth place and Needles seventh.

But the race rapidly turned into a three-horse affair in the stretch and, under the punishing whip of Valenzuela, Prince John hung on to the bitter end.

In seven previous races the colt only had earned $39,900 but now he has gleaned $197,818.50, a fair return for the $14,300 owner Max Gluck paid for him as a yearling.

Air Force Academy Loses Again, 33 to 0

DENVER, Oct. 29 (AP)—Halfback Homer Floyd scored three touchdowns today as his Kansas Jayhawk Freshman football team handed the Air Force Academy Falcons their second successive drubbing, 33-0.

Illinois Is 13-0 Loser To Purdue

Purdue	7	0	0	6	13
Illinois	0	0	0	0	0

By Robert Morrison
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 29—Purdue used the Illinois line for a punching bag today and as a result the Illini suffered their first shutout defeat in six years, 13 to 0.

The Boilermakers discovered they didn't much need the passing of their nationally prominent Len Dawson and stayed relatively close to the ground as they wrecked the homecoming for Illinois fans in a crowd of 61,262.

It was the first time since a 1951 scoreless tie with Ohio State that Illinois failed to tally in a game and the first time since Michigan's 13-0 victory here in 1949 that Illinois had been scoreless in defeat.

Illinois, whose total offense had ranked fourth in the country with a 375-yard-per-game average, was in Purdue territory only three times this dreary, drizzling afternoon during which a sharp, 20-mile-per-hour wind added to the misery.

Illini Held to 83 on Ground.

This time Illinois's rushing attack, which had averaged 255 yards a game, was held to mere 83 yards by Stu Holcomb's team, which itself covered 285 yards on the ground and controlled the game with 82 plays to Illinois's 40.

Purdue's aerial gain amounted to only 67 yards as Dawson attempted only one pass in the second half after completing six out of 10 for the 67 yards in the first 30 minutes of play.

Helping to grind the Illini into the sodden turf were two senior Purdue halfbacks, Jim Whitmer and Jim Peters, as the Boilermakers changed the pattern of their offense away from the passing of Dawson and the plunging of Murakowski.

Whitmer carried the ball for 98 yards and a 5.2 average as he aided in the first touchdown drive of 82 yards, capped by Murakowski's one-yard scoring plunge. Peters, a fresh replacement, lugged it 11 times for 62 yards as he spearheaded the second touchdown march, an 80-yard move topped by Peters's one-yard plunge in the fourth quarter.

Murakowski still was an important wheel horse with 68 yards and a 3.1 average, but he was only a cog and an infrequent draw-play threat as the other backs helped breach the Illini from tackle to tackle.

Only 23 Yards in Air.

Abe Woodson didn't play for Illinois, because of a sprained ankle apparently, and there was little speed or power in the Illinois running attack. As for passing, the net was 23 yards and Hiles Stout committed one of the worst throwing blunders when he threw directly to a Purdue man early in the third period.

It was Murakowski intercepting and returning to the Illini 32, but on this occasion, the Illini held a foot from the goal. Two other times Purdue drove deep into Illini territory only to be stopped. In the second quarter Illinois held on its 13 and at the end of the game time ran out on Purdue reserves at the Illini 22.

But the scoring marches saw the Boilermakers move without mishap as Dawson directed a varied attack and later concentrated on straight handoffs for quick openers.

Early in the game Illinois advanced to the Purdue 18 but

85-Yard TD Run by Bob Ladd as Bears Down Wash. & Lee

By Bob Broeg

The long run, pyschologically devasting as well as physically effective in football, fired up Washington University's Bears and cooled off Washington and Lee's Generals yesterday at Francis Field, where about 7500 homecoming spectators saw the Hilltoppers break away to a satisfying 27-0 triumph.

Wash'ton	0	7	20	0	27

It took not one distant dash, but two to discourage the Virginians' notions of vanishing with a victory, W. & L. suffering its fourth straight setback in a return to the gridiron after a year's layoff for retooling to a program of deemphasis. The Bears' win was their third in six starts.

Even though the only score of the first half came suddenly on a 38-yard bolt over the weak side by workhorse Fullback Don Polkinghorne of Washington U., the visitors left the field at the intermission with a statistical advantage and a perfect right to believe it still was anybody's ball game.

Picks Up Blockers.

But on the opening kickoff of the second half, Wingback Bob Ladd of the Bears gathered in the ball down the center of the gridiron at his 15-yard line, raced to the right sideline and, picking up blocking to indicate that the athletes of Gray Fox Carl Snavely had practiced carefully the clever art of returning kickoffs, Ladd raced 85 yards untouched along the north boundary for a touchdown.

That did it and the Generals went quietly thereafter as Washington picked up two more third-quarter touchdowns and passed up opportunities in the fourth period only because Snavely and his staff cleared the Bears' bench of substitutes. The only times ball-bungling Washington and Lee passed midfield in the second half was going, not coming—on defense rather than offense.

Individual standout for the Myrtle and Maroon on old grads' day was Polkinghorne, the churning-legged little man who whirls, spins and plunges off Washington's single wing. The 18-year-old, 175-pound Normandy sophomore surged for 122 of the Bears' 190 yards rushing, averaging 6.6 a carry.

The Francis Field turf was soft and at times seemed to be a handicap, but the direction of passing indicated the ball wasn't slippery enough to disturb an aerial game. However, passing yardage was negligible on both sides. And Washington and Lee, totaling 163 yards over-all to the Bears' 216, managed only a combined 29 yards on the ground and air in the second half that was all Washington U.

Interception by Polkinghorne

At the ouset, as mentioned, the Generals powered offensively from an exaggerated split-T that gave them first down once on the Bears' 26 and again on the 40 before the home team rose up and stopped 'em. A third time W. and L. entered the danger zone, but Polkinghorne picked off an enemy pass at the Washington 23 on the first play of the second quarter.

The Bears, aided by a 15-yard

SCORES TD, PASSES FOR ONE; NAVY'S FIRST LOSS

Navy	0	0	0	7	7
Notre Dame	0	7	14	0	21

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 29 (UP)—Notre Dame torpedoed Navy dreams of its first undefeated football season today with Quarterback Paul Hornung a one-man show in leading the Irish to a 21-7 victory in a rainstorm before a record crowd of 59,475 fans.

Hornung, 205-pound junior, plunged a yard for one touchdown, passed to End Gene Kapish for 15 yards for another score, intercepted two Navy passes, and crashed for 43 yards in 13 carries despite steady rain and a slippery field.

Most important of Hornung's plays, though, were nine-yard runs on third down for first downs deep in Navy territory on the drive for the first Irish touchdown. On the same march, too, he called a fourth-down run with six yards to go and crashed for seven yards himself to keep the parade alive.

Lewis Tallies No. 2.

Notre Dame's second touchdown went to Sophomore Aubrey Lewis. He romped around end for 11 yards after Navy had to punt from behind its own goal line when Notre Dame was halted on the one on a drive beginning after the second half kickoff.

Dick Guest's punt went out of bounds on the Navy 30, and it took only four plays before the Irish scored to put the game away. Hornung's second pass interception, when he was downed on Navy's 36, set up the last Irish score on Kapish's pass reception. Fullback Don Schaefer, who carried 87 yards on 16 rushes, converted after each Irish score.

In all, Notre Dame gained 323 yards rushing.

The Irish triumph ended Navy's winning streak at nine games, with the victory string beginning after Notre Dame's 6-0 decision a year ago. It was Notre Dame's tenth straight win over the Middies and fifth triumph in six games this year.

66-Yard Middie Drive.

Navy's consolation score today came against Irish reserves in a 66-yard parade requiring 12 plays. George Welsh's passes of 13 yards to Ron Beagle and 17 to Peter Jokanovich, the latter reaching the Irish 2, were the major gains, while Edwin Oldham plunged the final two yards for the touchdown.

Notre Dame threw only six passes, completing three for 18 yards, while Welsh hit on 13 of 25 for 155, but had three intercepted.

The previous Irish attendance record was 59,343 for the Purdue game Sept. 25, 1948.

Notre Dame scoring—touchdowns, Hornung (1, plunge), Lewis (11, run), Kapish (15, pass from Hornung). Conversions, Schaefer 3.

Martinez Kayoes Cuban in Third

BOSTON, Oct. 29 (UP) — Dark-haired Vince Martinez of Paterson, N.J., took another step tonight in his quest for the welterweight crown, knocking out a game Mario Terry of Havana, Cuba, at 2:02 of the third round in a scheduled Boston Arena 10-rounder.

Martinez, on the boxing shelf for the past year because of managerial troubles, toyed with Terry in the first round before dropping him for an eight count in the second with a left jab and a right to the heart. Martinez weighed 150 to Terry's 144¾.

Gophers Upset Southern Cal. In Snow, 25-19

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA	0	0	12	7—19
MINNESOTA	6	0	13	6—25

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 29 (AP)—Weather-hardened Minnesota reveled in a swirling snowstorm today to beat heavily-favored Southern California 25-19 behind the sledgehammer blows of sophomore fullback Dick Borstad.

A homecoming crowd of some 60,000, huddling in 33 degree weather, saw the tenth-ranked Californians outpowered by a team which had won only one game in five tries but which was almost faultless in the face of wretched weather.

Borstad slammed for two touchdowns and blocked a kick which set up one to take the thunder from Southern Cal's great back, Jon Arnett.

The Californians beat previously only by Washington, couldn't marshal a sustained drive until deep in the fourth quarter and stayed in the fight on the strength of long touchdown runbacks by Gordon Duvall and Ernie Merk.

The Gophers grabbed a 6-0 first quarter lead when Bob Schultz scooted 15 yards around end after a blocked kick, and lengthened the margin to 13-0 early in the third quarter when Borstad blasted over from the 3.

The touchdown was the first of three during a wild two minutes. Duvall raced the ensuing kick-off 73 yards to a touchdown, but Gopher quarterback Don Swanson responded two plays later by rambling 65 yards on a keeper play for a 19-6 Minnesota advantage.

Late in the same period Mark took a Gopher punt on the 7 and galloped 93 yards up the sideline to score.

Borstad furnished the clincher from the 4 early in the fourth period and Ells Kissinger tossed four yards to Chuck Leimbach with three minutes left for the final USC touchdown.

MICHIGAN	—	0	0	13	20—33
IOWA	—	—	—	7	7 7 0—21

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 29 (UP)—Quarterback Jim Maddock fired towering touchdown passes to Ends Ron Kramer and Tom Maentz in the final nine minutes today to lead Michigan's high-ranking Wolverines to a dramatic 33-21 comeback victory over Iowa in a nationally-televised Big Ten battle before 72,096 fans at Michigan Stadium.

Undaunted by a 21-13 deficit, Maddock took charge of the Michigan team at its own nine-yard line and cut loose a barrage of passes, with the last one sailing into the arms of Kramer for a 65-yard touchdown which cut Iowa's lead to a single point.

The Hawkeyes, smarting from a pair of 14-13 setbacks at the hands of Michigan the past two years, marched to the Michigan 28 after taking the following kickoff, but the drive stalled with only three minutes remaining.

60-Yard Payoff Play.

Maddock, a junior from Chicago, took to the air again and found Maentz in the open for a winning touchdown pass play which covered 60 yards.

It was the second straight comeback victory for the unbeaten Wolverines, who fought back from a two-touchdown deficit at Minnesota for a 14-13 triumph over the Gophers a week ago. The victory kept Michigan in first place in the Big Ten standings and kept alive its hopes for its second national championship in eight years.

Halfback Tony Branoff streaked 31 yards for still another touchdown in the closing seconds but it was merely icing on the cake after Iowa had gambled with four passes in an attempt to pull the game out of the fire.

The Hawkeyes stunned Michigan by racing into a 14-0 halftime lead and appeared headed for one of the season's most startling upsets. Halfback Ed Vincent ran 23 yards to climax a 62-yard march the first time Iowa had the ball and End Jim Freeman kicked his first of three straight extra points.

Halfback Earl Smith took a Michigan punt on his own 25 and returned all the way to the Michigan 20 to set up a touchdown early in the second period. Halfback Don Dobrino plunged one yard three plays later and the Hawkeyes were ahead by 14 points.

58-Yard March.

But Michigan hit hard at the start of the second half and broke into the scoring when Fullback Lou Baldacci plunged one yard to climax a 58-yard march. Kramer's try for the extra point was blocked. A short Iowa punt which went out of bounds at the Hawkeye 31 enabled Michigan to move within one point minutes later and Branoff fired a 33-yard scoring pass to Maentz, with Kramer converting.

Iowa fought right back for another score after the ensuing kickoff and the Hawkeyes apparently felt secure when Quarterback Jerry Reichow passed 27 yards to Dobrino for the TD.

But Maddock then took charge and touched off the fourth period fireworks which carried Michigan to victory.

JON ARNETT, Southern California back who went into the game as the nation's scoring leader, was as hampered as the rest of his team as Minnesota upset the Trojans, 25 to 19, in a Minneapolis snowstorm. Arnett, who was restricted to one point on a conversion, is the ball carrier being hauled down after a brief gain in the first quarter. MIKE FALLS, Minnesota captain, is making the tackle.

Bob Ladd in 85-Yard TD Run as Bears Beat Washington and Lee unnecessary roughness penalty, promptly hurried 77 yards to score in four plays. Mel Siegel, having just a mild day, missed with a second-down pass, but Ladd skirted end for 16 yards on a reverse. Then on a half-spinner to the weak side, Polkinghorne cracked through a hole opened by blocking Washington lineman and ran past the W. and L. secondary into the end zone. Sauer, destined to score nine points, converted for the first of three times.

Before the half ended, the combined coaching savvy of Snavely, Irv Utz, Lynn Hovland and Frank Noble, teaming from the Washington bench while Les Avery and Frank Lutz manned the field phones upstairs, must have suffered a severe setback. Taking over on their own 47 with about 90 seconds left in the half, the Bears were thrown back and, gambling with shocking recklessness, tried a fourth-down pass that fell incomplete. Washington and Lee, therefore, was handed possession on the Washington 35 with 18 seconds to go, time enough for two or three passes. A long one just missed before Quarterback Jack Daughtrey, returning the unbelievable signal-calling lapse, sneaked unwisely for six yards on a running play that permitted time to run out.

It was on the next play 20 minutes later—the first one after Snavely's half-time observations for the good of the cause—that Ladd broke it up with his lengthy touchdown run.

Free Ball—Sauer's TD.

When W. & L. couldn't gain following the next kickoff, Daughtrey hammered a tremendous 65-yard punt that set the Bears back on their heels at the 17, but just momentarily. They ripped 83 yards in 12 plays, Polkinghorne up the middle and Ladd on reverses carrying to the Generals' five, from where Siegel danced into the end zone, only to fumble. With a free ball, a touchback or touchdown and six points or none at stake, Guard Bill Bollinger and End Sauer covered the ball. And, it was reported from the Bears' bench, Sophomore Bollinger politely permitted Senior Sauer to cradle the pigskin when Referee Earl Jansen threw up his hands in the traditional touchdown signal.

Four plays later a last-down pass from center sailed high over the head of Al Gitter, Washington and Lee punter, who retrieved the ball, but was dropped back on the Generals' three-yard line, where the Bears took over.

On third down, Ken Miles, Siegel's understudy, hammered over to score from just one yard out on a game already won by touchdowns tallied from way out yonder.

Hits Counted.

Pitcher Joe Nuxhall of Cincinnati batted only .198 but his 17 hits during the season drove in 14 runs. He hit three homers.

UCLA Hands California Waldorf's Worst Loss

UCLA	—	—	—	7 20 7 13—47

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29 (AP)—The UCLA Bruins moved another stride toward the Rose Bowl today, using their reserves in the main to smash California, 47-0, in a Pacific Coast Conference game.

The whitewash was the worst defeat suffered by California since Coach Lynn Waldorf took charge at Berkeley in 1947.

Halfback Ronnie Knox, whose transfer from California after his freshman year stirred up an uproar, took the field for the first time against his "alma mater" and turned in a fine performance. He scored two touchdowns and was the passing star of the game. Second-string Fullback Doug Peters also crossed the goal line twice.

Ninth Loss in Row For Alabama, 35-14

GEORGIA	—	—	7	7 7 14—35
ALABAMA	—	0	0	7 7—14

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 29 (UP)—Jimmy Harper, who lost his first-string quarterback job early this season, made a smashing bid to regain it today when he passed for one touchdown, set up another and had a hand in the rest in a 35-14 Georgia romp over hapless Alabama.

Some 29,000 fans saw Georgia give the Crimson Tide its sixth drubbing this year and ninth in a row. It was Georgia's fourth victory against three setbacks.

Don Carter Rolls Into Lead in Tenpin Tourney

Former national match-game champion Don Carter, leadoff man of the Budweisers, rolled a six-game total of 1255 for a first place 16-game count of 3697 to take over the top position in the city match game elimination tourney qualifying round last night at Arway Recreation. Carter, who was not among the top 10 at the end of last week's round, had games of 192, 222, 226, 180, 268 and 167.

Today's tenpin action, afternoon and evening, will complete the preliminary rounds. At the finish the seven top scorers will go into the finals with Billy Welu, champion last year, in a round-robin event next weekend.

And the seven top women bowlers will compete in a similar event with Ann Maloney.

Welu bowled three games left-handed last week but was excused by the Bowling Proprietors' Association because of an arm injury from further participation in the preliminary rounds. For that Bill was duly thankful.

Ralph Metzler, who is tied for sixteenth place with Bill Neiger, 3484 each, rolled a 277 game for the event's new high single mark on last night's 7 o'clock squad.

Mrs. LaVerne Carter, a former WIBC titleholder, regained first place in the women's division with 2259. She rolled 778 for her third four-game block. Mrs. Ethel Hill, who does most of her bowling at Bowl-Mor Lanes, tallied an 823 total during yesterday afternoon's action for the tourney's top four-game series for women. She has 2223 for second place. Mrs. Florence Argent, former match game champion who led at the end of the first eight games, fell by the wayside and came up with 670 for 2159—good for fourth place.

The defending champion, Ann Maloney, had 2101 for ninth place.

Three Touchdowns in Last Two Minutes as Southwest Wins

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

There's No Reason for Marciano-Moore Again.

ROCKY MARCIANO told a reporter in Los Angeles that he would be perfectly willing to fight Archie Moore again if the public wants a rematch and Archie wins a couple of fights in the next few months.

No doubt the heavyweight champion of the world would give Moore another chance with the possibility of another gate approaching the million dollar mark.

But there's no reason for a rematch between the pair.

Everybody who saw their bout in New York would agree that Marciano's knockout victory in the ninth round would be repeated but probably only earlier were Rocky to box Archie again.

No, they had a great fight the first time. There it should rest.

Joe Walcott and Marciano put up a grand bout when Marciano won the championship at Philadelphia with a knockout in the thirteenth round but their rematch in Chicago the following year was a great bust with Walcott going out in the first round.

Rematches are dangerous business. They frequently do much more harm than good.

Marciano also said in Los Angeles that one of his toughest fights is with his wife who insists that he quit the ring.

"I'm not ready to quit," declared Rocky, "and I have told my wife so. I knew when I was ready for the ring. I'll know when to quit but that won't be for a few years."

It will be quite a task digging up an opponent for Rocky by next June. The prospects are few.

Tommy "Hurricane" Jackson seemed to be in line but his loss to Jimmy Slade in Cleveland was a big setback for him.

Nino Valdes is another possibility but his record is very spotty and the same thing is true of Bob Baker of Pittsburgh. Either one of them would have to put on a convincing winning streak within the next few months before he would command public interest for a title match.

TV Bouts Weak.

AS HAD been expected the two bouts on television here during the past week were anything but balls of fire.

Boardwalk Billy Smith proved no match for Johnny Holman of Chicago and was knocked out without too much effort on the part of Holman who, like most winners, clamored for bigger meat after his victory over an opponent he outweighed by about 28 pounds.

Holman will have to do better than that to qualify for a shot at Marciano and Smith showed that it is always a good thing for a boxer to have something to fall back upon. He's an employe of the jail in Atlantic City.

Johnny Gonzalves beat Lulu Perez Friday night but it was a very dull, ho-hum match. There may be some who argue that the decision was wrong but after about the third round it didn't seem to matter much as to who won. No doubt the chief trouble the televiewers had was staying awake.

The TV fare this week promises to be a little better. Wednesday night Frankie Ryff, New York, and Paddy DeMarco, former lightweight champion meet in a 10-round bout at Baltimore Wednesday night which will be telecast over KTVI, Channel 36. These are both interesting performers.

Friday night Bobby Boyd of Chicago and George Johnson, Trenton (N.J.) middleweight, meet in 10 rounds at the Chicago Stadium to take the place of the middleweight championship fight between Sugar Ray Robinson and Carl Bobo Olson which was postponed until Dec. 9 when Robinson reported a sprained ankle.

'Boxer' Rocky.

A HOLLYWOOD columnist writes that Actor Humphrey Bogart and Marciano are great friends. When Bogart's son came home with a black eye, Humphrey turned him over to Rocky for boxing instructions! Fighting instructions? Yes. Boxing instructions. Well, even Rocky admits that he needs them badly.

Joe Walcott, former heavyweight champion of the world, will appear in a film "The Harder They Fall," based on the life of Primo Carnera, the Italian giant who held the world title for a short time.

"I don't know yet how I feel about this acting business," Joe told a reporter, "anyway, I'm not an actor—yet.

"I haven't had my professional gloves on for over two years and I haven't seen a fight since I retired," Joe went on, "I don't even watch on TV, because you know how it is with a fighter, he doesn't go to see what's right, he goes to see what's wrong and the first thing you know he gets ideas about going back into the ring. I don't want that to happen."

Smart guy, this Walcott.

"There It Goes . . ."

Johnny Hopp, new Cardinal coach, once broadcast the St. Louis Muny baseball title game.

Central, Sumner Also Win

By Harold Tuthill

Central High this morning found itself half way home to its first Public League football championship in more than 30 years. Max Carlisle's Redwings pounded out a convincing 19-0 triumph over Roosevelt last night at the Public Schools Stadium to put them three up with three to go.

In the matinee twin bill, Southwest nosed out Vashon, 19 to 14, and Sumner walloped McKinley, 45 to 0.

The situation in the race now is that Central is tied with Washington Tech, each with 3-0, but the Redwings have second division teams to meet—Soldan, Cleveland and McKinley—while Washington has the rougher schedule in Vashon, Sumner and Beaumont.

Last Title In 1923.

Central's last title came in 1923 under Mike Walker, but the school had to forfeit its crown because later it was found to have used an ineligible player.

George Viviano, who did a good job of quarterbacking, also scored two of the Redwing TDs. The third one came late in the game when John Clay Smith blocked a Rough Rider punt and Fred Ryan recovered the ball behind the Roosevelt goal line. Art Moser converted.

Three touchdowns in the last two minutes of the Southwest-Vashon game provided the afternoon excitement. The flurry of tallies came at a time when Southwest trailed, 7-6, near the close of the fourth quarter. Jim Carney scored for the Longhorns to put them ahead but Vashon's Robert Harrison took the subsequent kickoff and returned it 83 yards for a Vashon TD and the Wolverines led, 14-12, with about a minute and a half to go.

A 41-yard pass play from Joe Mowry to Don Jones put Southwest at the Vashon 31. Jim Conklin then broke loose and waded through the mud for the touchdown. Carney converted.

Ups Record to 2-17.

Southwest upped its record to 2-1 in the league and Sumner's easy triumph also was its second in three outings. The Bulldogs struck for four touchdowns in the first half as Earl Thomas tallied one, Clarence Cooke two and Palmer Hubbard one for a halftime lead of 25-0.

Sumner scored three more in the third quarter, Thomas returning the second half kickoff 87 yards for one and Hubbard going three yards for another. A two-yard pass from Richard McGrew to Tom Weathersby accounted for the third and twice the Bulldogs added the extra point on passes.

Assumption's Magac Is Lincoln Nemesis

LINCOLN	—	0	7	0	0— 7
ASSUMPTION		7	6	6	0—19

Quarterback Mike Magac plunged for two touchdowns and passed for the other as well as an extra point as Assumption defeated Lincoln of East St. Louis for the third time in as many meetings last night. The score was 19 to 7.

Magac passed 16 yards to Terry Keeney for a TD in the opening quarter and passed to Jack Kuenne for the extra point. In the second quarter Magac climaxed a 68-yard drive by going over from the one. He again scored from the one in the third period.

A 49-yard gain by Lincoln's Gene Mosley put the ball on Assumption's 13 late in the second quarter and Harold Wayne scored four plays later from two yards out. Mosley then ran the extra point.

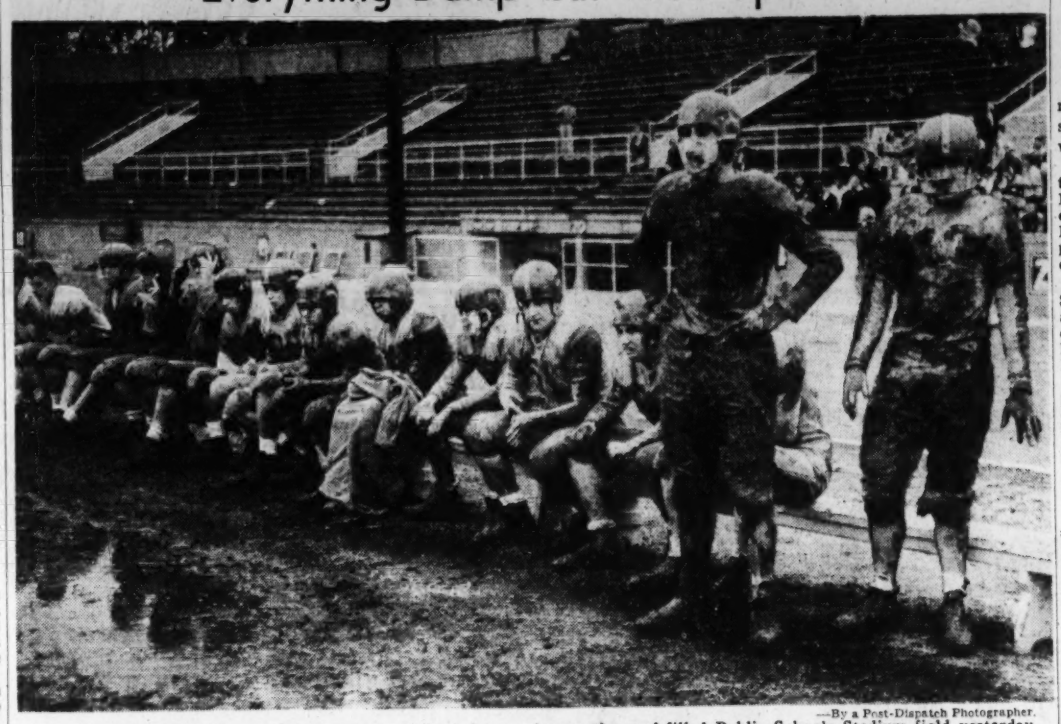
Eagle Day Passes and Mississippi Beats L.S.U.

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 29 (AP)—Mississippi used the pinpoint passing of Quarterback Eagle Day and the deadly kicking of Halfback Paige Cothren to bypass a stubborn Louisiana State university line tonight for a 29-26 football victory.

But the Rebels had to fight off a furious fourth quarter rally by LSU that netted two touchdowns. As the game ended, LSU was throwing desperation passes from midfield.

Everything Damp but Their Spirits



—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Two Southwest High players stand ready to go back into action on the mud-filled Public Schools Stadium field yesterday, despite uniforms that are thoroughly soaked. At far right is FRED HARRISON and next to him is JERRY GLEASON, while a bench load of dry reserves waits for a chance to play. Southwest rallied to defeat Vashon in the closing minutes of the Public League game, 19 to 14.

Princeton Holds Brown, 14-7 4th Ivy Victory

BROWN	—	0	7	0	0— 7
PRINCETON	—	7	7	0	0—14

PRINCETON, N.J., Oct. 29 (AP)—Dick Martin, a solid, hard-working fullback of the type that makes Princeton's single-wing attack effective, held the faltering Tigers together long enough to gain a 14-7 decision over Brown today.

It was Princeton's fourth straight Ivy League victory, and although the Tigers dominated the game almost from start to finish it didn't add much to their luster. Princeton made a lot of use of substitutes who didn't come close to performing as well as the first-stringers and as a result Brown was in the game right up to the finish.

Martin scored only one touchdown and an extra point, but he was Princeton's solid man all the way. He and Sid Pinch, the little senior tailback, were the ones who were rushed into the game when Princeton was in trouble and who were called upon when yards were needed. They usually were effective. The fullback was the big ground-gainer with 101 yards on 21 carries.

and returned 12 yards to the Buff 27. Once again Hunter unwound a vital heave to Burnine, who took the ball to the five for a 12-yard gain. Hunter needed only two carries from the four to make it 13-0 and Roll again converted with only three seconds gone in the second period.

Colorado Wingback Mel Warner, who fumbled three times in the first half, started the Tigers to their third tally when he dropped the ball on the Buff 32, where End Larry Plumb fell on it for Mizzou.

The Tigers, penalized back to the 43 for unsportsmanlike conduct, covered that distance in eight plays with the Hunter-Burnine passing combination eating up first 11 yards to the 32, then 18 yards to the 14. Roll and Wynn took the ball to the three, from where Hunter again punched it over in two carries. Roll's conversion attempt was wide to the right, but the Tigers had enough points to win with 6:40 left in the half.

Colorado moved to its first touchdown from the 14, going 86 yards in nine plays. Halfback Bob Stransky passed to End Frank Clarke for the final 27 yards. But a low snap from center wasn't handled and the Buffs couldn't get a conversion attempt underway. They were reeling hopelessly with only 10:31 left.

The Buffs, with time running out, covered 68 yards in three consecutive passes for the final touchdown, which only served to narrow the gap to eight points. Halfback Homer Jenkins threw to Leahy for 25, to Warner for 20 and to Leahy for 23 and the touchdown. Jenkins' conversion attempt was wide and the Tigers ran out the final minute and 14 seconds.

Michigan State Romps Over Wisconsin, 27-0

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 29 (AP)—Michigan State, with sophomore Walt Kowalcyzk gobbling up more yardage than a runaway steam shovel, smothered Wisconsin 27-0 today and remained within striking distance of the Big Ten football championship.

MICH. STATE	7	6	0	14	—27

The heads-up Spartans scored their four touchdowns—two by Kowalczyk—on just 14 plays in cold, steady rain at Camp Randall stadium before a capacity Badger homecoming crowd of 53,529.

The victory gave Michigan State a 3-1 conference record and virtually eliminated Wisconsin from contention. The Badgers have lost two of four Big Ten starts.

Kowalszyk, a 5-11, 198-pound halfback, accounted for 172 yards on 10 carries—including the fantastic total of 140 yards in the first half when he raced 72 yards with a handoff for the touchdown that put the Spartans out in front.

Later, in the fourth quarter, he grabbed another handoff—on almost the same play, a slash off left tackle — and scampered 24 yards for his second score and the Spartans' third.

Kowalczyk had a hand in that second score, too, intercepting a pass by Jim Haluska and running it back to the Wisconsin 39. His running mate at halfback, Clarence Peaks, plunged over eventually from the two six plays later.

Third-string quarterback Jim Ninowski completed the rout in the fourth quarter with a 16-yard scoring pass to Bob Jewett.

The Perryville team, which has an overall record of four victories and a 13-13 tie with Valle High of Ste. Genevieve in its league opener, plays Chaminade next Sunday.

STANFORD, Calif., Oct. 29 (UP) — Stanford whipped San Jose State, 34-18, today in a loosely-played game before a crowd of 33,000 which included a group of Russian newspapermen who had enough after the first half.

The Soviet scribes departed with the Indians riding on a 27-0 cushion, thanks to the passing of Quarterback John Brodie. Brodie passed for one touchdown, set up two others with fine passes and engineered his team on a 66-yard drive for a fourth.

OKLAHOMA	—	21	12	7	0—40
K-STATE	—	—	0	0	7— 7

MANHATTAN, Kan., Oct. 29 (AP) — Moving relentlessly towards an Orange Bowl date, the Oklahoma Sooners whistled past Kansas State's Wildcats, 40-7, for the twenty-fifth successive football victory before a homecoming gathering of 18,500 today.

Clendon Thomas, a 185-pound sophomore from Oklahoma City, made two of the six Sooner touchdowns as Coach Bud Wilkinson's second unit scored three times to divide offensive honors with the starting crew.

Here's how the Oklahoma scoring went:

1—Jim Harris, seven yards on eleventh play, climaxing 78-yard drive.

2—Thomas, four yards after K-State fumble on Kansas State's 18.

3—J. O'Neal, three yards after a weak punt gave the Sooners the ball on the K-State 26.

4—Tackle Cal Woodworth went 25 yards on a pitchout interception.

5—Thomas, from the four, climaxing a drive of 98 yards.

6—Tommy McDonald from the nine after a 58-yard drive.

Billy Pricer and Carl Dodd each kicked two extra points for Oklahoma.

Bob Whitehead of St. Louis, Kansas State's fine little quarterback, scored from the 1-yard line for the only tally in the last quarter. Jim Rusher kicked the extra point.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 29 (AP) — Halfback Willie Greenlaw paced Nebraska's Cornhuskers to a 19-to-14 Big Seven victory over Kansas before 31,000 here today.

Kansas scoring—Touchdowns: Buller (1, plunge), Held (11, run). Conversions: Handley 2.

stalled. Purdue came right back with its 82-yard scoring push, completed in 11 plays.

Dawson's jump pass to Erich Barnes got 14 yards at the Purdue 43. Three plays later his throw to Leonard Zyzda, senior end, made 12 at the Illinois 34.

But that was his last pass in the drive. Whitmer swept right end for 20 at the Illinois 14 and in four plays through the line Purdue scored, Murakowski going over.

In the second quarter Purdue's Jim Brideweser, punting with the wind, kicked out of bounds on the Illinois five, and that eventually helped a bit as Purdue started from its 27 and moved to the Illini 13-yard line in 13 plays. There however, Ray Nitschke and George Walsh stopped Dawson's attempted fourth-down sneak barely short of a first down at the Illinois 13.

Late in the third quarter Nitschke intercepted a Dawson pass at the Illinois 40, but the Illini made only one first down before giving up the ball when Nitschke punted out of the end zone.

Purdue marched right down the field from its 20. Peters carried the ball nine times for 54 yards in that 80-yard advance. Whitmer set up Peters's plunge with an eight-yard run to the one. Dawson, who had converted after the first touchdown, missed this time, but it didn't matter.

Illinois took the next kickoff and moved 36 yards to the Purdue 30 before Soph Halfback Bob Mitchell fumbled and Brideweser recovered. But this didn't mean much, for Purdue obviously had its third victory wrapped up, to go with its two losses and a tie.

In Big Ten play the Boilermakers have a 2-1-1 mark. The Illini are 1-3 in the league and 3-3 overall, with Michigan coming up next.

Petitions in Western Part Of State Rap Faurot but Ex-Tiger Here Defends Him

Petitions seeking dismissal of Don Faurot as University of Missouri football coach are being circulated in the western half of the state and have reached St. Louis, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday.

The petitions purportedly originated with Tiger alumni in Kansas City and St. Joseph, though bearing no individual's name as responsible.

One petition was received by Clair (Butch) Houston, fullback on Faurot's first Missouri team in 1935 and now an elementary school principal and football official here. Houston said he had been asked as an alumnus to seek signatures favoring Faurot's ouster as coach.

"I threw it away," Houston explained, "because in my opinion Don has done too much for the Missouri athletic program to receive such treatment."

The 53-year-old Faurot, a Mizzou alumnus who has coached his alma mater since 1935 except for three war years in the Navy, also is athletic director at the state university. The petitions are understood to seek his dismissal as football coach only.

Teams Won 97, Tied Seven.

Although Missouri went into yesterday's game at Colorado with seven straight defeats—six of them this injury-riddled season—the Tigers under Faurot have won 97 games through the upset at Boulder, lost 71 and tied seven, playing increasingly tougher schedules under a middle-of-the-road athletic policy in which Faurot has limited recruiting to home-state and Missouri area players.

Under Faurot's administration the Tigers have won three conference championships and played in five post-season bowl games. The athletic program, heavily in debt when he took over at Columbia, has wiped out the red ink on both Memorial Stadium and Brewer Field House. The stadium seating capacity has been increased to nearly 40,000 as part of approximately $1,000,000 in football profits.

As creator of the Split-T formation, used now by more colleges than any other method of football offense, Faurot reportedly turned down coaching jobs at Ohio State and Southern California among other schools. Among active coaches, his longevity at one major institution is exceeded only by Lou Little at Columbia University in New York. A panel of 55 national sports writers recently named Faurot among 28 all-time great coaches.

14 of 20 From K.U.

Since Faurot's return to Missouri U. after coaching nine years at Kirksville (Mo.) Teachers College, the Tigers have won 14 and tied two of 20 games with their traditional border rival, Kansas. But Missouri fortunes have dipped the last five-plus seasons during which the Tigers have won 23 games, lost 32 and tied two.

Discontent was expressed after a crushing 74-13 defeat at Maryland last Thanksgiving day, the disgruntled maintaining Faurot had lost his zest for recruiting and influence with boys. Perhaps significantly, the present Missouri freshman team is regarded as the best in years.

After the 1954 season Faurot was reported to have been willing to resign as coach and remain as director if he could name his successor and make provisions for loyal long-time assistants, but the rumor has been denied.

At that time the university athletic committee directed him to remove Maryland from the schedule as quickly as possible, but increased his salary $1000 to $14,500.

Scoring Record By Vereb

MARYLAND	13	0	7	7	—27

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Oct. 29 (AP) — First-ranked Maryland, with steady Ed Vereb's three touchdowns setting the pace, jumped to an early lead today and rolled to a 27-0 football victory over South Carolina.

Vereb, 185-pound halfback from Pittsburgh, put the awesome Terrapins ahead early by carrying for all but 10 yards of a 59-yard drive and scoring from three yards out. It tied the old Atlantic Coast Conference scoring record of 54 points, and his two later touchdowns set a new record of 66 points, which he has on 11 TDs.

While Vereb and his teammates were running wild, the rock-ribbed Maryland defense was holding the Gamecocks in almost complete check before a homecoming day crowd of 23,000.

The win was the twelfth straight for the Terps, who have not lost since Miami beat them midway of the last season. South Carolina has won but two of six games this season.

For the day's work, Vereb had this to his credit:

111 yards rushing for 13 carries, a 9.3 yard average; one pass for 13 yards; one interception, and two punt returns for a total of 12 more. Also his scoring.

The first touchdown came after four and a half minutes. Howie Dare took a 10-yard pass from Halfback Dave Nusz seconds before the first period ended to cap a 53-yard scoring drive.

Vereb scored in the third period by squirting through center for 10 yards, and raced 19 yards for his final score after two minutes of the final period.

Suicide Leap Mars William-Mary Win

VMI	—	—	7	6	0—13
WM. & MARY	6	0	7	7	—20

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Oct. 29 (AP) — William and Mary, beaten in five previous starts, kicked up their homecoming heels today and downed Virginia Military, 20-13, in a football game marked by a bizarre halftime death.

In a southern conference football game witnessed by 10,000, W & M scored all its touchdowns on long drives, the winning 81-yard march coming in the early moments of the final stanza when Halfback Charlie Sidwell rammed into the end zone from the one.

The tragic footnote was written when a mental patient at Eastern State hospital here climbed to the top of one side of the stadium and, before the horrified eyes of the spectators, leaped to his death on the ground outside.

Marquette Gains 3rd League Victory

Marquette won its third straight Catholic League game yesterday beating Chaminade, 20 to 14.

Marquette's first two touchdowns came as the result of Chaminade fumbles on the loser's two- and five-yard lines in the third quarter. Larry Keshner of Marquette took the first one over from the two and later in the quarter Bob Dwiggens of Marquette went 5 yards around left end after Marquette recovered another Chaminade bobble.

Earlier in the same period Bob Pryor of Chaminade returned a Marquette punt 60 yards for a touchdown. Gil Effinger ran the point after touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, Gil Effinger of Chaminade took a 30-yard pass from Jack Carmody and carried it over. He also ran the extra point. In the same period, Larry Keshner went around right end for 37 yards and a touchdown for the winners. He ran for the point after touchdown.

Yale Stops Passer Beagle To Bag Dartmouth, 20-0

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 29 (AP)—Rebounding Yale, paced by its touchdown twins, Dennis (the Big Menace) McGill and Al Ward, tallied three times in the second half to blank Dartmouth, 20-0, for its fourth straight Ivy League triumph.

YALE	—	—	—	0	0 7 13—20

The Elis managed to handcuff Bill Beagle, the nation's leading passer, at critical moments in turning in a convincing victory, twenty-fourth over the Indians in a 39-game series that goes back to 1884. Dartmouth has won 11 and four have ended in ties.

It was McGill who sent Yale in front and turned Dartmouth's V-formation attack into a Yale V-for-Victory. The North Bergen (N.J.) lad raced 69 yards around his left end to tally in 9:43 of the third period.

Yale added two more touchdowns in the final quarter when Ward plunged over from the two and Dick Winterbauer tossed to Nolan Baird, a pass-and-run play that covered nine yards. Winterbauer kicked both extra points.

Arkansas Surprises Texas A. & M., Gains 7-7 Tie in Southwest

SMU Is Upended By Texas

TEXAS A.&M.— 0 0 7 0—7
ARKANSAS — 0 0 0 7—7

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 29 (UP)—The Arkansas Razorbacks gave the Cotton Bowl officials reason to breathe easier today as they tied league-leading Texas A&M, 7-7, before a 27,000 Homecoming crowd.

The sophomorish Aggies—ineligible to play in the Cotton Bowl this year because of an NCAA ruling—led the Razorbacks going into the final period and came within a hair's breadth of losing the game.

With a minute left to play, Arkansas had the ball on the Aggie 31-yard-line and the score was tied 7-7. The Razorbacks blundered when they failed to call time out and were penalized twice while trying to get a field goal kicker into the game. The Southwest Conference game ended before the ball was snapped.

Outgained 134 yards to 52 in the first period, Arkansas evened up the statistics a bit in the second quarter. With Quarterback John Crow dominating ball carrying, Texas A&M marched to Arkansas' 34 on one series of plays, and to the 15 the second time it had the ball before losing it on downs in the first period.

Arkansas's first unit started the second quarter and marched to the Aggies' one-foot line. They needed six inches for a first down and 12 inches for a touchdown, but were unable to move it in three plays and the Aggies took over on a penalty on the fourth down. Arkansas held on its 10-yard line to stop the Aggies' biggest quarter scoring threat.

Taking the second half kickoff, Coach Bear Bryant's Aggies marched 59 yards in 13 plays with a Jimmy Wright to Lloyd Taylor pass covering the last 10 yards for the score. Taylor converted. The drive took nine minutes and 20 seconds.

The Razorbacks, with fourth down and two on the A&M 31, clicked as Quarterback George Walker passed 28 yards to Halfback Preston Carpenter to keep the Arkansas hopes alive. It took four downs, but Walker finally sneaked over for the touchdown. Walker converted to tie the game, 7-7.

Alert Texas Seizes On Mustang Fumbles

S.M.U. — — 12 0 6 0—18
TEXAS — — 0 13 6 0—19

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 29 (UP) — University of Texas ball hawks turned three Southern Methodist fumbles into springboards for comeback touchdowns today and rode to a 19-18 upset victory on one true-toed conversion try by Halfback Joe Youngblood.

For the second straight game, Coach Ed Price's resurgent Texas team let the opposition pile up a wide yardage margin in the statistics, yet pulled out the all-important points on the scoreboard.

Sophomore halfback Walt Fondren figured mightily in the victory that tumbled SMU out of the Southwest Conference lead before a homecoming crowd of 46,500 as he flipped a 23-yard scoring pass to End Ed Kelley and pulled down a 10-yarder from Joe Clements for another in a second quarter uprising.

Delano Womack scampered 21 yards for the clinching Texas touchdown early in the third quarter after Quarterback Charley Brewer had set the stage with a fumble recovery on the SMU 39. Youngblood's all-important conversion came after the first Texas touchdown.

A 21-yard sprint by Halfback John Marshall and a 47-yard pass-run play from Quarterback John Roach to End Willard Dewveall had set SMU roaring into the lead in the first quarter, but each time Tackle Tommy Beal's extra point try was wide.

SMU ground out 224 yards rushing to 117 for Texas and gained 163 yards passing to 80.

Swanky Swink Sends Baylor Into Spin

Baylor — — — 6 0 0 0— 6
T.C.U. — — — 0 7 7 14—28

WACO, TEX., Oct. 29 (UP)—Texas Christion University, paced by the elusive field running of Halfback Jimmy Swink and Quarterback Charles Curtis, defeated a Baylor team weakened by the loss of three of its regulars, 28 to 6 today.

Baylor Coach George Sauer earlier in the week ousted three starters, his center and both guards, for breaking training rules. He also ousted two substitutes.

The loss showed today. Baylor didn't have it, and Swink and Curtis ran wild. Curtis accounted for two touchdowns and Swink weaved 65 yards on one run to set an individual season scoring record for his school and keep T.C.U.'s conference title hopes alive.

Playing before 34,000 fans, Swink dashed to the sideline, checked himself and looked back at would-be tacklers as he drove over the goal. The score boosted Swink's season point total to 81, breaking the total team record of 78 set by T.C.U.'s Cy Leland in 1929.

Swink was almost the whole show for T.C.U. as he boosted his rushing yardage total for the season to 851 yards by totaling 158 yards today. His season figure broke T.C.U.'s team mark set in 1949 by Lindy Berry.

C.B.C. Game Canceled.

The Country Day-C.B.C. football game scheduled yesterday afternoon was canceled because of the muddy field at C.B.C.

Kentucky Wins 20-16 Thriller

RICE — — — 6 0 3 7—16
KENTUCKY — 7 0 6 7—20

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 29 (AP)—Quarterback Bob Hardy twisted through the Rice line for a dramatic 12-yard touchdown run to bring Kentucky off the floor to a 20-16 football victory today.

Hardy's daring kept alive a 64-yard scoring drive when on fourth down and 10 to go on the Rice 42 he fired an 18-yard strike to End Bradley Mills. Hardy put over the clincher with three minutes and 40 seconds left and Kentucky then staved off a desperate last-minute passing attack by Rice.

Fortunes changed swiftly in the last half and Rice twice took the lead, first at 9-7 on a 22-yard field gold by Jerry Hall and later on a 15-yard touchdown sprint by Page Rogers.

But each time that Kentucky was down, it found a counterpunch, first in Dick Maloney's 43-yard run around right end with a pitch-out and finally with Hardy's game-winning score.

The wild last half was in direct contrast to the defensive battle in the first two periods that saw Kentucky drive 72 yards with the opening kickoff to score in 12 plays and Rice move 64 yards to a score in 14 ground movements.

Hardy got Kentucky's first touchdown on a one-yard sneak and John Nisbet went the same distance for the first Rice score.

Ducks Check In Early in St. Charles County.

ST. CHARLES COUNTY had more early-fall ducks last week than in any corresponding period in many years. An aerial check by Frank Bellrose of the Illinois Natural History Survey disclosed the presence of an estimated 15,200 pintails, 7750 mallards, 6000 green-winged teal, 600 widgeon and 500 ringnecks.

The ducks were found, for the most part, in the lakes of the shooting clubs north of the Missouri river. From a low-flying plane, Bellrose observed that one club had about 7000 pintails and 5000 mallards.

These birds came in with a moderate flight arriving from the north last Sunday and Monday, but the big push is yet to come, he said.

Bellrose saw very few ducks along the Mississippi river, from the junction with the Missouri river north to Keokuk, Ia. Most of the St. Charles county birds apparently flew over from the Illinois river valley, which now has an estimated 352,000 waterfowl, he told Outdoors.

Many at Illinois Refuges.

Although there were only 800 birds in the Batchtown (Ill.) area, a big concentration had moved into the nearby Flat and Swan Lake refuges on the Illinois.

In these two refuges, Bellrose spotted 14,000 mallards, 3150 pintails, 9500 green-winged teal, 6500 widgeon, 1300 bluebills, 3500 blackjacks, 800 canvasbacks, 375 gadwalls, 500 Canada geese and 2500 blue and snow geese.

Of the 352,000 waterfowl in the Illinois valley, from Grafton to La Salle, 39 per cent were mallards, 29 per cent bluebills or scaup, 16 per cent pintails and 4 per cent green-winged teal.

"For some reason, the dabbling ducks—mallards, pintails, widgeons—have arrived earlier than usual, while the divers—canvasbacks, bluebills and blackjacks—are a little late," Bellrose said.

He added that the mallards are just beginning to arrive in this area in sizable numbers.

St. Louisans Get Moose.

Four St. Louis sportsmen have returned from a Canadian hunting trip in which they killed three moose and four deer.

Those in the party were Don Brehm, 322 Linum lane, Webster Groves; Dr. A. C. Wiemers, 2622 Minnesota avenue; Leslie Shires, 1512 East Swan circle, Brentwood and Walter H. Gerst, 1040 Bernice avenue, Kirkwood.

Brehm, in the first shot he ever took at a moose, downed a big bull that weighed more than 1000 pounds.

The camp was at Red lake, Ontario, 245 miles north of International Falls. Most of the hunting was done on Cedar river, 30 miles from camp over two portages. The St. Louisans lived four days in a tent.

Two full days were required to process the three moose and make the portages back to camp. Two trailers were used to return the game to St. Louis.

John J. McCue, 4996 Fairview avenue, writes that he saw numerous coveys of very young quail on a week's trip to the Bull Shoals lake area near Isabella, Mo.

"I was surprised to see so many late hatches and the number of birds in each covey as they broke across the road or out of the edge of the timber," McCue said.

"The hunters will have a lot of birds to work on this year, but would do better if they can spare them a few more weeks down there to get more meat wrapped around those tiny 'jet' engines."

McCue, who was accompanied by his wife on the trip, said fishing at Bull Shoals was poor.

"We did have good weather and took a nice bag of gray and fox squirrels at sun-up on several days," he added.

The quail season in Missouri will begin Nov. 11 and remain open until Dec. 31.

Coach Sees Hawks a 1-2 Team; Five Lettermen on Billiken Squad

He Rates Ft. Wayne Only Club With Edge

Bill (Red) Holzman, heading his Hawks into the final week of training for the league opener with Minneapolis next Saturday night at Kiel Auditorium, said yesterday St. Louis's professional basketball team was "immeasurbly improved" over the one that represented Milwaukee a year ago.

"I mean it," said the former City College of New York and Rochester Royals' backcourt star. "This team is immeasurably improved over the one which opened last season at Milwaukee and good enough, I believe, to run one-two in our division."

The Hawks finished last in the four-team Western Division a year ago, but now defending champion Fort Wayne is the only one Holzman would give an edge. "And that's because," he said, "they've got both experience and talent, though the experience could bring a collapse. The Pistons are getting old."

To explain his enthusiasm for his team—and he's not a demonstrative man — the Hawks's coach noted that only three of the players who opened last season at Milwaukee were still in pro basketball's big league. They would be Capt. Bob Harrison, Chuck Share and the 1954-55 N.B.A. Rookie of the Year, Bob Pettit.

"You can see," Holzman observed, "that we did a thorough housecleaning after losing 20 of our first 25 games last year. We got Frank Selvy when Baltimore folded, made other additions and played about .500 basketball the rest of the season, but the price of the poor start was last place."

Holzman's optimism is based on the seasoning of sophomore stars Pettit and Selvy, plus a rookie crop considered so good that, as he put it, "four or five are going to make our club and that's most unusual."

The rookies who've made a showing are Duquesne's Dick Ricketts, No. 1 draft choice; Notre Dame's Jack Stephens and Michigan State's Al Ferrari, selected second and third, and two sleepers, Dayton's Chris Harris and Missouri's Med Park.

"One, I'm afraid, will have to go when we cut down to the 10-player limit by Dec. 1, and right now it would be a shame to cut any of them," Holzman said, "but I've got to keep enough seasoned and steady players—a reliable big man like Alex Hannum, for instance—to assure balance on the team."

Miami Strikes Quickly in Rain To Upend Pitt

MIAMI	—	—	14	0	0 7—21
PITT	—	—	0	7	0 0— 7

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 29 (AP)—Miami, striking with the force of a hurricane, struck for two quick touchdowns in the first quarter and scored again in the closing seconds to whip Pitt 21-7 today in the rain and mud at Pitt stadium.

The victory ended a two-game losing streak for the Hurricanes and snapped a two-game winning streak for Pitt, which only last week upset previously unbeaten Duke.

A homecoming crowd of 40,117 saw John Varone scoot 31 yards for the first touchdown. Quarterback Sam Scarnecchia connected on a 41-yard pass play to Jack Losch for the second.

Scarnecchia scampered three yards for the final score to climax a 65-yard drive in the last quarter. He also passed to Lisch for one conversion.

Pitt scored with only 26 seconds remaining in the second quarter on a one-yard plunge by fullback Tom Jenkins.

Miami, mixing one pass with eight ground-chewing efforts, moved 76 yards for the first score after Pitt failed to gain on the initial kickoff.

Varone, on a reverse around left end, faked Ray Dipasquale at the 15 and raced into the end zone.

The second touchdown was a nifty 41-yard pass from Scarnecchia to Losch who sneaked behind Pitt's defenses on about the 20 and scampered over unmolested.

Scarnecchia hit Losch after a 15-yard penalty gave Miami the ball on Pitt's 41. The penalty was invoked when Whitey Rouviere signaled for a fair catch and was hit by a Pitt tackler.

Oklahoma Aggies Use Laterals on Tulsa, 14-0

OKLAHOMA A&M	0	7	0	7	—14

STILLWATER, Okla., Oct. 29 (UP)—Oklahoma A. & M. scored its first victory of the season by blanking fumble-plagued Tulsa, 14-0, in a Missouri Valley conference game before 16,000 here today.

Both Aggie touchdowns came on lateral plays, one of them after a Tulsa fumble was picked out of the air.

Aggie quarterback Tom Pontius faked the Tulsa left end into crashing, then flipped a lateral to halfback Harvey Romans, who went eight yards for the first score.

A Tulsa fumble snapped in the air followed by a lateral paid off for a 78-yard score in the final period.

Billiken Starters, On Their Marks

Holleder Passes to Three TDs, Army Rolls Over Colgate, 27-7

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 29 (AP)—Don Holleder made critics of his passing eat their words today by throwing three touchdown forwards and scoring once in Army's 27-7 ramble over Colgate.

The rangy 6-2 Army quarterback from Webster, N.Y., who was moved from end to backfield by Coach Red Blaik for the 1955 season, finally emerged from his half season of passing futility. The fast-charging Army line gave him plenty of time to get set for his left-handed pegs.

Just to emphasize his graduation, Holleder pitched one touchdown pass 30 yards to Ralph Chesnauskas, a former tackle who was converted into an end during the week. Holleder threw to art Johnson for 42 and Mike Ziegler for eight yards in his other scoring efforts. He had raced 12 yards around his left end on a "keep" play for the first Army touchdown.

In five previous games, the much-criticized Holleder had connected with only six of 31 passes for 90A yards and had four tosses intercepted.

Against Colgate, Holleder completed seven of nine for 181 yards and the three touchdowns and carried the ball 10 times for a net gain of 61 yards. All season he had picked up only 180 yards, both passing and running, but in this one game he rolled for a total of 242 yards in a brilliant effort.

ARMY	6	7	14	0	—27
COLGATE	0	0	0	7	— 7

Colgate, a late-scoring team all season, clicked for a touchdown at 7:44 of the final period on a seven-yards pass from Guy Martin to End Kevin Conwicke. Martin's placement added the point. Chesnauskas converted three times for Army.

Colts 14, Packers 10.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 29 (AP)—Long Gone Dupre joined his rookie mate, workhorse Alan Ameche, to run the Baltimore colts to a third-period touchdown tonight for a 14-10 victory over the Green Bay Packers and undisputed second place in the Western Conference of the National Football League.

Beagles to Run At Busch Area

The St. Louis Beagle Club's thirty-third annual field trial will open Wednesday and run through Sunday at the August A. Busch Wildlife Area at Weldon Spring. Entries for the American Kennel Club-licensed event have been received from as far north as Pennsylvania and Wisconsin and as far south as Tennessee.

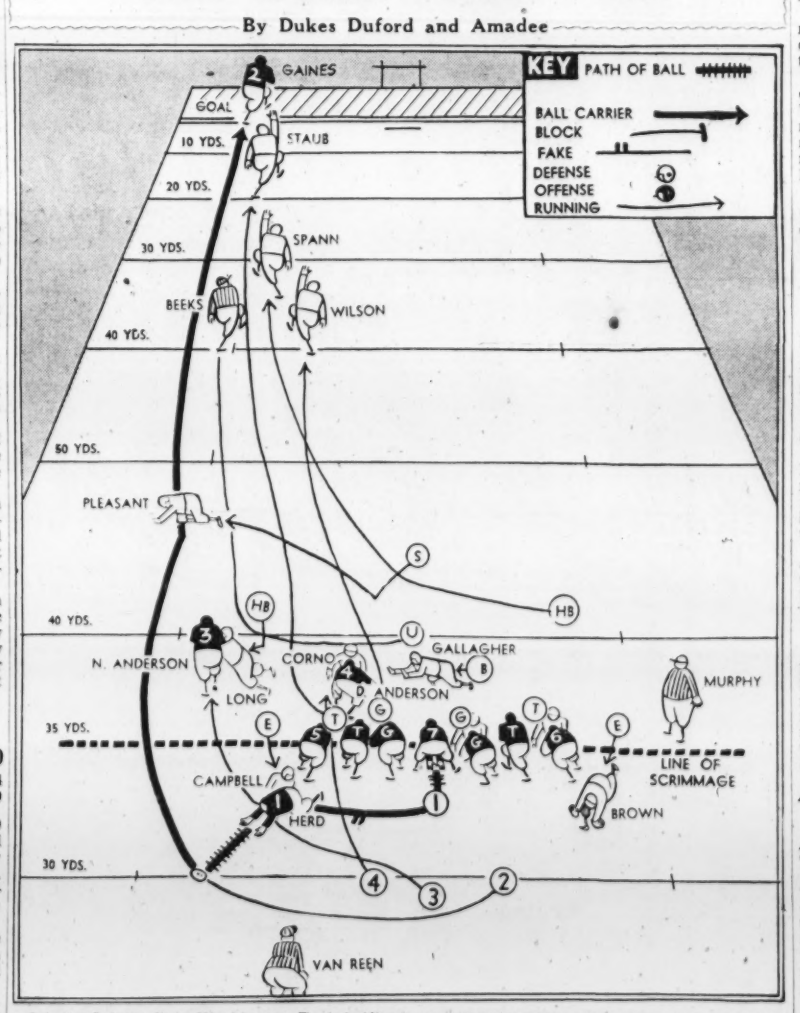
The St. Louis club has come a long way since the spring of 1922 when its first trial drew only 26 dogs. The club's records show that 2790 of the little hounds have been entered in the 28 field trials held at Weldon Spring since 1952, for an average of 100 dogs per trial. The average for the last three years has been 230 dogs, with the largest entry list in 1953 when the total was 292.

Joe Orlowski and R. Audley Dowler of Pennsylvania will judge this year's event.

The 13-inch female trial will be run Wednesday and Thursday, that for 13-inch males Friday, for 15-inch males Saturday and for 15-inch females Sunday. Drawings will be made at 8 a.m. each day at the area headquarters. The trials are open to the public.

Tech's Gaines, Soldan's Loss

By Dukes Duford and Amadee



Jehoda Gaines, fleet Washington Tech halfback, contributed a 65-yard touchdown run to help the Golden Lions defeat Soldan in a Public High League game, 32-0. Tech, using a T-formation, had the ball on its 35-yard line, facing Soldan which was in a 6-2-2-1 defense. Quarterback Donald Herd (1) took the ball from Center Willie Terry (7) and faked a handoff to Left Halfback Lloyd Anderson who plunged straight ahead. Herd moved to his left behind his own line until he was tackled by the defensive end, Bill Campbell. Herd then flipped a pitchout to Gaines (2) who trailed the play around the left end. After receiving a timely block from Teammate Nick Anderson, the fullback (3) who took out the defensive right halfback, Gaines outran the Soldan defenders to the end zone.

Practice To Open Tuesday

Only two seniors, eight juniors and six sophomores will comprise the 16-player squad reporting to Coach Eddie Hickey when St. Louis University basketball drills begin Tuesday. The Billikens will have had the benefit of almost five weeks training when they open their 1955-56 season against Louisiana Tech at Kiel Auditorium Dec. 3.

Five lettermen are on the Blue and White roster, including Capt. Jim McLaughlin, 6-4; Grady (Puxic) Smith, 6-1, and Joe Todd, 6-4, all starters on last winter's team. Smith and McLaughlin are the seniors and Todd is a junior. Other lettermen returning are Juniors Harold Alcorn and Don Stanton.

Ohio State's Margin Over Wildcats 49-0

OHIO STATE—	14	14	7	14	—49

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29 (UP)—Ohio State sent six men across Northwestern's goal line today to blast the Wildcats, 49-0, and keep the Buckeyes in the thick of the Big Ten title fight.

The victory was Ohio's tenth in a row in conference competition and left the Buckeyes and Michigan in a neck-and-neck race for the Western Conference crown.

Ohio State struck for touchdowns three of the first four times the Buckeyes got the ball, then turned loose an impressive bunch of reserves who completed the rout before 82,214 homecoming fans.

Ohio State scored in every period, but the fans got the biggest kick out of the third touchdown, when big Jim Parker, the Bucks' outstanding 248-pound guard, snatched John Rearden's fumble before it touched the ground and lumbered 40 yards for a touchdown.

Northwestern, usually a testy foe for Ohio, was no match for the Buckeyes today. The Wildcats failed to penetrate beyond Ohio's 44 until late in the final period when Bob Zamzow completed a long pass to Bob Apel on Ohio's 12.

All-America Halfback Howard (Hopalong) Cassady opened the Ohio State onslaught with a 29-yard off-tackle smash for a touchdown in the first period. He added another in the second period on a three-yard plunge. The efforts gave him 106 points, only 15 short of the all-time record set by Ohio State immortal Chick Harley, almost 40 years ago.

Cassady sat out the second half.

Ohio ground out 395 yards rushing while the stingy Ohio defense gave up only 166 yards to the Wildcats.

Ohio State scoring: Touchdowns, Cassady (29 run, 3 run); Williams (5 run); Parker (40 run); Roseboro (1 plunge); Cannavino (4 run); Brown (2 pass from Ellwood.) Conversions, Kriss 6, Sutherin.

$100,000 Stake To Mister Gus

SAN MATEO, Oct. 28 (UP)—Mister Gus, a stretch-running son of Nasrullah and ridden by Willie Shoemaker, won the $100,000 William P. Kyne handicap today as he set a new track record for a mile and one-eighth at 1:47 4-5.

Bet down tot a 2-1 favorite, Mister Gus collared the front-running Bobby Brocato and won going away by one and one-half lengths. Arrogate was third.

It was the first stakes victory ever scored by Mister Gus. And the $48,000 he won today brought his lifetime earnings to $129,050.

Nasrina Wins at Jamaica.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—Howell E. Jackson's Nasrina, big handsome daughter of Nasrullah, scored a handy triumph in the $86,700 Frizette stakes for 2-year-old fillies at Jamaica today. Noors Image was second and Cosmah third.

AUBURN	—	—	0	0	0 13—13
TULANE	—	—	7	7	7 6—27

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 29 (AP)—Gene Newton threw two touchdown passes today in guiding sizzling Tulane to a 27-13 upset victory over Auburn, the nation's eighth ranked football power.

Newton kept Tulane spirits soaring and his fired-up mates allowed Auburn to cross midfield only once before the final period. He got Tulane off to a running start late in the opening quarter with a three-yard touchdown pitch to End Will Billon, before a homecoming crowd of 35,000.

No Dissension In Family, Say Griffith Heirs

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP)—The family of Clark Griffith today described as "false and utterly without foundation" rumors of dissension in the family over control of the Washington Baseball Club.

"The family is united in the aim to carry on the great tradition of Clark Griffith," the family said in a statement.

Griffith, 85-year-old owner-president of the Senators and co-founder of the American League, died Thursday night after suffering a massive stomach hemorrhage followed by other complications.

One of the largest gathering of baseball personalities since Babe Ruth died is expected here Monday for funeral services.

The Griffith family, disturbed by newspaper accounts of the possible future of the Senators, issued an unusual statement today which said:

"There has been speculation in the press as to the contents of the will of Mr. Clark Griffith in relation to his holdings in the Washington baseball club. Since the document is in the hands of the registrar of wills and will not be read to the family until later this week, it is suggested that this speculation is premature and much of it incorrect. After the will is read to the family, it will be made available for the convenience of the press.

"In regard to rumors of dissension in the family over control of the club, these are false and utterly without foundation. The family is united in the aim to carry on the great tradition of Clark Griffith."

Control now passes to two adopted children, Calvin, who is executive vice president, and his sister, Thelma, who is the wife of pitching Coach Joe Haynes.

Bowl-Conscious Georgia Tech Smothers Duke

GEORGIA TECH	—	—	14	0	0	13—27

ATLANTA, Oct. 29 (INS)—Georgia Tech, bidding for bowl consideration, was untouchable and unstoppable today as the Yellow Jackets bowled over the Duke Blue Devile, 27-to-0.

It was all Tech—in the line, on the ground and in the air—and the greatest margin of victory for the Jackets in this meeting in 22 years. It was the first shutout since 1947.

The Jackets converted a recovered fumble into a touchdown in the first four minutes of play and raced 58 yards to another two minutes later.

Tech scored twice again in the final period, once on an interception and then in the closing moments on a 54-yard, 11-play excursion.

But the story was not in recovered fumbles and interceptions. Tech, on booming punts and accurate placements, kept Duke deep in its own territory, and the Blue Devils never really got going.

The Jackets rolled 238 yards on the ground to 86 for Duke and buzzed 65 yards in the air to 47 for Duke. Georgia Tech made 17 first downs to only three for Duke.

RIVERVIEW	0	6	0	6—	12
COYLE	6	6	0	7—	19

Riverview Garden's hope of an undefeated season was wrecked by Coyle, 19 to 12, in Riverview's final game yesterday on the Kirkwood field.

Riverview had won its six previous games, while Coyle had won one and lost four. Coyle is a member of the Catholic League.

Jim Venegoni scored twice in the first half for Coyle. He went 65 yards to the end zone in the initial quarter and in the second quarter he took a pass from Joe Moschner good for 26 yards and another touchdown.

Riverview's Jim Gaffney evened the score with a 55-yard touchdown run in the second quarter and a plunge into the end zone from the three in the fourth period. Later in the quarter, however, Coyle's Moschner wound up a drive by hitting through center for the final three yards. Ed Wagner kicked the extra point.

Today It's Chicago's Falcons

By Dent McSkimming

One of the more interesting features of the series of intercity games that Kutis soccer club is conducting is the variety of styles employed by the visiting teams. For example, the Harmarville (Pa.) team, beaten last Sunday, 3-1, disclosed a defense pattern that had not been seen here in years. It didn't stop Kutis, but it presented a problem.

Philadelphia's Uhrik club had its own way, too, of tying up the St. Louis forwards, and Pittsburgh's Morgan team made some moves that were different, if not always effective.

Now comes Chicago's clever Falcon club, different from the others in that it stresses the typical Central European style of play. The truly international character of soccer is illustrated in the mixed origin of these Falcon players who easily fall into a common pattern.

Fortunately, Center Murphy, now an American citizen, does not have to talk to his forward mates — except with his feet. That's a language they all understand very well.

Italian Costanzo Federico, America-born Gene Petramale and England-born Ray Fryer, goalie and fullbacks, need no interpreter, nor do the halfbacks, Zenon Semp (Poland), Barney Jonca (Poland) and Reggie Simpson (England).

All Manager John Zdebski needs to make himself fully understood in his clubhouse talks is a piece of chalk and a blackboard.

Play in the intercity match, at Oakland Stadium, starts at 2:30, with a preliminary between Muny teams at 1 o'clock.

Women and children will be admitted free.

Prep Football Player Dies of Game Injuries

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Oct. 29 (UP)—Harvey Crye, 17-year-old senior end from South San Antonio high school, died early today of injuries received in a football game last night.

Crye, after catching a pass early in the game, was tackled while still in the air, turned a flip and hit the ground head first.

Coach Kenneth Young first believed that Crye only had the breath knocked out of him, but wouldn't let him remain in the game as he asked.

Crye walked off the field alone, and then fell over while sitting on the bench a few moments later.

A doctor in the stands removed him to an Eagle Pass hospital where he died, evidently of a brain hemorrhage.

Cry was also a basketball and track letterman.

South San Antonio lost the game to Eagle Pass, 33-8.

'Not Today'---'I Sure Will'

HARRY KEOUGH, Kutis center halfback (left) today faces one of the country's most prolific soccer goal getters in ED MURPHY, center forward of the Chicago Falcons. It's Harry's job to hold Murphy scoreless, something he failed to do a year ago when Murphy scored twice for Chicago. The match will be at Oakland Stadium. Keough and Murphy were teammates when they played for the United States in a three-game series at Reykjavik, Iceland, recently.

Harvard Rallies to Gain 26-26 Tie With Bucknell

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 29 (UP)—Fullback Bob (Model T) Ford ran more like a Rolls Royce to score three touchdowns today as surprising Bucknell gained a 26-26 tie with Harvard before an estimated 9000.

Harvard had to come from behind with a fourth-period touchdown and extra point to stave off Bucknell's unexpected performance.

The visitors from Lewisburg, Pa., trailed, 19-7, at the half but exploded with three touchdowns in the third period to roar ahead.

Ford, 200-pound senior from Collingswood, N.J., scored on rushes of two, three and five yards. Two of the scores were in the big third quarter.

Harvard's tying score came early in the last period when Bob Morrison raced 28 yards on an end-around play to cap a 70-yard march. Bill (Bing) Crosby booted the tying point. Crosby, who had added nine consecutive points-after prior to today, had his first two conversion attempts blocked.

Harvard scoring: Touchdowns—Joslin (30, run); Simourian (12, pass from Botsford), Stahura (1, rush), Morrison (28, run). Conversions — Newell, Crosby.

Bucknell scoring: Touchdowns—Ford 3 (2, rush; 3, rush; 5, rush), Sierer (5, run). Conversions—Stewart 2.

Clayton Racks Up Fourth Straight Shutout Victory

Clayton's undefeated Greyhounds scored their fourth straight shutout yesterday, defeating Principia, 13 to 0, in a non-league battle on the Principia field. Clayton was tied by John Burroughs in its opening game.

The Greyhounds share first place in the Suburban League Little Six with Ladue, both teams owning 3-0 league records.

Normandy Trips Ladue, 24 to 13, For Sixth Win

NORMANDY	—	0	18	6	0—24
LADUE	—	—	0	7	0	6—13

Good big men still beat good little men, and the same applies to high school football teams. Yesterday, the Suburban League Big Six's Normandy tore into the Little Six powerhouse Ladue and won, 24 to 13, in a non-league match on the Ladue field.

Normandy, which is just one of several contenders in the Big Six despite its overall season record of 6 and 1, took most of the doubt out of yesterday's game with three touchdowns in the second period.

Ladue had lost once previously this season, to John Burroughs, but has a string of 13 consecutive victories going in league play, including three this year. Last year Normandy, which had a poor season, lost to Ladue, 20-13.

Jim Massey opened Normandy's second-quarter splurge when he scored from the seven. A 25-yard pass play from Bob Meyers to Tom Cooper accounted for the second touchdown. Meyers passed 15 yards to Tom Toeniskoetter for the third.

Meyers figured in a Viking touchdown for the third time when he sneaked over from the one in the third quarter.

Ladue scored on a pass from Bob Lurie to Howard Stemme good for 50 yards. John Schattyn kicked the extra point. John Camie went nine yards for the other TD after taking a pitchout from John Smith.

St. Paul Up Against Sorrows Eleven in C.Y.C. Soccer Game

The bid of Our Lady of Sorrows team for runner-up honors in the C.Y.C. "traveling" soccer league faces a real test today in the match with St. Paul, to be played at Carondelet Park. When the O.L.S. team knocked off league-leading St. Ambrose, 1-0, two weeks ago, it was looked upon as a potential flag winner. But, last Sunday, it was held to a 1-1 draw by St. Agatha and now must whip St. Paul to get back into the thick of the fight.

It's still a very tight race in which the largest difference in score in 12 league games has been 4 to 0.

League-leading St. Ambrose today faces young Holy Rosary team at Fairground.

Muny Directors Order Soccer Game Replayed

Stronger clubs are matched with weaker teams in the Municipal soccer program today but there is a possibility of close competition in a coupe of the games.

Scott Air Base team, bounding forward from a victory last Sunday, could worry Spanish Society team, but another triumph for the Airmen would be an upset. The Cal Gage, Tabacchi and Carondelet teams appear to be headed for triumphs.

Municipal League executive committee members went completely overboard in upholding a protest by the Dogtown Amvets who challenged the right of Carondelet club to its 6-1 victory of Oct. 16. Dogtown spokesman pointed out that the referee misinterpreted the throw-in rule, penalizing players who stepped on the sideline in making the throw. Years ago, this was forbidden and the ball reverted to the other team. But the current rule permits the thrower to have his feet "on or outside" the line.

Instead of just acknowledging the referee had made a mistake (or a half dozen of them) and issuing a bulletin warning all referees to be more careful about throw-ins, the committee penalized Carondelet club by throwing out the game and ordering it replayed. The committee members are Art Claeys, Harry Crawford Sr., Tom Placke and John Turner, with Cecil Rodriguez, delegate to the Central Council, acting as chairman.

Laboure Tests St. Mary Today

Unbeaten and untied St. Mary's will go after its third Catholic Athletic Conference football victory this afternoon when it opposes the surprise team of last weekend, Laboure, on the DuBourg field at 2:30 o'clock. DeAndreis will be at Mercy in another C.A.C. game at the same time.

Mercy was upset by Laboure last Sunday, 13 to 8, so the St. Mary's team will be expecting no easy time. The Dragons were able to overcome Mercy by just one touchdown more, 12 to 0, when they met a week earlier.

McBride 13-0 Over Du Bourg

McBRIDE	6	0	0	7—	13

DuBourg High gave McBride a far tougher battle than it did St. Mary's a week ago, but was nevertheless a 13-0 victim yesterday in a Catholic Athletic Conference game on the losers' field. Rufus Davis scored both of McBride's touchdowns, one in the first quarter and the other in the last.

St. Mary's, which shared the C.A.C. lead with McBride prior to today, walloped DuBourg, 51 to 6, last Saturday.

A pass from Quarterback Ted McMillan to Davis resulted in an early 65-yard touchdown play for McBride and McMillan set up the other score with a 30-yard toss to Davis that put the Colonnaders on the DuBourg seven. Davis plunged the final yard a moment later. Charles Jasper kicked the extra point.

McBride now has a season record of five victories and one defeat, including three straight wins in league play.

Western Maryland Beats F. and M., 13-9

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 29 (UP)—A pair of Western Maryland halfbacks, one with a slingshot arm and the other with radar pass catching abilities, led their team to a 13-9 victory over Franklin and Marshall here today before 5000 homecoming fans.

Halfback Dick Holbrunber fired two touchdowns to his running mate, Joe Shilling, standing in the F. & M. end zone to provide the winning margin.

McCrarys Seek Third Win in Muny Football

Johnnie Dawson's McCrarys will try for their third victory in as many starts when they meet the Goodfellow-McLaran Merchants in the 3 o'clock game on today's Muny football doubleheader at the Forest Park drill grounds.

In the 1 o'clock opener the V.A.C. Raiders (0-1) oppose the Monkey Juniors (1-1).

The Merchants, a late entry, dropped their first game, 18-0, to the Monkeys last Sunday.

The Raiders' injury list is mounting. Tackle Jim Jones is out for the season with pulled knee ligaments. Quarterback Rich Graham has an injured ankle and ends Bill DePrender and Marv Marion sore knees.

An addition is Bud Morgan, a tackle who was with the Raiders last season.

Proposal Would Bar Early Inter-School Prep Scrimmages

High school football teams that hold inter-school scrimmages prior to the opening game each each fall may find them outlawed.

That is one of three new regulations that will be voted on at a meeting of the Missouri State High School Activities Association, governing board of prep athletics, in St. Louis Thursday. Other proposals would restore state championships in cross-country, wrestling and swimming and would increase the annual registration fee of high school athletic officials.

The meeting will be held in connection with sessions of the Missouri State Teachers Association.

For more than a decade the carefully planned growth of the Crosley Government Products Division has been making Cincinnati the Electronics Center of the Midwest. Crosley's immediate expansion program offers numerous opportunities in many fields. Present plans call for continued expansion during the next ten year period.
The Crosley Government Products Division is a member of the AVCO Manufacturing Corporation — a family of famous names including Crosley Broadcasting, Crosley Appliances and Electronics, Bendix Home Appliances, Lycoming, American Kitchens, New Idea Farm Equipment and Horn Manufacturing Company.

WHAT IS CROSLEY DOING NOW

Crosley's Engineering Staff has been engaged in the design and development of a selected diversity of electronics equipment; such as, Radar, Sonar, Gunsights, Transmitters, and Receivers. During recent years Crosley has gone into new applications of electronics and is doing Research, Advanced Development and Product Engineering in Guided Missiles, Gyros, Magnetic Amplifiers, Servos, Computors, Radar, Infra-Red Radiation, Detection Nucleonics, Transistors and Human Engineering. In addition, Crosley is one of the largest producers of Fire Control and Air Navigational equipment. These programs enable Crosley to place engineers in positions which offer them responsibilities and challenging opportunities for unlimited growth.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOU

The people on Crosley's engineering staff have progressed because Crosley has been successful in its many fields of activity. This success also creates the need, today, for new members in our organization. There are openings at all levels of education and experience for individuals with backgrounds in any of the following: Electronics, Electro-Mechanics, Mechanics, Physics, Mathematics, Optics, Technical Writing, Packaging or Illustrating. These opportunities are in existing groups as well as in new groups now being formed.

WHAT YOU CAN EXPECT

The Crosley Engineering organization is divided into small groups to give every employee individual consideration and the opportunity to secure the position for which he is best fitted. In evidence of Crosley's successful employee relations program, Engineering Personnel turnover is but a fraction of 1% per year. Crosley offers top salaries, substantial group insurance and retirement benefits, a subsidized education program and modern air conditioned work areas which boast the latest engineering equipment and facilities. Transportation expenses for you and your family and your household belongings will be paid by Crosley.

WHERE YOU WOULD LIVE

Greater Cincinnati is located on a sweep of the Ohio River and is surrounded with charming residential sections on the hills overlooking the city. Educational facilities in Cincinnati are unlimited. The University of Cincinnati has an enrollment of approximately 14,500, half of which are enrolled in evening courses leading to Bachelors, Masters and Doctors Degrees. Active scientific and professional societies provide a common meeting ground for people of mutual interests.

Cultural activities include the Cincinnati Zoo Opera which presents many of the well known operas and operatic stars of today. The Cincinnati Public Library is second to none and is considered to be one of the best housed and equipped in the Midwest area. It is also the home of the Cincinnati Redlegs National League Baseball Team and is the scene of Boxing, Hockey and Broadway Theatrical presentations. There are many golf courses, public swimming pools, public parks and playgrounds which offer recreation for the entire family.

A pleasant climate and neighborly people are what make this a fine city in which to make your permanent home.

Liberty to Test 'New' Meramecs in Khoury Soccer

The "new" Meramec team, one that scores goals as well as plays nice football in midfield, gets its first big test of the Khoury Soccer League season in opposing Liberty at Fairground Park this afternoon. In two previous league games, Meramec, with a strengthened lineup including some recent importations from Germany, defeated Craigs, 7-2, and Trojans, 10-0, and then picked up two free goals when the P.N.A. club failed to appear, last Sunday.

Meanwhile, Liberty has won two straight after dropping the season's opener to Simpkins. The addition of Ollie Bohlman has tended to settle the Liberty backfield which has a bright star at left fullback in Sammy Davis.

Simpkins, with all regulars going in top form and a recently arrived young Greek, Pantelis Mezinis, at outside left, look too strong for Craig Club in today's game at Carondelet. Simpkins and Liberty are both using a novel forward-line formation designed to combat the three-backs defense game. Coach Fred Haake of Liberty and Manager Joe Numi of Simpkins both report satisfactory results from the experiment.

Khoury Juniors Start Today.

Junior soccer was given a lift with the formation of the Khoury Junior League which will play its opening games today. Using Fairground No. 3 and Carondelet No. 2 fields will be the following clubs: Waterson Boys (managed by Russ Waterson); the George Oldanis (Vic Berra); Tabacchis (Bill Schneider) and Fifth District (Carl Ward). Games will start at 12 noon, each Sunday. Syl Raftery is the league commissioner.

Saindon at Wiesbaden.

Wayne Saindon, who several years ago was regarded as one of the better young forwards here, was in the welcoming committee that greeted Russ Murphy when the latter reached the U.S. Armed Forces Olympic soccer tryout camp at Wiesbaden, Germany, last week. Saindon, attached to the Navy's submarine base at San Diego, Calif., retained his soccer touch during the last year by playing with California teams. Saindon, as a member of the Seco club, helped win the U.S. Junior championship for St. Louis in 1951, when Seco beat the Midway club of Philadelphia, 5-1, in the final. His teammates that day included Bill Eppy, Joe Fragale, Mickey McHugh, Dick Meisemann, Russ Murphy, Jack Menke, Paule Purcillie, Tom Rogers, Tommy Schultz, Pete Traina and Bob Whitehead.

Khoury Meeting at Columbia.

The Khoury baseball program will be explained at a meeting at Hickman High School in Columbia, Mo., Sunday at 2 p.m. for those interested in forming affiliated leagues. Groups from Sedalia, Marshall, Boonville, Brookfield, Moberly and Jefferson City will attend the session. George Khoury, founder of the leagues, will speak.

Japanese Players Not Ready for American Majors, Says Frick

TOKYO, Oct. 29 (AP)—Japan's baseball players are "not ready for the American major leagues yet," Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick said last Hong Kong.

"But two or three could play in the high class minor leagues," he added.

Frick and Mrs. Frick planned to spend four days vacationing at Hong Kong. They are scheduled to fly to the States Monday.

Basket Teams Needed.

Two teams are needed to complete leagues in Muny basketball's senior men's open division. One team would play Friday nights, the other Sunday afternoons — at Sherman Park. Call or write the Muny office, 2319 Hampton avenue, Room 104, MI. 7-4374.

40 Noted Modern Print-Makers To Be in Washington U. Art Show

Each Sending an Entry of His Own Choice to Important Exhibition Assembled Here.

Etchings, engravings, woodcuts and lithographs by 40 of the world's foremost living print-makers will go on public exhibition Wednesday at Givens Gallery on the Washington University campus, it was announced yesterday.

The display is entitled "The Washington University International Invitational Print Exhibition." Selection of artists to be represented in it has been a long-term project of Dale Haworth, art history teacher who is in charge of university exhibits, with the advice of artists who teach at the university's School of Fine Arts.

This show differs from others in the Givens Gallery and Brookings Hall sequences sponsored by the university in that this time the art work has not been obtained from a single source or from several nearby sources but has been assembled directly from the artists themselves, whether living abroad or in this country. Each participating artist will exhibit a print of his own choice.

Among Europeans to be represented will be Henry Moore, British sculptor, and Stanley William Hayter, who in his studios on both sides of the Atlantic has taught print-making techniques to leading American and European artists.

Others who will take part are Mauricio Lasansky, American print-maker and teacher of print-making, who is a former student of Hayter's; Fred G. Becker, Washington University print-making instructor and formerly a leader in Hayter's New York atelier; Werner Drewes and Charles Quest, Washington University painters and print-makers whose graphic art work has been chosen for numerous circulating shows in Europe.

Among others participating are Helen Phillips, wife of Hayter; Ben Nicholson of England; Hans Erni, Switzerland; Bernard Schulze, Germany; Enrique Zanarto, France, and Peter Grippe, New York.

Hours of the Givens Gallery are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The show will close Nov. 23.

Fred Conway Commissioned in Hallmark Contest.

Fred Conway, teacher of advanced painting at Washington University, is among 50 American and European artists who have been given commissions of undisclosed amounts to take part in the third International Hallmark Art Awards Contest, it was announced yesterday.

The show, consisting of water colors on Christmas themes, will open at the Wildenstein Gallery, New York, in mid-December and will later make a tour of American museums. Prizes, which will be awarded in addition to the commissions, total $6500.

In the first Hallmark competition, a 1949 oil painting exhibition, Conway split $7500 in a tie for first place with Edouard Goerg of Paris. Conway, Louise Horwitz and Jean Flowers, all of St. Louis, all won prizes in the 1952 Hallmark water color show, which visited the City Art Museum.

Jurors Named for Art Fair of People's Center.

Charles Nagel, City Art Museum director and honorary president of the People's Art Center, will serve as jury chairman for the center's annual Art Fair, to be held Nov. 14, 15 and 16 at the Church of the Holy Communion, 7401 Delmar boulevard, University City.

Also on the jury that will judge paintings submitted will be William N. Eisendrath Jr., assistant to the director of the museum, and Aimee Schweig, St. Louis artist.

Jurors for sculpture entered will be Hillis Arnold, sculptor who teaches art at Monticello College, Godfrey, Ill., and Elizabeth Phelan, Ladue sculptor. For craftwork, the jurors will be Agnes Baer, Vera Pirie and Majel Chance Obata, all St. Louis area designers and craftsmen. Proceeds from the fair will be divided between participating artists and craftsmen and the center, which will place its share in its building fund. The center is a United Fund agency at 3657 Grandel square.

Marie Taylor to Open Solo Exhibit in Memphis.

Marie Taylor, St. Louis sculptor and painter, will open a solo show Tuesday at the Brooks Memorial Gallery, Memphis, Tenn. Included will be eight large oils and 10 pieces of sculpture in marble, granite and wood.

The exhibition, a project of the gallery's educational department, will include Miss Taylor's written statements of her aims and starting points in each piece shown. The display will close Nov. 17.

New Orleans Museum Sells William Bauer's $300 Oil.

"Solace," an expressionist painting by William Bauer, St. Louis artist, has been purchased for $300 by a visitor to the 1955 Art Association of New Orleans Exhibition at the Delgado Museum, New Orleans, officers of the museum announced yesterday.

The picture, which was part of the show until it closed Oct. 23, is similar in style to the artist's "Leaping Horse," which won a prize in the 1953 New Orleans exhibition and was chosen also for the 1955 Illinois State Fair Exhibit. H. D.

RECEPTION AFTER CONCERT

Mrs. Evelyn Mitchell, who will perform the first movement of the Grieg A minor piano concerto with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra today, will be honored at a reception following the concert at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Blake Jr., 6331 Alexander drive, Clayton.

A member of the faculty of the St. Louis Institute of Music, Mrs. Mitchell won the special Austrian prize at the International Chopin Competition in Warsaw in 1937. She has appeared as soloist with symphony orchestras in Vienna, Budapest, Prague, Chicago and St. Louis.

APPLES RED TO THE CORE PRODUCED BY JAPANESE

TSURUTA, Japan, Oct. 29 (AP)—Kenzo Maeda, 74 years old, has harvested 50 apples with the deep-down blush, red to the core.

The crop of one hybrid tree climaxed years of experiment. He said his orchard within a few years would produce in market quantities.

Maeda predicted "great popular demand" for the new variety, based on "pure esthetic appeal." The apples taste just like the old-fashioned kind.

WORK IS RESUMED AT LEAD FIRM PLANT

Action Follows Agreement Between Company and Union at Fredricktown.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FREDERICKSTOWN, Mo., Oct. 28—Production has been resumed at the National Lead Co. plant here, following an agreement between the company and Local 809, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union.

The agreement on Sept. 18 ended a stalemate which had kept the plant closed since July 28. On that date, it was closed down by the company, after the firm had complained of a slowdown which cut production by 30 per cent during wage negotiations under a reopener clause in the contract. Union officials termed the shutdown a lockout.

Under the agreement, the union said it would forego any wage demands until the current contract expires June 30, 1956. The union also agreed to drop demands for job reclassification and establishment of wage rates at the refinery, opened 18 months ago until such time as the company states the refinery is in production.

In its turn, the company said it would call men back to work in order of seniority. This has been done, with the return of 150 men on Sept. 21 and additional recalls all through the intervening weeks.

The company said today that out of 293 workers employed before the dispute, 250 are back at work. A union source said 50 to 60 men are still without their old jobs.

Full production has been restored at both the mine and the mill. At the new refinery, built to produce lead and associated metals, some men have still not returned to work.

FAMILIES ROUTED IN FIRE AIDED BY FUND AGENCY

A 3 a.m. tenement fire disrupted the lives of families crowded into the building. Workers at nearby Fellowship Center, 1121 North Ninth street, a United Fund agency, quickly stepped in to provide temporary shelter and care.

Rats were believed to have started the fire in a box of matches. Fellowship Center, which normally does group work, family counseling and sponsors athletic events, decided to take on "Operation Rat."

Advice of the City Health Department was obtained. Landlords offered to co-operate. For six Saturdays neighbors worked together to remove conditions breeding rats and to kill rats in the area.

In such a way the rat problem in the neighborhood was reduced. The United Fund is currently conducting its annual fund-raising drive.

RUSSIAN CENTER'S FOUNDER AT FORDHAM U. TO SPEAK

The Rev. Frederick Wilcock S.J., founder of the Russian Center at Fordham University, New York, will speak on "Russia and the Catholic Church" at 8 p.m. Thursday in St. Louis University Auditorium, 3642 Lindell boulevard. The meeting is sponsored by the university's religious welfare committee.

The Russian Center was established at Fordham in 1951 to prepare for the day when the Christian faith can be restored among the Russians. There Jesuits ordained in the Byzantine-Slavonic rite work with exiled Russian communities, translate religious books into Russian, and attempt to convey to Americans an understanding of the Russian people and of the Eastern Catholic Church.

During an eight-day stay here, Father Wilcock will also speak at Webster College, Fontbonne College, Maryville College, St. Louis University High School, Nerinx Hall High School, the Catholic Center and a number of religious communities.

UNION LEADER TO SPEAK TO INDUSTRIAL COUNSELORS

Mark Starr, educational director of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, will be principal speaker at a workshop for industrial counselors sponsored by the Planned Parenthood Association of St. Louis at St. Mark's Episcopal Church parish house, 4716 Clifton avenue, at 6 p.m. Thursday.

Starr will discuss the role labor is playing in all health and welfare projects. He is the author of books on labor education and has lectured at many universities.

A panel consisting of the Rev. Charles F. Penniman, Dr. George J. L. Wulff, Mrs. Marjorie Surtshin, Roger C. Sonnemann and Starr, will answer questions from those attending the meeting.

RALPH MARCUS TO SPEAK ON SCROLLS FROM DEAD SEA

Ralph Marcus, professor at the Oriental Institute and department of oriental languages and literature of the University of Chicago, will lecture on "Recently Discovered Scrolls From the Dead Sea" at 8 p.m. Friday in Graham Chapel, Washington University.

He will discuss scrolls from the caves of Qumran which were discovered by Arab goatherders in 1947 and led to the finding of other documents in Hebrew and Aramic by French and British archeologists.

Marcus will report on the nature of the discoveries to date and conclusions made by scholars engaged in the study of the old manuscripts. The lecture, sponsored by the Academy of Science of St. Louis, is open without charge to the public, it was announced.

Every 15 Seconds of Every Shopping Day Some Lucky Woman Becomes the Proud Owner of a NORGE Washer or Dryer

What are the reasons that have made Norge the most wanted laundry equipment in little more than two years? How has this phenomenal acceptance been achieved despite the many large manufacturers who have been trying to win the buying approval of American women? Here, for you to consider, are the answers as we see them!

IN HER CONSTANT SEARCH for better ways to take care of her family's needs, the American Homemaker discovered a new friend in Norge laundry equipment little more than two years ago.

She saw some new and startling developments in washers and dryers that provided answers to washday problems she could obtain no other way.

She liked what she saw. She had Norge equipment installed in her home. She found the results even more wonderful than she expected. So she told her neighbor. And as neighbor told neighbor the tremendous switch to Norge began taking place all over the country.

That's how the story started . . . and now let's take a look at each of the products that caused this tremendous wave of acceptance, individually.

Automatic Washers

As the switch to Norge started, the independent testing laboratories offered additional proof of the native ability of the American woman to recognize a good thing when she saw it.

After exhaustive comparison tests against other makes, these laboratories said, "We rate Norge No. 1!"

This meant top performance in getting clothes clean, in more thorough rinsing, in more complete removal of water during spin-drying.

It meant a lack of tangling and roping, a lack of wear and tear on clothing, and a lack of service problems.

And here are some of the things that go on inside a Norge to get that job done.

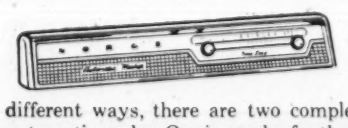
The special double 4-vane design of the Wave-Action Agitator provides full washing action from the top of the tub to the bottom. Surging water currents keep every item, every garment, completely separate and free-floating so the miracle modern soaps and detergents can reach every nook and cranny. There can be no tangling or bunching. And with all its thoroughness this action is completely safe for the most delicate fabrics.

Yet, as every woman knows, soap and washing action alone is not enough to get clothes really clean and sunshine fresh. The secret to good washing is good rinsing . . . and Norge put every approved method of rinsing into one great machine.

Exclusive Norge fresh water Super Rinse provides 5 totally different purifying actions that get out all soap, scum, lint, even sand. Each action is with warm fresh water, yet the total water consumption of a Norge is actually gallons less than many other makes.

There are two force spray rinses to whisk away every trace of soap or scum. There's an overflow rinse that floats up and skims off lint, fuzz, tobacco strands and other light material without troublesome filters or screens.

There's an agitator overflow rinse that shakes loose any clinging material and skims it off the top automatically. There's an agitator deep rinse that sends surging currents of sparkling clean water through every fibre of every material. And while all this goes on, there's automatic dirt disposal through a special sediment ejector at the bottom that gets rid of dirt, sand and other heavy particles.

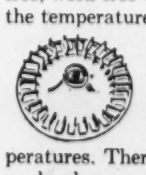


And because you wash different things in different ways, there are two completely separate automatic cycles. One is regular for those big, heavily soiled family loads. The other is shorter for delicate fabrics, small loads, and lightly soiled items. There's even a "Riplette" way to wash that takes such tender care of things you can do electric blankets or cashmere sweaters in complete safety, automatically.

Norge even made suds saving completely automatic for you. With the Norge reSUDSer your suds water is saved after the first load automatically. Then, when you're ready, just drop in the second load, turn a knob and walk away. After suds water is returned, the agitator starts, and complete washing and spin-drying goes on, all automatically. No watching or waiting ever.

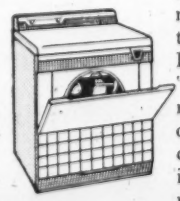
Gas and Electric Dryers

Just as with automatic washers, women have found that Norge dryers offer many advantages not found in any other make. They have found that the Norge automatic dryer is the perfect washer mate for carefree, work-free washdays regardless of the weather, the temperature or the time of year.



Norge built in an extra margin of drying safety with a giant blower fan three times larger than others. More air circulating means less heat is needed, so you dry at lower temperatures. There's never any risk of scorch marks, no hardness or stiffness. Clothes come out fluffy soft, never creased with wrinkles.

Then, there's Norge's exclusive 4-way drying: (1) Automatic Tumble-Drying with HEAT and AIR for your regular washables, (2) Automatic Tumble-Drying with AIR alone, (no heat) for synthetic fabrics, (3) Automatic Heat and Air Drying (no tumbling) for fussy woolens and baby clothes, and (4) Automatic Air Drying (no heat or tumbling) for nylons and cashmeres.



And the amazing new Hamper-Dor makes this the first dryer that really teams up with a top-loaded washer. In the closed position it hides the "porthole" to give you a perfectly matched washer and dryer. One quarter open it becomes a handy clothes chute to funnel clothes right into the dryer drum. No bending, no stooping, no stuffing in.

Or you can lock the door half open and it becomes a handy sort 'n stack shelf. You can fold and stack each item as you take it out of the dryer—no extra laundry table is needed. All the way open, the door is completely out of the way so you can bring a basket right up to the dryer for easy, direct loading.

Nothing ever, however, will take the place of seeing the Norge washer and dryer in action yourself. Why not make today the day you visit your Norge Dealer and discover for yourself what all the shouting's about.

You'll find a complete range of washers and dryers in every price range . . . starting as low as $129.95. Once you see a demonstration you'll know why every 15 seconds some lucky woman becomes the proud owner of a NORGE Washer or Dryer. Why not make tomorrow your lucky day?

Explorer Units Wanted for Ground Observer Duties.

The Air Force is seeking to enlist Explorer Scouts in units of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council in the Ground Observer Corps, a civilian air defense organization, Roy W. Jordan, a council official, announced yesterday.

Explorer units under adult leadership are needed to man airplane observation installations in outlying areas and for duty at the Air Filter Center of the Air Defense Command in Brentwood, Jordan, chairman of the council's activities and civic service committee, explained.

Jordan said Explorers and leaders must volunteer for the work as a unit and subsequently undergo a period of training. Adult leaders and senior crew leaders of units will be trained by the Command at the Filter Center and then will be required to train personnel of the respective units, he said.

Explorer advisers, posts and ships seeking further information were asked to write Maj. Thomas A. Nicolon, at the Filter Center, 9011 Manchester road, Brentwood.

Cub, Scout and Explorer unit leaders can arrange for groups of 20 to 40 boys to attend the seventh annual educational lecture series of the Missouri Historical Society held daily except Sunday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., it was announced yesterday.

The lectures are held on the ground floor of the west wing of Jefferson Memorial in Forest Park. Lectures are geared to various age levels. Leaders were asked to telephone the society a week or more in advance of the date their units plan to attend. The telephone there is FOrest 7-9265.

Tickets to the Hollywood Ice Revue next Sunday will be awarded the Cub, Scout or Explorer unit in each of the council's 14 districts whose members sell the largest number of tickets for the 1955 Boy Scout Circus.

The winning unit in each district will be given tickets for each registered member.

This year's circus, "Scouting Is Fun," begins a three day engagement Nov. 17 at the Arena. Price of general admission tickets is 75 cents.

The annual recognition dinners for Cub, Scout, Explorer and district leaders in Bourbeuse and Daniel Boone Districts will be held at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the Greater St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, will speak at the Daniel Boone dinner at the Immanuel Lutheran School in St. Charles.

Charles R. Frederick, executive director of the Sales Executives Association of St. Louis, will speak at the Bourbeuse dinner at the St. Clair (Mo.) High School. Officers for the coming year will be installed at each gathering.

Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, will be given to four Scouts in ceremonies this week. They are Explorer Scout Donald L. Cotter, Post 124; Jack Kuehn, Troop 129; Barry Jasper, Troop 494, and George Bohigian, Troop 38.

Tomorrow night's regular practice sessions for Scouts playing in the band and participating in the Indian dancing act in the 1955 Circus have been canceled, a Scout official announced.

KETC Eliminates Experimental Documentaries, 'Spectaculars'

Report Says Station's Mission Is to 'Televise Education' Simply Within Budget Limitations.

The mission of educational television station KETC, channel 9, is to "televise education" in simply produced programs, eliminating experimental production of documentaries and "spectaculars" because of budget limitations, it was stated in the station's annual report, released yesterday.

With its basic budget for the coming year set at $250,000, and with about $300,000 available to spend because of a grant of $95,110 from the Fund for the Advancement of Education, the station can perform the services expected of it by the schools, the report said, and some other functions.

"It can broadcast college courses; it can broadcast programs that deal wisely and courageously with public issues and community problems; it can offer simply produced programs which reveal to the general public what is best in music, books and the arts, and it can produce worthwhile children's programs," the report declared.

The basic budget must support in "proper balance" these several educational commitments, it said, and this balance cannot be preserved if members of the staff experiment extensively with production of documentary and spectacular shows.

Will Seek Grants.

For this experimental work, the St. Louis Educational Television Commission, governing body of the station, will continue to make efforts to obtain grants for types of programs that are too costly for the budget, the report said.

The report pointed out that the National Broadcasting Co. spends on one 90-minute spectacular about what KETC will spend in one year's operation. "The strict budget limitations," it said, "make it impossible to do all of the things which some producers might want to do and which might appear desirable if more funds were available."

Complexities of operating a television station were brought home to the commission during KETC's first year, the report said, adding that "even apparently simple forms of production, such as a professor presenting a series of lectures, requires the art of an able producer and the skills of a team of technicians if the power of television is to be used effectively in communicating with the general public."

During the last year KETC operated about 34 hours in a five-day week. This operation may be expanded as more educational and documentary films become available from other sources, it was reported.

Small Audiences.

"KETC will serve the relatively small (compared with commercial standards) but significant audiences that are interested in what our educational, cultural and civic institutions have to offer," the report said. "The station cannot hope to captivate chance viewers who twirl the dials of their TV sets in quest of entertainment.

"Finding new ways to attract many more millions to the world of learning is a challenge to all of the imagination and resourcefulness that the educational television stations can muster."

Full administrative responsibility has been placed in the hands of the station management, the report said, pointing out that Arthur Holly Compton, distinguished service professor of natural philosophy and former chancellor of Washington University, has been appointed executive director of the station, and George L. Arms, formerly of educational television station KUHT, Houston, Tex., station operations manager.

The decision to revamp top management of the station came after an analysis of the management problem in educational television stations elsewhere, the report said. Men with experience in commercial television were employed in the beginning.

"But the management of an educational station involves a balancing of resources and purposes remote from commercial television," it was stated in the report.

Long Range Needs.

While the operation of KETC for the coming year is assured with $144,000 appropriated by schools of the city, county and East Side, $106,000 in contributions from businesses and individuals and the $95,110 from the Fund for the Advancement of Education, the amount is not yet sufficient to meet the long-range needs of the station.

"Forward planning in programming and financing are inseparable," the report said. "Fund raising should stay at least a year ahead of broadcasting operation. While current program commitments must be balanced with funds currently available, financial goals should be projected into the future and should balance with the vast potentialities of this new medium."

Additional experimentation will be conducted this year in offering courses in spelling for second graders and science and grammar courses for high school students, the report said. This program for which the Fund made its grant, will be carefully evaluated.

In making the grant for this purpose, the Fund said: "We feel this demonstration in St. Louis is likely to have far-reaching implications for American education."

Among other new programs are "The Language of Music" by Leigh Gerdine, Blewett professor of music at Washington University; "The Great American West" by the Rev. John Francis Bannon S.J., professor of history at St. Louis University; "The Painting" by Siegfried Reinhardt, St. Louis artist; "Voices of the Past" by Prof. William Korfmacher of St. Louis University.

"Music—And You," by the St. Louis Institute of Music; "Critic's Circle" by various critics of the arts and politics; and "It's Debatable" by debaters on provocative articles in national publications.

HEAD OF Y.M.C.A. IN SWEDEN TO SPEAK HERE NEXT WEEK

Hugo Cedergren, president of the Y.M.C.A. of Sweden, will speak at the evening session of the fourth annual leadership conference of the Metropolitan St. Louis "Y" next Sunday at the Downtown branch, 1528 Locust street. The meeting will begin at 3:30 p.m.

Problems related to discovering the needs of youth, trends in youth work and methods for discovering leaders will be discussed at the conference. A round table discussion on "Relating the Y.M.C.A. to Community Needs" will be held at 4 p.m. and at the dinner session, groups will list three pressing needs the "Y" should meet in the community.

Cedergren, of Gefle, was general secretary of the Swedish Y.M.C.A. from 1924 to 1945, and served as president of the World Alliance centennial of the "Y" in Paris last August.

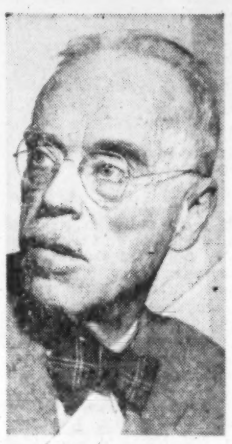
HEART ATTACKS

President Eisenhower's Specialist Discusses Questions Regarding the Nation's No. 1 Killer—'Real Issue at Stake Is Prevention of Disease'

Is the strain of the presidency an element in President Eisenhower's heart attack? Would greater delegation of duties lessen the chances of future Presidents suffering similar attacks? What is the need for greater research to discover causes and prevention of heart attacks and heart diseases? The President's heart specialist discusses these and other prime questions about the nation's No. 1 killer in the following article.

By Paul Dudley White, M.D.

(Copyright, 1955, by Associated Press.)



DR. PAUL DUDLEY WHITE . . . "NO DEFINITE ANSWERS."

THE President's recent heart attack has emphasized the seriousness of this most common of the important illnesses of the middle-aged and older male in the United States of America today. A good many of us doctors have, for the past 15 years or more, tried to bring this No. 1 public health problem into the prominent position which it deserves, and which it has now overnight attained.

For the moment it is over-headlined, but we must not settle back into the semi-complacent state about it current before Sept. 24, 1955. Neither must we doctors be forced to give advice about what to do to prevent this disease, or at least to delay its appearance, before we know the answers ourselves.

In the present state of our limited knowledge, we have no definite answers, only opinions and suggestions. But if we, doctors and laymen alike, put our shoulders to the wheel we should have some real answers within the next decade or two.

Incidentally, the problem is related not alone to the health of the leaders in the professions and in business nowadays, but also to the problem of the artisan, farmer and laborer who years ago were thought to be protected in some way through their physical activity.

Most important of all perhaps, this problem can be related to the peace of the world. For it is likely that the ultimate peacemakers are men who through experience have acquired wisdom. But at the same time, the passage of years and their way of life may have made them candidates for this disease of their arteries, to a degree sufficient to limit their ability to apply this wisdom in full.

PHYSICIANS of this country, and many physicians in other lands dealing with patients living the way we live in this country, are painfully aware of the common occurrence of coronary thrombosis. But we have no adequate knowledge of the actual frequency. I have seen in different countries throughout the world coronary thrombosis among those citizens whose incomes allow them to live the way most of us do in the United States, while their less well-to-do fellow citizens seem largely to escape.

We are trying to learn about the morbidity of the disease as well as about its mortality—that is, about the numbers of those who recover as well as of those who do not. Up to now it has been possible to gather reasonably accurate figures only about the fatal cases, and this is one reason for the great pessimism about the disease in the past.

The most important problem concerning coronary thrombosis is neither its diagnosis—which is generally not difficult—nor its treatment — for which we have little to offer except to establish an adequate period of rest to expedite nature's healing process, with the help of the little medication that may be needed.

The real issue at stake is prevention of the disease, and this remains at present unsolved. We do have, however, some important clues and a summary of these is worthwhile. How much responsibility for the disease should be attributed to any one of the various possible factors, or to any combination of factors, is a question still to be answered.

It is wise to divide these factors into two groups, basic and environmental. The basic factors are in the main unalterable. So naturally the environmental factors, which can be changed, need the main focus of attention. However, the mere existence of one or more of the basic factors may probably make a person more susceptible to the influence of any one or more of the environmental factors.

What are the possible basic factors? In the first place there is race, and this remains an unknown quantity as to its action. What is badly needed is an adequate comparison of individuals of the same race living under different environmental conditions. We have too few data about this yet.

Secondly there is age. It is true that coronary thrombosis increases in frequency with increasing age, but many old persons escape and many young ones, for example under age 45, are attacked. Thus, age is really not the most determinant cause.

Thirdly there is sex. It is well recognized that in middle age and younger, the male is much more prone to the disease than the female, and so eventually needs to have more protection. Even now, experiments as to the value of hormonal treatment and protection are in progress.

Fourthly there is body build. It has been shown that at least in youth and middle age the mesomorph (broad muscular male or female) is more likely to develop the disease than the ectomorph with his skinny build or the endomorph, the person with a round build.

FIFTHLY there is personality. It is thought by some that the intensive, overactive and ambitious person is more often the candidate. There may be something in this, but again we find that many such persons live to an old age free of coronary thrombosis, while others who seem placid and lazy come down with the disease.

Finally, heredity seems to be a definite factor, in part at least by influencing body build, personality and, in a few cases, body or blood chemistry.

Now let us turn to the environmental factors which are even more debatable. One that is on everyone's tongue just now is that of stress and strain, which is so hard to measure and yet which is obviously a possible factor in the case of any President whose job probably is the hardest in the world today.

After only a few days of observation of the constant strain of the publicity which dogs every step of the President and the knowledge of the multitudinous chores of which he should be relieved, I spoke out in protest. Although that protest was personal, it evoked not only misinterpretation of my motives, but much sympathy for the President throughout the land by peoples of all parties. Past Presidents have increasingly referred to it. The strain is well nigh intolerable both physically and mentally, I am sure.

But whether it has any direct causative effect in producing atherosclerosis remains doubtful, at least in my own mind. (Atherosclerosis is the narrowing or clogging inside arteries so that blood flow to the heart muscle may more easily be blocked by blood clots.) I would grant that it is at least a severe strain on the nerves and can possibly be an aggravating factor superimposed on basic or other environmental causes. But much more research is needed before we shall have adequate answers.

THE ESCAPE of the President to the golf links and to his easel undoubtedly helped somewhat to neutralize the strain both physically and mentally, but perhaps not enough. I myself have found that physical exercise, such as a long walk or bicycle ride, woodsawing, log-splitting, an interesting book or music can be a helpful antidote to nervous fatigue.

I would also emphasize the well-established fact that religious meditation, services and prayer, often bring not only an uplift of the spirit but peace of mind and physical relaxation.

A second environmental and adjustable factor which may well prove to be the most important of all is diet. All sorts of opinions have been expressed, including four in particular:

1. That it makes no difference at all.
2. That it is total calories and thus general over-nutrition that counts most; harmful because it results in deposition of fat in the coronary artery wall.
3. That it is not the calories per se, but the total fat content of the food that is of prime importance.
4. That it is the animal fat and not necessarily the total fat that should be blamed.

Studies to date tend to support the idea that dietary fat is in some way responsible. Dr. Ancel Keys (University of Minnesota) and his associates have found that the amount of coronary heart disease in any country appears to vary uniformly with the weekly income and the resulting amount of fat in the diet of the persons studied.

IN THE UNITED STATES, the percentage of fat in the diet has increased in one generation from about 30 per cent, which is probably a more or less optimal level, to over 40 per cent. During this time coronary heart disease has apparently increased several fold, although some of this so-called increase must certainly be credited to better diagnostic methods and increased longevity. This promising lead about diet needs much further study.

Another possible factor is that of exercise. Some believe that vigorous exercise not only helps the general health but also actually aids in some way in a healthy person to delay the onset of serious coronary atherosclerosis. We have as yet inadequate information about this, although many of us, including President Eisenhower, have felt that exercise makes us feel better. Coronary thrombosis may, however, attack an apparently otherwise healthy nonobese athlete while inactive persons escape.

Exercise may conceivably delay the onset of coronary thrombosis by years even when it finally does come in the sixties. It is also probable that a muscular person needs more exercise to maintain proper health than does one with less muscle to start with. Perhaps the combination of regular exercise and a limited intake of fat in the food may help most, especially in the case of the young candidate for the disease.

Other possible environmental factors which need appraisal, although they appear to be much less important, include climate, use of tobacco and alcohol, and local religious and social customs.

The study of the relationship of these various environmental factor to coronary heart disease—has only just begun. Such study will require years to complete. Because of its complexity it is a difficult research, but since it is important, it constitutes one of the chief reasons for the increased need for research funds.

White Long Prominent in Medical Field

DR. PAUL DUDLEY WHITE is a wiry little man of 69, with gray eyebrows, moustache and thinning hair. His eyes are bright blue and he wears gold-rimmed glasses. He has a keen sense of humor.

Although in the national limelight only recently, he has been prominent in medical circles for years. A pioneer in the use of the electrocardiograph in this country, he began specializing in cardiology in 1913. In 1952 he participated in shooting a whale with harpoons connected with an electrocardiograph to take pulse readings.

He did graduate medical study abroad after getting his M.D. from Harvard in 1911. He served in World War I as a medical officer in France.

Since 1914 he has taught at Harvard Medical School, and has engaged in research and practice especially in the field of heart disease.

Rock Hudson in Person

This is the first of a series of profiles of rising stars in Hollywood, a representative sampling of the crop that has helped the movie business bounce back from the slump that hit it with the advent of television.

Answer to Question: What's Young Man Like?

Five Years Ago He Was Playing Obscure Parts; Now He's Bright Star in Hollywood Heavens—

First of a Series on New Movie Personalities

By Edward A. Harris
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29.

ROCK HUDSON will tell you himself that people used to laugh when he stood up to act—or at least he thought they did, especially the grips.

The grips, in movieland parlance, are the studio technicians. Hudson felt stiff and self-conscious in front of them or anyone else who happened to be watching him about five years ago. Playing obscure parts, doubtful that he would ever hit the top, he would slip into Universal-International's commissary at noon as inconspicuously as possible and eat at a back table.

Today Rock is a full-fledged star and one of U-I's hottest properties. He is one of the new talents largely responsible for the recent resurgence of the movies after a decline at the box office generally attributed to the initial impact of television. So highly is this strapping, curly-haired young bachelor now regarded that he's currently on loanout to Warner Brothers for Edna Ferber's "Giant," in which he will co-star with Elizabeth Taylor.

What happened to Rock in those five years?

The pat explanation, far too pat, is that Hudson just happened to click with Jane Wyman in "Magnificent Obsession" in 1954, and became an overnight star.

It's true that "Magnificent Obsession" made a star of Hudson, just as it made a star of Robert Taylor in 1935. That film, in which Rock was given a chance at his most important dramatic role, topped the $8,000,000 mark to become the second biggest money-maker in U-I's history.

But it didn't just happen. Even Hudson, a friendly and even-tempered chap, gets a bit riled when fans and critics alike talk of the overnight star business.

"You'd think that someone at U-I decided to put a nickel in me, turn the dial to the word 'dramatic' and play sweet box office music," he said. "There was nothing overnight about it. The climb was long and rugged."

HE remembers all too clearly his first few years in the movies when his morale sank so low he thought several times of asking a release from his contract. He calls this his "floundering" period. But he stuck it out, studied hard at U-I's talent school, and played bit parts in Westerns and other pictures "that no one else remembers and which I'd like to forget."

He accepted everything the studio threw his way. He worked for five months without a day off during one stretch, and didn't beef about it. He lived in a Sunset Strip apartment at the time and kept his neighbors crochety with his nocturnal record-playing (he has 3500 records), in which he'd rehearse his lines while listening to "mood" music. The music, he told me, affected him deeply and helped him to understand and "bring out" his lines with feeling.

He improved. He also developed a stubborn faith that he could, after all, make the climb. About this time he went on a personal appearance tour to Portland with James Stewart and Julie Adams in connection with the premiere of "Bend of the River," in which Rock had a minor part. In front of the theater 10,000 movie fans cheered and applauded all three players so uproariously that the last vestiges of Rock's doubts were blown away. Now he felt a buoyant conviction that he not only could, but would hit the top, that he would merit that kind of accolade.

Not long after that he won his first important role, in "Has Anybody Seen My Gal," with Piper Laurie. Then came "Scarlet Angel," "Horizons West" and "The Lawless Breed." His box office value slowly climbed. He made four more pictures, including "Back to God's Country." This was no great hit, but it did convince studio executives that Hudson might be an actor.

IT was then that they took the big gamble, casting him opposite Jane Wyman in "Magnificent Obsession." This was the turning point. It gave his bosses confidence. To Hollywood bigwigs large box office receipts are the only sure-fire test of talent.

He was given leading roles then in two action films, "Bengal Rifles" and "Captain Lightfoot," made "One Desire" with Anne Baxter and went on to meet Miss Wyman again in "All That Heaven Allows," not yet released. In the latter he plays a gardner, and he said that of all the roles he has played he likes this one best, feeling that in it he achieves his ablest acting.

Rock was in Ireland making "Captain Lightfoot" when "Obsession" began making box-office history. "I knew something was different when reporters called me 'Mr. Hudson' when I landed in New York," he recalled. From an idol of the bobbysoxers he became a serious actor and, while there are natural differences of opinion on the degree of his talent, there is no question about his boxoffice appeal, or about the professional competence with which he now plays his roles.

ROCK HUDSON . . . THERE WAS NOTHING SUDDEN ABOUT HIS SUCCESS. "THE CLIMB WAS LONG AND RUGGED."

Watching him on the set for "Giant," it's hard to believe this poised actor, repeating scenes over and over again with identical voice intonations, gestures and movements, holding his own with a star as experienced as Elizabeth Taylor, was ever an object of ridicule.

Between scenes, Rock, the very symbol of the All-America young man with his athletic build (six-feet four tall, 200 pounds), would head for his little dressing room, pull off his big boots and flop lightly—for a big man—on his couch. Here is a star with no pretensions, an anomaly in Flickerland. He answers questions with complete frankness, never ducks a query, doesn't pretend to be anything he isn't.

TAKE his love life, for instance. Is he against marriage?

"No," he said, resting on the couch and twirling a coat hanger with one hand, "I'd just rather be a bachelor. I have nothing against marriage — I think it's the greatest."

He swears he's been in love only twice in his life, "except for a bunch of little ones in-between." The first was a high school classmate back in his native Winnetka, Illinois, when he was 16; the last was the first "glamour" date he had in Hollywood, the beauty known as Vera-Ellen. They talked of marriage, but it all ended amicably before a preacher could be summoned.

Now he plays the field. Asked what kind of girls he likes best, he grinned and replied: "I'm not a bit fussy, just so they're girls."

Besides dating he plays tennis, swims, rides horseback and plays golf. He's tried fishing but never caught a fish — "I guess they don't like my angle."

He has everything in records from classic to bop, plus a player piano with more than 400 piano rolls. He has a part-time housekeeper but often does his own marketing, shopping at the same place that gave him credit during his lean years, even though it's 10 miles from his present residence.

With Rock's new stardom and affluence has come a certain maturity in dress. He still likes jeans and T-shirts for lounging around the house, but now has a large wardrobe of clothes tailored in London and Scotland as well as here. He has an aversion to hats, however.

If he did wear a hat, chances are it would be precisely the same size as one he could have worn when he left Winnetka for a stint in the Navy. Rock is popular with his fellow actors and the technicians—they didn't really laugh at him—because he has never shown signs of becoming swell-headed.

His real name is Roy Fitzgerald Jr. His father was a garage mechanic at Olney, Ill., before going on to Winnetka, where young Roy worked after school as a soda jerk, a short order cook, and in a grocery store—not all at the same time, of course. His very first job as a kid was handling a newspaper route, and he's been hustling pretty steadily ever since.

During World War II he served in the Pacific for two years, but his rating was changed from aviation machinist's mate to third class laundryman, a feat none of his chums could duplicate. This demotion came about when he absent-mindedly started the engines on a B-26. The big bomber jumped its chocks, hurtled across a runway and wrecked an innocent little Piper Cub scout plane. So Rock took in washing for awhile.

When the war was over and the peace was made, he tried to get into the University of Southern California on the G.I. Bill of Rights. But his high school grades followed him from faraway Winnetka and he couldn't get in. He took a job hauling dried beans at $80 a week, fighting Los Angeles's murderous traffic and delivering the beans to just about every grocery store in the city.

"I got pinched shoulders," he related, "from bracing myself for traffic smashes."

THIS sort of thing finally got on his nerves. He decided he wanted to get in the movies, which were conveniently close by, and took a furnished room in Hollywood. Broke, he borrowed enough money from a friend to have some sharp pictures taken of himself, and took them to an actor's agent. The agent took Rock to Director Raoul Walsh, who gave him a bit part in a film he was directing. Walsh then placed Hudson under personal contract for a year, but didn't find enough work for him to keep him busy.

When the year was up, U-I bought Walsh's contract and started Rock on his slow rise to stardom. Rock was a workhorse. In one season, before "Obsession" made him a quality actor instead of a quantity one, he did seven films. He was philosophical about it: "I asked for work when I signed up, and I got it. It's paying off so why should I complain?"

The action-packed, adventure pictures used to be his meat. He said he first became interested in the movies at the age of 10 when he saw Jon Hall in "Hurricane." It wasn't Hall who thrilled him but the excitement of the wind and water. "I just flipped for it," he said, reverting to the slang he once used more often.

But now the adventure roles, he hopes, are out for a while. He wants to do more indoor roles, drawing room comedy and serious dramatic parts, roles that bring out acting ability. He's aware of his shortcomings and is determined to do away with them. He confesses, for instance, that while he likes to play love scenes he finds them difficult.

"I'm always ploughing in and smashing up the girl's makeup," he says.

But he's finding such love scenes less and less difficult—especially when playing opposite such stars as Elizabeth Taylor. Rock would be the first to admit that it would take a wooden Indian to be wooden in her arms. And Rock's no wooden Indian.

Indian Summer Day; Wild Geese at Night

By Leonard Hall

TODAY we finished sowing our winter wheat, "dusting it in," as the country expression has it. For our Belleview Valley seems almost to be a small and isolated arid island as St. Louis reports near-normal rainfall and visitors from Callaway county tell us it has been too wet to get into the fields these past weeks. Here in our part of the Ozarks we've worked against time, rushing after each shower to get a patch of ground plowed before it dried out so that the plow points wouldn't penetrate. In such times, in fact, plow shares become an item of considerable expense. We've kept four sets going constantly, relaying them up to Lyman Sadler's shop to have new points welded on them, as they become too dull to plow.

This day in the next-to-last week of October was almost the first which could truly be called Indian summer. At sunrise the thermometer stood at 60 degrees, some 30 degrees higher than on many mornings recently. The air was clear as we finished the milking and other morning chores, then filled the tractor tanks and headed out to the fields. Mockingbirds sang from the fencerows and, perched along the telephone wires, we noted a sparrow hawk and a Northern shrike, newly arrived for the winter. All day long as we worked, a flock of killdeer followed us about the field. Sometimes they'd rise to circle against the sun, flashing like silver. But equally often they'd run along the drill-rows, no more than a dozen feet from the clattering machines.

Along about noon the air grew hazy and by mid-afternoon the brilliant color in the hills to the west seemed to have faded, as though smoke from distant fires was drifting across the landscape. At 5 o'clock we drilled out the last terrace in the field and hurried home for the evening chores; and the sun was a crimson ball, dropping to the western horizon. Tonight, as I sat down for a couple of hours at the typewriter, I heard the first band of migrating geese go over. This is our surest sign that autumn is here in earnest and soon the waterfowl migration will be in full swing.

There's one phase of the migration which we'll watch this year with special interest. This is the southward flight of the forlorn little band of whooping cranes which for the past 20 years have made such a gallant fight against extinction. This past summer, following a search that has lasted 10 years, the breeding flock of cranes was finally located in a remote marsh in northwest Canada. The discovery was made by a party of field biologists from the National Audubon Society, whose Bob Allen is the world's leading authority on the whooping crane, the Canadian Wildlife Service and the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. In surveys made by air over this huge wilderness, five young cranes were discovered; the first time that the young have ever been observed in the nesting territory and an indication that the flock would hold its own for another year if these birds managed to survive the southward flight to wintering quarters on the Texas coastal marsh.

● THE SOUTHWARD FLIGHT is one of the great gambles in wildfowl migration because, despite the wonderful co-operation of newspapers and conservation groups along the flyway in asking protection for the big birds, there are always a few trigger-happy gunners ready to kill them. And the day may well come when some sportsman will be able to boast to his grandchildren that he fired the shot which finally exterminated the whooping crane and sent it to follow the passenger pigeon and the Carolina parroquet and ivory billed woodpecker.

There was a time when the whooping crane was common throughout America from the Atlantic coast westward to Colorado and Idaho and from northern Canada to the Gulf. Its breeding range extended as far south as Illinois. Like the smaller sandhill crane, it is a bird of the open prairies and marshes, so that its habitat has been progressively destroyed by drainage, the plow and heavy grazing. The great bird stands nearly five feet tall and has a wing spread of almost eight feet, so that on the ground or in flight it is an impressive sight. Its plumage is a rusty white, though the primaries are tipped with black, and a most impressive feature is its carmine-colored head.

● EARLY ORNITHOLOGISTS AND NATURALISTS report the migration of the big cranes as a thrilling sight and sound. John James Audubon tells of giving the famous ornithologist Alexander Wilson his first sight of the whooping crane in 1810 on a pond near Louisville. Thomas Nutall, who gave his name to the first American ornithological society, tells of the passage of the great birds down the Mississippi flyway in the autumn of 1811: "The bustle of their mighty migration and the passage of their great armies fills the mind with wonder. It seems as though the whole continent was giving up its quota of cranes to swell the mighty host and the clangor of their legions, passing high in the air, is deafening."

The cry of the whooping crane and of its smaller cousin, the sandhill crane, are among the wildest and most thrilling sounds in all nature. Both birds fly at great height, the whooping crane often out of sight of the human eye, and frequently when the big birds cannot be seen at all or have passed out of sight, this somehow uncanny call comes drifting earthward like some sky-borne trumpet. It is still too soon to predict whether the whooping crane can survive the onslaught of civilization, yet certainly all sportsmen worthy of the name and every lover of the outdoors will try to see that it is given every chance.

HENRY FORD II . . . AS PRESIDENT OF THE FORD MOTOR CO., HE HEADS AN EMPIRE THAT EXTENDS AROUND THE WORLD.

The Hard-Working Ford Grandsons

All Occupy Full-Time Jobs in Company Established by Their Grandfather, With Never One Thought of Becoming Members Of International Loafing Set

(Editor's note: What would it be like to be the grandson of Henry Ford? Would you spend your time presiding at an occasional board meeting and living it up in between? Not at all, say the three grandsons of the famed automobile pioneer; you'd have to go to work.)

By Saul Pett

DETROIT, Oct. 29 (AP).

I DON'T know about you, but when I was a boy I used to dream that my grandfather was Henry Ford, that I inherited his billion-dollar company, appointed some bright people to run it, presided grandly at a board meeting once a year and spent the rest of the time gadding about the world, trying vainly to use up my annual income.

Recently I met Henry Ford II and his brothers Benson and Bill. Although they easily could have afforded to, they said they never once thought of becoming gay members of the idle rich and international loafing set.

Even as kids, they said, they had always assumed they would go to work for the company their grandfather started, that their jobs would be full-time and not just titular. In fact, they never had any other ambition, except that Bill wanted to become a racing car driver but he got over that.

And so today, at 37, Henry Ford II is president of the Ford Motor Car Co. It employs 184,000, has plants and offices around the world, makes cars and farm equipment and industrial engines, and its gross from autos alone runs to the billions every year. Benson Ford, 36, is a vice president and group director of the Mercury and special products divisions. William Clay Ford, 30, is a vice president and group director of the Lincoln and Continental divisions.

MEETING the Fords, I got another jolt. Possibly like you, I had always wondered what the attitude of very rich people was toward money. Did they want more of it, did they take it for granted, tolerate it, had it become in their minds just another piece of useful equipment?

The question was put to Benson Ford and, being a friendly, casual man, he laughed and said:

"Money means the same to us as it does to everyone else. Need it? You always need money. I know I do. You see, we're in an inflexible position. Our company stock is tied up; we can't sell it. If we needed money, we'd have to go to the bank and borrow it. Therefore, we have to have an income like anyone else."

There was a time when strangers didn't put such questions to a Ford. But today the atmosphere is different. While it does not encourage undue familiarity, an ordinary man of 37 can ask another man of 37 if he were ever frightened by the responsibility that goes with being top dog at such a large company.

Tall, full-faced, brown-haired Henry Ford II said that even when he took over at 28, he wasn't over-awed by the job but was impressed with how much he had to learn. The company then was losing money heavily, its management was chaotic, its future blurred.

"We had an obligation to fill," he said of himself and his brothers. "My father (Edsel Ford) had died. Grandfather was pretty old. Somebody had to look after the company. I couldn't see letting it just drift. "It was, I suppose, a matter of family pride and responsibility. But frankly, I was also fascinated by the business. I enjoy it. I find the competition exciting."

An unusual candor accompanied by a certain amount of impulsiveness also distinguishes young Henry Ford. He once dropped in, unannounced and unexpected, on CIO President Walter Reuther. Reuther thought it was a high level conference and began to ring for his aids. But Henry only wanted an informal, get-acquainted chat. They chatted alone.

After making a speech at a gridiron dinner in Washington, Ford was approached by an older man who was in a baiting mood.

"That was a pretty good speech, young feller," said the older man. "Who wrote it for you?"

Quickly and naturally, Ford answered, "one of our public relations men. There he is. Would you like to meet him?"

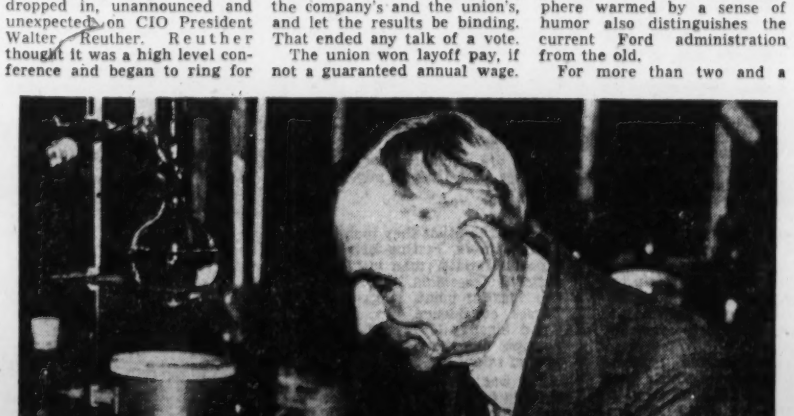
WHILE no one outside the company knows for certain, some quarters in Detroit think it was Ford's impulsiveness that backfired during recent contract negotiations with the UAW-CIO and Walter Reuther. The company had offered its employes a stock purchase plan. Reuther was holding out for the guaranteed annual wage. Ford said the workers preferred his proposal and asked that they vote on it. Reuther said, okay, let them vote on both proposals, the company's and the union's, and let the results be binding. That ended any talk of a vote.

The union won layoff pay, if not a guaranteed annual wage.



HENRY FORD ON HIS 74TH BIRTHDAY . . . "THINGS GOT TOLERATED THAT SHOULDN'T HAVE BEEN."

BENSON FORD, LEFT, AND WILLIAM CLAY FORD . . . SEVERAL RAISES FROM THE BOSS "ON MERIT, NOT COST OF LIVING," THEY GRIN.

The resultant contract was criticized by some business quarters as "creeping socialism" but Henry snapped back:

"Some people call all forms of change or progress 'creeping socialism.' They called pensions and social security that. I really don't know what they mean by 'creeping socialism'."

Henry and his brothers have exhibited what some people call a more enlightened attitude in management and toward labor. Who was most influential in developing this philosophy?

Henry, who is not inclined to introspection, thought a moment and said:

"Dad always felt people should be treated the way he would want them to treat him. I think grandfather did, too, but things got a little strange around here. Things got tolerated that shouldn't have been."

WHEN a young scion of a wealthy family takes over the family business, skeptics inevitably say he is a mere figure head. But in Detroit there has been a noticeable decrease in the skeptics who say that Henry Ford II, in relation to the company, is like a constitutional monarch while Ernest R. Breech does the real work as prime minister.

Among associates at the company, this picture is stoutly denied. Henry is top executive officer and works full-time at his job, they say. They also point out: it was Henry who cleaned house and fired Harry Bennett, once reputedly unofficial master of the company; it was Henry who brought in Breech from General Motors and, together, they revitalized the company, from deep in the red to deep in the black.

Yes, but who makes the top decisions? The common answer at the company is that this is no longer a one-man show, that top decisions are group actions, by the board of directors or one of the various committees.

Breech is now chairman of the board. Henry is chairman of the executive committee. But when either group meets, both sit at the head of the table and preside. A more relaxed atmosphere warmed by a sense of humor also distinguishes the current Ford administration from the old.

For more than two and a half years and with a heavy capital investment, the division under Bill Ford was working on reviving the super-plus Continental, which his father had introduced originally.

Finally, late last year, the first working model was almost ready. They boys at the plant thought it would be a fine gesture if they could speed things up, get the first model off the assembly line on Christmas Eve and then solemnly turn over the keys to Bill Ford. He would then ride off in a roar of triumph.

And on Christmas Eve, they had it ready. They made last minute checks of the power steering, power brakes, push button windows, air conditioning and various other gadgets. Everything worked fine. So, Ford was called down. There was a bushed, sentimental silence as he was handed the keys.

He stepped into the car. He inserted the key. He turned the key. But the car wouldn't start. There was a shocked silence. In the old days, heads would have rolled. But thin, dark, wiry Bill Ford was equal to the occasion. With an airy gesture, he said, "Well, I guess it's back to the drawing board, men."

What had happened was that the boys had spent so much time checking the power gadgets they ran down the battery. It was quickly replaced and Ford did get his roar of triumph, but anti-climactically.

IF he were alive today, what would Henry Ford, the elder, think of the way his company is now being run?

"Your guess is as good as mine," said Henry Ford II.

"I think the first thing he'd notice was the smoking," Benson Ford said, grinning. "Nobody smoked around here in his time. I think he'd be impressed by the complete model changes we have every two or three years and the greater competition.

"I don't know how he would have reacted to our new contract with the union. Generally, I'd say that the company today is being operated more along the lines my father would have operated it, rather than the way grandfather did. My father was a team operator but he never had a chance to prove it. He was so dominated by my grandfather."

As individuals, none of the Ford brothers makes any pretense of being an intellectual. Big words and abstractions make Henry restless. He reads magazines and newspapers but never books. Only Bill is a college graduate (Yale, '49). Benson quit Princeton after two years. Henry fell just short of graduation at Yale.

"I got a guy to help me with my thesis," Henry recalled with a smile. "I paid him for it but it is not true that his bill was attached to the thesis when I turned it in.

"Anyway, they said I couldn't graduate unless I wrote another thesis on an entirely different subject. I said, the hell with it; I was in a hurry to get out and get married."

While Henry plays at golf and Benson is primarily a sailor (he and his family spend most of their vacations aboard their 58-foot yacht), Bill is the athlete of the family. He skies and plays tennis well and shoots golf in the 70s.

THE three brothers live quietly with their families in Grosse Pointe Farms, an exclusive suburb of Detroit. They generally scorn night clubs in favor of entertainment at home—small parties with an orchestra, bridge or the showing of a first-run movie.

Their homes are big and comfortable but there are bigger homes in Grosse Pointe.

What's it like to work for your big brother? Both younger Fords say Henry is fair and considered in his judgments and doesn't pull rank on them. Bill reports that all three can be stubborn at times, stubbornness not being a new characteristic in the family.

Henry and Bill differed on the basic concept of the revived Continental. Henry wanted it much more futuristic. Bill wanted it more conservative or "modern formal," as some designer put it. They hassled over it for months, in the office and at dinner. Bill won.

Have Bill and Benson been able to waggle any salary raises out of the boss?

"Four or five," they said, laughing.

Merit or cost of living raises?

"Merit," they said.

And that, too, was neither the kind of question nor answer one used to associate with a Ford.

Problems In Late Marriage

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

MARRIAGE at any age creates problems, but those who marry for the first time at the age of 50 usually have to take on a few extra ones. Mrs. M. has been through this and reports her experience.

"You have been advising people that it was never too late to marry," she reminds me, "and I took your word for it, Dr. Popenoe. Early in the summer I married a man two years older than myself. It's a first venture for each of us, and I want to say that it has been a difficult adventure.

"Both of us had led lives that I am afraid one would call rather sad, and we grasped at the thought of a happy ending. We found it's not so easy in real life as it is in fiction or the drama. We ought also to have known, and we now know, that a long past history of unhappiness is not always the best background for a marriage. Mutual unhappiness can draw people together, but it can also send them spinning apart again.

"As new partners we watched each other with the suspicion that I can now see would have been more appropriate for enemies. Each of us thought that he had long since discovered the only conditions and habits that were vital for health and happiness. Each of us considered it was our missionary duty to lead the other to a better and healthier way of life.

"THEN THERE WERE ALSO the other people in our lives. We had our aged parents, families, old friends, ex-loves and ancient retainers, the people who had been important to us for many years. These were older and really closer ties than our new marriage vows. All these people had to be introduced, readjusted and absorbed into our joint existence. And they were not just puppets. Many of them were jealous and difficult.

"The worst of the fighting is over now—at least we hope so. We are beginning to enjoy the innumerable normal satisfactions of marriage, the happiness and love which can't be found anywhere else. It's been worth all the struggle, but we often wonder whether all the struggle was really unavoidable. Does everyone have to suffer as we have done to attain this happiness?"

CERTAINLY NOT, Mrs. M. It depends a good deal, however, on personality and past experience. But you could have avoided much of the difficulty with proper premarital counseling. The time has gone by when intelligent people should go into marriage without getting any help from experts in the subject, if not by personal consultation, then at least by books. But premarital counseling is richly worthwhile.

But in any case, Mrs. G., my warmest congratulations to you and your husband.

Answers to Questions.

Q. Can a woman in her early forties expect to bear a normal child?

A. Certainly, if she is herself normal. Millions of children have been born to women over 40. Consult the best obstetrician you can find. There is some increase in the number of hard births, stillbirths, and handicapped children born to these older women, especially after 45.

Q. We are thinking about adopting a child — but it's such a gamble! Can a legal adoption be "undone" legally?

A. Rarely—unless a serious mistake has been made in some way. You take a gamble, even with a child of your own flesh and blood. Society expects you to stand by your own actions.

Q. DON'T YOU AGREE that women are better judges of human nature than men are?

A. Yes, there have been few good studies of the subject, but I believe they all show that women can size up a man more accurately and quickly; and, of course, they can beat any man at sizing up their own sex.

Q. Do you believe that children from large families get along better in later life than do those from small families?

A. Yale students from families of six or more were compared with those who were their parents' only children. Those from large families earned six times as much money while in college and along with that had "the time, energy, and ability to surpass the men from the one-child families in every other phase of college activity."

Information, Please

By Christopher Billopp

WHEN, because of school, college or marriage, parents are separated by many miles from a child, they may wish to obtain an important piece of information having to do with the child's health, happiness or plans. They will write a letter to the child containing the question and requesting an immediate answer.

In due time a letter will be received from the child. It will be a newsy letter covering a variety of subjects. It will mention all the friends seen during the past fortnight, the occasions on which they were seen and the clothes they were wearing. It will include a report on trips taken, books read and the condition of the weather. It will contain a comprehensive report on food eaten and hours slept. It will discuss national and international affairs. The writer may even indulge in philosophical reflections.

IT WILL BE a letter revealing the rare intelligence of the child and the intricate workings of its mind. It will present terms of affection that will warm the cockles of the parents' hearts. It may well be the sort of letter that can be taken out and read with pride in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and friends.

It may be a letter so beautifully expressed that the thought occurs that it should be preserved for posterity so that future generations may have first-hand evidence of the character of the writer.

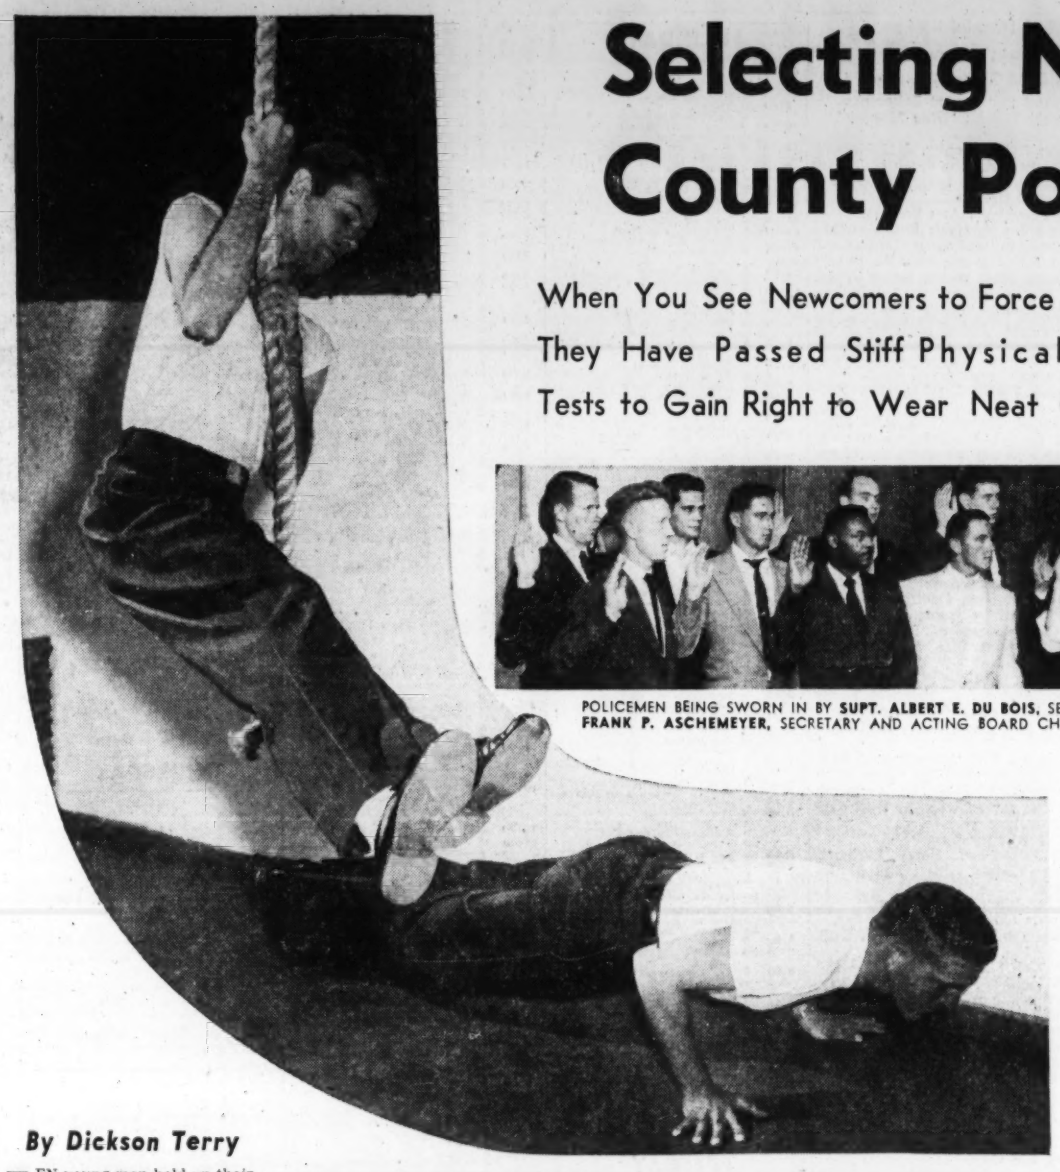
IT MAY BE A LETTER any parents would be proud to receive, and provoke the reflection that they are fortunate to have such a child.

In fact, the only fault with it is that the child has neglected to answer the vital question that was asked. So the only way to get the information desired is to make a long-distance telephone call.



Selecting New County Police

When You See Newcomers to Force You Can Know They Have Passed Stiff Physical and Mental Tests to Gain Right to Wear Neat Gray Uniforms

POLICEMEN BEING SWORN IN BY SUPT. ALBERT E. DU BOIS, SECOND FROM RIGHT, AND FRANK P. ASCHEMEYER, SECRETARY AND ACTING BOARD CHAIRMAN, EXTREME RIGHT.

By Dickson Terry

TEN young men held up their right hands one day recently and were sworn in as members of the St. Louis County Department of Police.

The men were sound of wind and limb, emotionally well-balanced and had proved themselves to be mentally alert. In fact, as the national average goes, they were in the upper 25 per cent.

These men and eight more like them—who are still on the qualified list subject to vacancies in the department—are what was left of more than 400 men who answered the first call for recruits to the department when it was activated on the first of July.

In the eyes of Superintendent Albert E. DuBois, these men symbolize the County Police of the future as he envisions it, a force of clear-eyed, steely-nerved and intelligent officers who will look upon police work as a high calling and whose status, it is assumed, will lie somewhere between those of the Northwest Mounted Police and the FBI.

To become a member of such a force is not easy, as you will see. Before he even begins the series of tests which weed out the weak, the incompetent and the nervous, an applicant must meet certain basic standards.

He must be between 22 and 30 years old. He must be no shorter than five feet eight, and no taller than six feet four, and his weight must be in proper porportion to his height. He must have 20-20 vision without glasses, and he must have at least a high school education and a clean record.

It is interesting to note in connection with the educational requirement that of the 10 men who were sworn in, seven attended college and two are college graduates. One of the two has a law degree and the other a Bachelor of Science degree in education.

SUPERINTENDENT DuBOIS places a high premium on education, despite the fact, or perhaps because of the fact, that he himself only completed the eighth grade. Years later, when he was on his way up in the Philadelphia police department, he realized the value of what he had missed, boned up and took an examination and received a high school certificate, following which he attended law school at night for two years.

There are a number of the 53 members of the force who were transferred from the sheriff's force who don't have a high school education. But Superintendent DuBois has made arrangements with the State Board of Education for the men to take examinations, and if they pass they will receive the same type of certificate that DuBois himself earned in Pennsylvania.

Of the 400 men who made application for a job on the force, among whom, incidentally, were a number of St. Louis policemen, all but 76 were eliminated by the basic requirements listed above.

Superintendent DuBois then sought the aid of another DuBois—Philip H. DuBois, head of the department of psychology at Washington University, who has for a number of years worked with the St. Louis Police Department in preparing tests to determine the eligibility of candidates to the St. Louis force. Prof. DuBois assigned to Supt. DuBois one of his crack assistants, C. E. Sherrick Jr., assistant professor of psychology.

Together Supt. DuBois and Sherrick put together a series of tests as rigid as any in the country and more rigid than most. For instance in the general classification test, adapted from the Army's general classification test, applicants must score 116 points. This is six points higher than the Army requires for officer candidates.

The first test to which applicants were subjected was a police aptitude test devised by Sherrick to measure a candidate's power of deduction and detail memory.

Which simply means, Sherrick explained, the ability to recall accurately faces and the features of a given scene. For instance, applicants may be shown a set of 16 faces. Fifteen minutes later they will be shown another set of 25, but among the 25 will be six faces from the original set of 16. All they have to do is pick them out, and it sounds easier than it is.

Then too, they may be shown sets of faces with the names. Then the faces and names are shuffled and the idea is to fit the right names to the faces. If you can get one correct out of five you're not doing badly.

Then applicants are shown photographs of an accident scene with many details. After two minutes of studying the picture, they are asked questions about the cars, their license numbers, the people, what they were wearing, what time of day it was, what season of the year and so on, all of which are indicated by details in the picture. On this, scores run as low as 30 per cent, as high as 98 per cent.

This gives an indication of how good an observer a man is, says Sherrick, but it is not completely validated as yet. Only time will tell whether a high score necessarily means a man will be a good policeman, or a low score means he will be a failure.

The aptitude test, Sherrick pointed out, is not a screening test, and men are not rejected or accepted on the basis of its results. Such a test will have to be given to hundreds of applicants, and their scores compared with on-the-job performance before any definite conclusions can be reached.

THE first actual screening test is the general classification test, modeled after the Army test which has been given to some 12,000,000 in the Armed Forces, and which will give a good indication of a man's mental capacity.

The test is divided into several parts, one of which is the perception of solid form to test reasoning inferential ability. A man is shown a stack of blocks of different shapes and sizes. He can only see one side of the structure, and he is asked to judge how many blocks are in it. His answer, Sherrick explains, will indicate his ability to visualize what he cannot see and also give some indication of his mechanical ability.

The test also includes arithmetic problems at the high school level, and a vocabulary test. The latter consists of words with a choice of meanings. The candidate checks off the meaning he thinks belongs to the word. It starts with fairly simple words, but becomes increasingly difficult.

This test, Sherrick explains, has been given to enough men to be completely validated as a means of gauging education and intellectual capacity. But whereas the Army requires a score of 110 to qualify a man for Officer Candidate School, the County Police Force requires a score of 116.

"Any man who makes that score," says Sherrick, "can consider himself in the upper fourth of men in the United States."

Of the 76 men who went into the examination room, 52 survived to take the next step, the oral examination, better described perhaps as being put on the spot.

This consists of a 30-minute interview with an examining board consisting of Supt. DuBois, Sherrick, and Earl Chambers, county personnel director. One of its purposes is to test a man's poise, and he'd better have some.

During the half-hour session they tell a man all about a policeman's lot which, according to the old song, is not a happy one. They remind him of the hours, the danger and the other hardships, and ask him questions in an effort to determine whether he really wants to be a policeman or whether, as DuBois puts it, "he wants to walk around with a uniform on."

"We also see how he handles himself in the presence of a critical group," says Sherrick, which is his way of saying how well he can take it. The interviewers set up hypothetical situations and ask the candidate to tell them how he would handle such situations, which may be anything from quieting a roistering drunk to a murder.

The examining board may make personal remarks about a man's appearance, or some personal idiosyncracy, to see if he can maintain poise. They will ask him about his record, and pick it to pieces. They will ask him to talk about himself, and sometimes this is the most revealing of all, Sherrick says. There is the type, for instance, which gets started talking and then can't stop. Obviously emotionally unstable.

THE board draws it conclusions, Sherrick explained, from a man's personal appearance, the quality of his voice with which is combined the ability to think clearly and speak convincingly, the way he would handle a hypothetical situation, his self control when needled, and how he reacts generally to the picture of a policeman's life.

This step narrowed the 52 candidates down to 32.

Along the way the men were required to take a physical agility test. To pass this a man had to be able to do a minimum of 12 push-ups, chin himself at least 12 times, broad jump six and a half feet, and climb six feet up a rope.

"We were fairly liberal in this part of the examination," DuBois explained, "because we are really more interested right now in mental capacity than in physical agility. Only about three men failed here, and they were obviously hopeless."

After this the men were given what is called a personality test. It is not a screening test, Sherrick explained, but it gives the examining board valuable insight into a man's character, and determines emotional balance.

A man is asked, for instance, to state what physical symptoms he feels when he is emotionally upset—whether he gets restless, feels inadequate, or actually gets sick. The test contains 50 questions, many of which have no bearing on anything but a number of which can be very revealing through their answers. If a man has personality problems, or marital or financial difficulties, it will come out in this test, even though he may not suspect how much he is revealing.

The last and toughest part is the physical examination.

"We took the best parts of the Army, Navy and Air Force physicals and combined them into one test," Supt. DuBois explained, "and it is a tough one. A man who passes it is in pretty good shape."

IT runs the gamut from Wassermans to electro-cardiographs. And it turns up all sorts of unsuspected things. A man who had made high marks in the general classification test broke out in a cold sweat and fainted during the physical, and it was discovered that he suffered from vaccomotor instability, which completely disqualified him.

Men were found to be suffering from ailments they themselves never suspected, such as slight curvature of the spine, incipient arthritis and defective vision. The last eliminated more men than anything else, but there will be no "specs" on the County Police Force, Supt. DuBois says, except among the older men who came over from the sheriff's force.

After the physical examination the last 32 had been distilled down to 18.

The type of police officer toward which DuBois is striving might be summed up in Richard Hackmeyer, one of the 18. Hackmeyer, 29 years old, six feet tall, dark and well groomed, is a graduate of St. Louis University and a member of the bar. He served a hitch in the Naval Reserve in the intelligence department at Oakland, Calif., where he was legal and security officer in charge of police on the base.

Later he was moved to San Francisco where he was assistant security officer of the Twelfth Naval district. He graduated from St. Louis University in 1951.

"I have always been interested in law enforcement as a career," Hackmeyer says. "When the new County Police force originated, I felt it would be a good opportunity for me. I wanted to get into the work, and I think law enforcement agencies can use people with a professional background. I intend to follow it as a profession, and I think police work, as a profession, is entering into a newer and higher status."

Big Gals Forward, Take Bow

By Stan Delaplane

SAN FRANCISCO.

I WAS having coffee the other morning in the Hollywood-Roosevelt when who should drop in but Brig Townsend, a press agent, to dunk a doughnut and tell me what's new.

"Seventy-eight per cent of all women are neglected," said Townsend spearing a sweet roll.

"You think I should do something about it?" I said.

"It is already done. Or will be as soon as I finish the TV script and get a sponsor," said Townsend. "Listen."

"The title of the show is Big Gals, Inc.," he said. "I am working up the script now."

"How big?"

"Real big. As a matter of fact," said Brig, "this show is for fat ladies. Though we prefer to call it the fuller-figured woman. About 78 per cent of all ladies do not look like Marilyn Monroe. So what happens on TV? All kinds of size 10 models are parading with clothes. But the 78 per cent run 12½ to 26½.

"We intend to stop all that. On our show, the models who appear will be big. It will give the lady viewer an idea of how she will look.

"Why," said Townsend, "a big lady looking at the usual models has to sit there with her mouth watering or some agonizing torture."

"What do you intend to tell them?"

"I was just about to answer that question. I am associated with Miss Evelyn Rogers who has been making big clothes for big ladies for some time around here. We intend to tell them how to dress. Hair styling. Walking and especially philosophy."

"THEY SHOULD be happy they're fat?"

"Absolutely. The present thin style woman is not historically a femme fatale. Would you call these skinny dolls in Vogue voluptuous? Naturally not. A lady must have some padding on her to be attractive.

"Take a big woman. Dressed right when she walks into a room, she takes over. You know what I mean. She gets the attention.

"Look at how women love them. Like Kate Smith, Mary Margaret McBride. How about Mae West? There's the rounded type. Sophie Tucker, all personality.

"Another thing," said Townsend rolling his eyes, "the more plump the lady, the more faithful she is."

"To whom?"

"Well, to whoever she is being faithful to. This is scientifically established. Miss Rogers has made a study of the whole thing. Backwards and forwards."

"It sounds terribly philosophical," I said. "But most ladies I know are constantly trying to reduce rather than be philosophical."

"It's a matter of attitude," said Townsend. "They have been conditioned to this idea by the string beans foisted on them by the fashion magazines."

"It sounds like a deep and thoughtful show."

"ON THE CONTRARY," said Townsend, "it is a happy show. Fat people are proverbially gay and happy. Jolly.

"Now I have figured how to aim this at the audience in a really cute way. We say, 'If you have a friend who should learn about the fuller figure, call her up and ask her to tune it.' See, that way, we don't tell them, 'You're fat.' We say, 'Call a friend.' That way we don't hit them over the head, you might say.

"Also we use Evelyn on the show. She's a big woman herself. You get these 36-24-36 types as announcers, your audience says, 'That hussy.' But with a plump type, they are right with her."

"I know a very funny story about a fat lady," I said helpfully. "There was this fat lady getting into a London taxi——."

"I'm afraid we couldn't use it," said Brig. "Weight is no joke."

TV Guardian of Good Taste

NBC Censor Stockton Helffrich Is Always Ready With Blue Pencil

By Virginia Irwin
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.

STOCKTON HELFFRICH, NBC's head censor whose big blue pencil is always poised at the ready for use on television and radio scripts, holds down a highly sensitive job.

As manager of continuity acceptance for the network, it's his task to decide what is, and what is not, good taste in the presentation of radio and television entertainment.

"It's largely a matter of common sense," says this scissorman who heads a staff of 33 assistant guardians of good taste, "a matter of the flagging of problems that come along in scripts or films, and the editing of these problems, where necessary to meet the requirements of family audiences."

With the aid of the code laid down by The National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters, plus common sense, Helffrich and his helpers find the solutions to most of their problems fairly easy. But sometimes it takes a bit of doing to convince a performer, writer or producer that what he proposes to serve up as entertainment fare is hardly suitable for home consumption.

ONE of Helffrich's recurring problems these days stems from the fact that he allowed one word of profanity in the recent showing of "The Fourposter." Since then writers have been penciling a "hell" or a "damn" into their scripts and the continuity acceptance staff has just as resolutely been penciling them out.

"It depends upon the weightiness of the show and the need for the word in the show," he says. "In no case can profanity be used if it invokes the Divine."

One of Helffrich's headaches of a few years back was the dress of female stars. Now the plunging neckline and the too-tight sweater have gone the way of most things of bad taste and the ladies of TV avoid the too bizarre and offensive. However there were some squawks from viewers who watched Gina Lollobrigida on the Sid Caesar show a few months back.

"There were those," Helffrich says delicately, "who felt that certain of her anatomical segments were not sufficiently contained."

THE COMPLAINTS come in a varied assortment. The stock exchange registered a mild protest when a shady stock deal was depicted on a private-eye show and an Army colonel got up in arms about the damage to Army morale when a certain comic came up with a gag try at breaking through the sound barrier on a bicycle.

"I've even had a letter from an association of pool room operators," Helffrich sighs. "They wanted to know how come we show so many shady characters hanging out in billiard parlors."

Children's programs get special handling by Helffrich and his staff.

A short time ago on a show starring a ventriloquist and his dummy, the script called for the dummy to do an imitation of Jack Webb in Dragnet. The 'phone rings and the dummy says: "Hello, what's that? Your mother was strangled? Your father was shot? Your brother was stabbed? And your sister was poisoned? Eh—so how's the family?"

The ventriloquist's writers argued but lost the battle. The flip speech was re-written.

OLD-TIME movies, the delight of many a modern youngster, also get a fine-combing before Helffrich or one of his assistants okays them for televiewing.

"We always keep in mind that what we might pass for a late evening show won't do for small-fry entertainment," Helffrich explains. "We have found it necessary to make a lot of cuts in many old westerns because of the long-drawn-out death scenes, incitement to lynching, sadism, etc. In the new westerns written especially for television we encourage 'wingings' or 'nippings' rather than outright killings. We're also trying to discourage the use of bad grammar and the old practice of having the bad man and the hero meet in saloons. We prefer they meet in front of the town post office."

A VETERAN in the business, the 43-year-old guardian of good taste has been at his censor's post since June, 1942, except for three years when he served as a lieutenant in the Navy in World War II. He joined NBC in 1933 shortly after receiving his bachelor of arts degree from Penn State College. He served in various NBC divisions, including the script division, before being handed the big blue pencil in 1942. Married and the father of three children, he would like to think of himself as well-qualified to judge what children should or should not see on the television screen. But he has his doubts that his judgment is anywhere near infallible.

Recently on Ding Dong School, Miss Frances showed a mama goldfish in a bowl and announced that the mama was going to have some baby goldfish pretty soon. Helffrich got all kinds of letters from irate parents who objected to their children being introduced to one of the facts of life on television, even by a goldfish.

STOCKTON HELFFRICH . . . RELIES ON COMMON SENSE.

Television Letter Box

WHAT happened to the KSD-TV Saturday afternoon football game? We missed it very much.

JOE PAYNE.

(The television schedule set up by the National Collegiate Athletic Association provides no national football telecasts on five Saturdays during the gridiron season. Efforts to arrange regional telecasts of Big Seven games proved unsuccessful, but KSD-TV is telecasting Washington University games on three of the five open Saturdays. Regional telecasts of Big Ten games are not available in St. Louis because of N.C.A.A. restrictions.—Editor.)

We're pretty disgusted. With three television stations here, on Sunday evenings after 3 o'clock we don't see anything halfway decent. Please try and give us more enjoyable programs on Sunday evenings, besides murder and sports.

As Crosby Sees It

Some Advice on Breaking Into TV

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.

I SUPPOSE the one question this department gets asked more than any other is this: How does a beginner with an idea for a TV program or one who has written a dramatic script get into this business anyhow? Whom does he send the stuff to?

Well, I looked into it and it's quite a problem all right. No two networks and no two ad agencies agree on procedure. One network wants to see dramatic scripts but no program ideas. (I better explain that a program idea would be something like "What's My Line?" that continues indefinitely; a dramatic script is a one-shot operation.) Another network will only look at dramatic scripts from amateurs that come from a recognized literary agent but will consider program ideas from anyone. One ad agency will sometimes consider dramatic scripts from unknowns but has no machinery to cope with program ideas. Another is not interested in dramatic scripts but will consider program ideas. That's the way it is, men—confusing.

BEST IDEA: GET AN AGENT. How do you find one? Well, Ed Rice, script editor for Kraft Theater, suggests you write the Writers Guild of America, 550 Fifth avenue, for a listing of recognized agents. Or you might check listings of agents in magazines like "Writers Guild." But don't just pick out a name and send a script. Write the agent first outlining your background and professional experience, and ask the agent if he would like to see your work. "The submission of an unsolicited script without prior correspondence weighs against the writer," says Rice.

Now—program ideas. People who think they have a good one should write a network, ad agency or package outfit, ask whether there is any interest in a program idea and request release forms. Release forms are very important. Networks and other organizations have been burned too often by lawsuits not to demand them.

SPECIFICALLY, here's how the networks feel. NBC will accept dramatic scripts from anyone. Get a release in advance from story division, care of NBC, Rockefeller Plaza, New York City. Send script and release. NBC is also interested in program ideas which you should send to the same place with a release form. The network would rather not have ideas tailor-made for a single individual. If the individual is unavailable, the idea is out the window.

CBS will take dramatic scripts only from recognized professionals or agents. It will look over program ideas from anyone, provided there's a CBS release form. Program ideas should be sent to Don Moore, CBS Television, 524 W. Fifty-seventh street.

ABC wants dramatic scripts from established pros or agents. In cases of scripts from new writers that show promise but aren't quite good enough, the writer is referred to an agent who can serve as adviser or can arrange for collaboration. This way the network feels it is being helpful in launching new writers on a professional career.

Music And Music Makers

Tale of Two Cities

By Thomas B. Sherman

THE programs announced for the remainder of the symphony season in St. Louis, together with the two already played, showed a marked reduction in the allotment of contemporary music compared with the two previous seasons. This action may be described as a strategic retreat. From published statements made by members of the symphony board one infers that the renewed emphasis on the standard repertory is intended as an accommodation to many new subscribers. Presumably these newcomers, including young people who are making their first contact with symphonic music, will be allowed to condition themselves first, by listening to the traditional pieces. Then, it is supposed, they will be prepared to cope with the advanced syntax and vocabulary of the moderns.

I suggest that an opposite procedure is sounder; that young people with no preconceived notions of how good music should sound are more receptive to modern works than their elders for the simple reason that they come into the field without prejudice. Dr. Paul Lang, chief critic of the New York Herald Tribune and Professor of Music at Columbia University, has found it so. His regular procedure is to start his pupils on modern harmony and then go backwards in time. They are not at all dismayed or puzzled, he says, even though they are not precisely innocent of auditory experience. They have listened to the radio, but not enough to make the nineteenth century orchestral pieces seem definitive and final.

RECENTLY I ATTENDED two concerts of contemporary orchestral music given in Louisville by the Louisville Orchestra with Robert Whitney conducting. One of these, a regular feature of the Louisville season, was part of a Saturday series devoted entirely to newly commissioned pieces. The audience numbered about 200. Not many, certainly. But adverse conclusions should be postponed a moment. For of that number about 80 per cent were less than 25 years old; and the same representation of youth has been observed at the previous concerts in this series.

If the same opportunities were provided in the St. Louis community one could assume that an audience of 500 or more would respond as the St. Louis population is about two and a half times larger. This, I submit, is not a negligible number. It amounts to about 10 per cent of the effective music-loving community and it is composed largely of young men and women who will form the musical taste of the future. At the very least, then, our programs should reflect proportionately this indicated demand for contemporary music.

WHAT HINDERS the execution of such a policy is the seeming fear that modern music will offend and repel too many regular supporters. This fear was openly expressed at a recent panel discussion in Louisville when several members of the orchestra board attempted to evaluate the results of the Louisville commissioning system. One of the members approved the plan in principle but suggested that a point of maximum irritation had been reached and that attendance at the subscription series—where a selected number of the new works were also played—would suffer in consequence. The facts did not support the contention.

At this point I should explain that the Louisville commissioning plan is being carried out under a Rockefeller grant obtained through the enterprise of Charles Farnsley, president of the Symphony and former mayor of Louisville. All the commissioned works are played several times at the Saturday series, which was set up for that purpose, and the more promising ones are repeated at subscription concerts where they must compete with the standard repertory.

MANY OF THE NEW WORKS are recorded and the orchestra board hopes that the revenue from their sales will replace the funds now supplied by the Rockefeller Foundation. This may be a too optimistic hope. Moreover it is too early to estimate the effects of the plan on the local musical culture. Indirect benefits, however, have already been realized. Louisville has been publicized throughout the civilized world as a center of enlightenment. Louisville recordings have been broadcast on international radio networks and have been purchased by schools and libraries in many states and many countries. The orchestra, though small, has become one of the most responsive groups in this country as a result of reading so much new music. Living composers have been encouraged.

The importance of coming to terms with the culture of one's own period should never be minimized. What should never be forgotten is that a musical life which is not periodically renewed will ultimately stagnate and die. If that happens even Tschaikowsky and Brahms will become the exclusive concern of antiquarians.

Hollywood Ice Revue Opens Run at The Arena Friday

GUNDI BUSCH, GERMAN-BORN SKATING STAR, WILL BE FEATURED IN THE 1956 EDITION OF THE HOLLYWOOD ICE REVUE, WHICH OPENS A 10-PERFORMANCE RUN AT THE ARENA FRIDAY NIGHT.

THE 1956 edition of the Hollywood Ice Revue will start its annual tour at the Arena here Friday night, opening a run of 10 performances through Nov. 13. It will have an ice version of "Cinderella" as the top production number of what Producer Arthur M. Wirtz promises to be a lavish and expensive show.

It will feature: Gundi Busch, of Germany, former world amateur figure skating champion, who made her debut with the show last season and who will have the name role in "Cinderella"; Andra McLaughlin, red-haired acrobatic skater who will do a hula; Freddie Trenkler, the veteran comedian who has been with the show many seasons; Margie Lee, a new young skating ballerina; The Bruises, knockabout comedy trio from England; Jimmy Grogan, who was an American Olympic star; Skippy Baxter, who won the professional championship; Ria Baran and Paul Falk, former Olympic pair champions. Don Arden devised the choreography and staged the show again, rehearsing the cast at The Arena for the past couple of weeks. Some of the other big numbers will be "Carnival in Venice," "The Roarin' Twenties," and "Paris in Pink."

Performances will start at 8:30 o'clock each night except the two Sundays, when shows will be at 2 and 6:30 p.m. There will be no performances Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 7 and 8.

The six months tour of the extravaganza will take it from Winnipeg to New York down to North Carolina.

Wagner Company To Do 'La Boheme' Tuesday Night

The Charles L. Wagner Opera Company will present Puccini's "La Boheme" at Kiel Auditorium Opera House at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday to open the Civic Music League's thirty-second season. It will be sung in Italian.

The production has been directed by Desire Defrere, stage manager of the Metropolitan Opera for the past 20 years. The role of Mimi will be sung by Josephine Asaro, young American soprano, who sang for two seasons in Italian opera houses following her debut in 1950. Rudolpho will be sung by Norris Greer, young tenor from Arkansas, who has sung in summer operetta companies and at Radio City Music Hall for a season. Glorya Curran, who made her debut in Narmi, Italy, a year ago, will sing Musetta. Richard Gordon will play Marcello; Laven Sowell, Schaunard, and Ben Cutler, Collins.

JOAN CRAWFORD AND JOHN IRELAND FACE DISASTER AT THE END OF A WILD AUTOMOBILE RIDE IN "QUEEN BEE," NEXT AT LOEW'S STATE. MISS CRAWFORD WILL BE IN ST. LOUIS WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY TO PROMOTE THE FILM.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

MY SISTER EILEEN—The 1942 movie has been remade by Columbia in CinemaScope and with songs. The comedy of two Ohio sisters braving Manhattan and the perils of Greenwich Village is still highly amusing, the Jule Styne-Leo Robin songs are pleasant, and the cast is good. With Janet Leigh, Betty Garrett, Jack Lemmon, Kurt Kasznar. LOEW'S STATE.

RED ALLEY—Old China Hand John Wayne leads an entire village on an escape from Red China in a rickety ferry boat down the Formosa Straits, and earns the love of Lauren Bacall. Fairly exciting adventure, well made by Director William A. Wellman in CinemaScope. FOX.

THE GIRL IN THE RED VELVET SWING—The killing of Stanford White, famous architect, by millionaire playboy Harry K. Thaw, over Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, chorus beauty, a half century ago, is recalled in a considerably tidied-up version which achieves a sort of plush velvet dullness. Joan Collins plays Evelyn with wide-eyed innocence, Ray Milland is a starchy White, and Farley Granger is a wild but too youthful Thaw. ST. LOUIS.

THE BED—Four anecdotes, two in French and two in English, revolving around beds. One, with Richard Todd as a paratrooper who helps a Frenchwoman deliver a baby, is simple and tender. The other three are exceedingly risque, one gayly so, one deliberately bawdy and too broad to be amusing, and the other dreary and in poor taste. With Martine Carol, Vittorio De Sica, Dawn Addams. SHADY OAK.

SEMINOLE UPRISING—George Montgomery in a Grade D Western about the cavalry quelling a warring Indian chief in Texas. ORPHEUM.

I AM A CAMERA—Julie Harris lights the screen with her incandescent performance as well-bred English trollop in Bohemian Berlin in 1930. John van Druten's comedy is still a graceful, humorous slice of life in its screen adaptation. Laurence Harvey is Isherwood. PAGEANT and RICHMOND.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—The spectacular depth process on a tour of Paris, Switzerland and American points. AMBASSADOR.

Art and Artists

Pictures and Pedagogy

By H. S. Derrickson

IT SHOULD come as no great surprise that the City Art Museum's current show of modern Italian art, largest of its kind held in America, is receiving a mixed reaction from the general gallery-goer.

Contemporary art often has thrived on divided opinion. The new exhibition, no exception to tradition, will leave here Nov. 14 for Minneapolis.

Shockers in the show face you as you enter. Relatively remote placing is given representational painting and neoclassical sculpture. At once, however, your eye takes in an Arp-like abstraction of an ocean wave and an unconventional assemblage of oddments on canvas within a frame.

To some, this arrangement may seem at variance with sound pedagogy, but it accords with established principles of modern museology, which frequently exploits publicity and table-talk values of shock.

Concession to educators' "law of readiness," the principle of making contact with a learner at whatever level you find him, not giving him W. H. Auden when all he can take is Robert W. Service, is made by the museum in the accompanying, more conservative print show.

Dramatic display methods have helped gain the Museum of Modern Art its large public. The Whitney, too, followed the shock system last May in presenting its American "New Decade."

THERE FRED OLSEN'S huge Jackson Pollock canvas, 83 by 192 inches, covered with sinuous pourings of paint, smote eyes of visitors as they left the elevators. With the Whitney, excellent catalogues containing much original material always provide introductions to shows. In St. Louis, outstanding work of the museum's educational department helps bridge the gap between artist and public.

Museum emphasis on the latest word at the risk of losing casual viewers seems related to the very human joy of the collector who uses his latest acquisition to elicit startled reactions of friends. Many modern museum shows, in arrangement and substance, seem largely the meat of the collector.

THE ST. LOUIS MUSEUM'S 178-piece collection, with something in it for almost every taste, has delighted hearts of some viewers but has disconcerted even some inveterate museum prowlers who constitute the "Friends." These grew quite vocal and even funny when shocked at the opening.

Later visitors' anguished outcries at finding what they have taken for abuse of materials does not mean they are either Philistines or egregiously ignorant, for, as Will Rogers used to say, we are all ignorant, though of different things.

What one recurrent comment on Alberto Burri's collages means is exactly what it says: "Why, I never saw such a thing!"

Burri's "Jazz" and "Sack, Black and Gold" are adventures in texture produced by apparently haphazard but striking juxtaposition of paint and burlap, sometimes ragged, baggy, cut or torn. The aim, one may safely say, is not conventional representation.

Actually, although Burri is a leader in his field, experimentation with unpromising materials is now widespread, as visits to grade school art classes will attest.

WHETHER ST. LOUIS AREA art teachers practice what they teach will become evident Wednesday at the museum with hanging of a four-day teachers' exhibit arranged to coincide with the annual meeting of the Missouri State Teachers' Association. Unshackled use of fresh materials, especially in three-dimensional work, has long been evident in museum displays of student work.

Adult artists who have been pushing painting in the direction of sculpture range in approach from Walter Barker, whose lavish use of paint resembles that of the New York school, to Fred James Carpenter, whose plaster anaglyphs, or low reliefs, grew out of such heavily textured paintings as his "Lovers," recently sold for $75 right off the wall at Smokey Joe's Grecian Terrace.

For years now a vanguard of American painters has quite properly strained at limitations of their art. It seemed to this reporter, studying work of the American "New Decade" last May, that in the matter of textural experimentation the Americans were at least as extreme as the Europeans in the companion show at the Museum of Modern Art.

A similar comparison, between memory of the Italian exhibition and the actuality of an abbreviated version of the Whitney survey, will be possible at City Art Museum April 7, when the Whitney's touring display is to open here.

It will be interesting to see whether the law of readiness would have been more suitably observed had the American show preceded the Italian or whether that home-grown product would not have been quite a shocker too.

Leon Fleisher To Be Symphony Piano Soloist

LEON FLEISHER, young American pianist, will be soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in concerts at 8:40 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday in Kiel Auditorium Opera House. Vladimir Golschmann will conduct.

Soloist and orchestra will play Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 in G Major. The orchestra will play Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C Major, and Beethoven's overture to his opera, "Fidelio."

It was at the age of 6 that Fleisher gave his first public recital in his native San Francisco. He became a pupil of Schnabel's at the age of 10, and made his formal debut in 1943 as a soloist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra under direction of Pierre Monteux, who called him "the pianistic find of the century." In 1952 Fleisher won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition from 70 other fine pianists, and became a concert star. He made his debut with the St. Louis Symphony two seasons ago.

The Symphony will play its first "pop" concert of the season at 3 p.m. today in the Opera House with Harry Farbman conducting. One soloist, soprano Augustine Pellerito, will sing "Un bel di vedremo" from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," Herbert's "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and Romberg's "One Kiss." The other soloist, pianist Evelyn Mitchell, will play the first movement of Grieg's Piano Concerto in A Minor. The orchestra will play two movements from Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz," Offenbach's "La Vie Parisienne," and the prelude to Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Kirkwood Season

The Kirkwood Theater Guild, which opened its twenty-fifth season last week with four performances of "Harvey," will present "Bell, Book and Candle," "Sabrina," and "The Tender Trap" as its remaining plays for the season. Tryouts for "Bell, Book and Candle," will be held at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Grace Church parish house in Kirkwood.

'The Pajama Game' In Second Week At the American

"THE PAJAMA GAME," the hit musical comedy which opened at the American Theater last Tuesday night, goes into its second week of its three-week run tomorrow night. Performances will be nightly at 8:30 o'clock, except Fridays and Saturdays, when shows will be given at 6 and 9:20 p.m., and next Sunday night when the only Sunday performance will be given, at 7 o'clock. The Sunday night performance will be a special one for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America.

The company is the national one, as the Broadway company is still going strong in NewYork after 612 performances. Featured are Fran Warren, the star recording singer, Larry Douglas, who played Luna Tha for three years in "The King and I"; Buster West, familiar to Municipal Opera audiences for his comedy antics, and Pat Stanley. It was written by George Abbott and Richard Bissell from Bissell's novel, "7½ Cents," and directed by Abbott and Jerome Robbins. The songs, by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross, include "Hey There," "Hernando's Hideaway," "Steam Heat," "A New Town Is a Blue Town," "I'm Not at All in Love," "Small Talk" and "There Once Was a Man."

The next attraction at the American will be "This Thing Called Love," a romantic comedy by Edwin Burke, starring Magda Gabor, which will run the week of Monday, Nov. 14. It was adapted and staged by Donald Cook. Cole Porter's hit musical comedy, "Can Can," which ran for two seasons on Broadway, opens Nov. 21 for two weeks. Abe Burrowes did the book and staged it.

June Taylor Dancers Here Tomorrow

The June Taylor Dancers, a precision line of 18 girls, who became famous on Jackie Gleason's television show, will be featured in a stage show at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in Kiel Auditorium Opera House. Hal McIntyre and his orchestra will provide the music, with Jeanne McManus and the Mac-in-Tots doing vocals. Jay Marshall, comedian, magician and ventriloquist will be emcee. Other acts will be Elsa and Waldo, satiric dancers, Peter Gladke, dancer, and Barry Blake, 12-year-old comedian.

The June Taylor Dancers include several spectacular production numbers such as a Banjo Dance, Doll Dance and Xylophone Dance. Miss Taylor has been choreographer for the Gleason TV show for the past three years.

'Santiago'

HOLLYWOOD — Gordon Douglas will direct the next Alan Ladd starring picture, "Santiago." The picture will be based on a forthcoming novel by Marty Rackin. It has a Cuban background and takes place at the time of the Spanish-American War. Warner Brothers will release the film.

Mother-in-Law

Lives Two Blocks Away, Never Calls

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I'M always amazed when I see all the letters to you from women complaining that their mothers-in-law try to run their lives. My problem is just the opposite. My husband's mother lives just two blocks from us but she never calls, seldom comes by except when we go get her. She and I have never had any trouble. How can I bring her into our lives a little more? I like her and want to be her friend.

PEGGY.

Apparently, she is so afraid of being a possessive and interfering in-law that she has gone too far in the other direction. Your best bet is to ask her for advice and help so that she will be made to feel that she is being of service, not merely tolerated for her son's sake. If you have children, take them by some morning and if you see she isn't busy ask to leave them there for a few moments while you run an errand. Ask her for a recipe, maybe one her son particularly likes, and get her to come by and help you prepare it. However, don't try too hard to run her life. She may be one of those rare and wise and fortunate women who have created such rich lives for themselves that they don't need to lean on relatives for activity and an antidote for loneliness.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 22 YEARS OLD but you would think I was 12 the way my parents treat me. They want to know where I'm going whenever I step out the door, with whom and when I'll be back. One bunch I go with they don't like, mostly because we have such a good time and stay out late and sometimes the boys who bring me home are a little noisy. Three months ago I changed jobs and I hate the place where I work but they don't want me to quit. How can I prove to them I'm an adult? PAT.

By acting as an adult, Pat. Make sure you're out with the right companions—no matter how old you are. Make sure you're thoughtful about not disturbing the household when you come in late at night. As for your job, do you really think you've given it a fair trial after three months? Too frequent job changes don't look good on a work record.

Dear Martha:

● I LIKE A BOY who moved in next door to my best girl friend. I think he likes me, too. One night he and two other boys were down at my house, and we had some fun. Then the next night I saw him, and he hardly spoke. I didn't say anything to him the night before to make him angry. He is a senior and I am a sophomore. Now I don't know what to do. CONFUSED.

Don't assume he doesn't like you because he wasn't overly friendly on that one occasion. Maybe he was in a hurry or thinking of something else. There are many reasons why people aren't cordial. But don't start analyzing his every word and mood. Be friendly when you see him. When he isn't around, don't let yourself brood about it. You'll only make yourself that much unhappier.

Dear Martha:

● WHAT DO YOU THINK of people who go to church all the time and sell property and do not give the rest of the family their share? Can something be done about this? Everyone at the church is talking about it. I told my friend she should do something.

B.V.N.

Do I understand that your friend is the wife of this man who hasn't been divvying up the profits? If so, I honestly think she's the one to make the complaint, if complaint is due. There may be many facets to the situation that you and the others at church don't know about. And don't let yourself criticize anyone for going to church, even though you don't think he practices his religion the other six days. Maybe he's trying his best. After all, most of us have some pretty unpleasant faults to overcome.

Dear Martha:

● A FRIEND OF MINE has been dating a married man. We talked about it one time and I pointed out that it was wrong and she was only hurting herself. She agreed to tell him and I thought she had but the other day I saw her with him. My husband knows about it and he's so mad at her and disgusted with the way she acts and he doesn't even want me to see her. I don't want to run her life, but I don't want to get mixed up in something like this.

TROUBLED.

You're right on both scores. It's her problem—not yours—and yet you certainly need not countenance something you know is wrong. Unless she talks with you about it again, you can't interfere, but you can respect your husband's wishes not to see her so much if you feel that you can't in good conscience keep as a close friend someone whose actions you can neither condone nor respect. However, she may need your strength to lean on and you would be doing a real service to her if you could in some way make her understand the seriousness of her mistake.

Dear Martha:

● LAST JANUARY I started dating a fellow whom I considered very nice. However, we were not going steady. My parents liked him and he knew it. About a month ago, I started dating another fellow whom I also consider very nice. My parents gave their permission. Now I no longer care to date the first one. I have told my friends, hoping it would get back to him and I have even told him to his face. My parents think I should continue to date him, and he takes advantage of this and won't stay away. How can I discourage him? TEEN-AGER.

If you're not going steady, why not date both of them, or are you just so tired of him that you don't want to see him at all? Of course, if you are going steady, there's nothing to do but refuse the first one when he calls and tell him it's all over. However, I don't think it's a good idea to start telling your friends about him, hoping the gossip will reach him. If you must hurt his feelings, talk to him face to face, not behind his back. But I agree with your folks that you should be dating both.

Velvet Gains Basic Wardrobe Classification

At This Time of Year, Vogue of the Festive Velvet Costume Is at Its Height—Flattering Material

A NEW SHIRTWAIST DRESS FROM THE SUZY PERETTE COLLECTION HAS A FULL SKIRT, SHARP STIFFENED COLLAR AND VELVET COVERED BUTTONS.

LADDERS OF WHITE LACE FORM A STRIKING CONTRAST TO THE BLACK VELVET OF WHICH THIS DRESS IS MADE. SHOULDER STRAPS ARE OF RIBBON.

TYPICAL OF THE PRACTICAL AND YOUTHFUL PARTY DRESSES IS THIS JUMPER STYLE WITH ITS DETACHABLE CREAM-PUFF WHITE LACE SLEEVES.

THIS BLACK VELVET DRESS BY SOPHIE ORIGINALS HAS A SQUARE NECKLINE CUT INTO BECOMING WINGED POINTS OVER A STRAIGHT LINE OF BUTTONS.

By Sylvia Stiles

THIS is the season of the year when velvet moves from the accessory field of fashion into the basic wardrobe classification. Although the popularity of velvet hats, gloves, handbags and shoes continues, the vogue of the festive velvet costume is at its height. From nursery school age to octogenarian stage, many will agree that there is no fabric quite so flattering as velvet.

The interest in velvet this year seems to be even greater than ever. Reports from the French couture show that the Parisian designers are using more velvet than they have for 30 years, while many of the leading American designers have included a varied array of afternoon and cocktail dresses, suits and at-home wear in their collections. Black velvet is, again, the favorite because it has so many different uses and may be worn season after season without tiring of it. However, the trend toward brilliant shades brings an interest in the jewel tones for really important occasions.

When it comes to textures and types, velvet ranges from the chiffon-sheer to stiff-backed Lyons. There are dresses with long sleeves, short sleeves or no sleeves. Some silhouettes are sleekly slim while others are intricately draped or billow into much fullness at the hemline. As for the decorations, embroidery and fur are plentiful and in keeping with the current trend toward extreme elegance of fashion. The delicate froth of lace, associated with very feminine modes, offers a disarming accent. Sometimes the lace puffs out to form full sleeves or to garland a deep neckline. There is the interest, too, in those double-duty jumper dresses that are especially becoming to youthful figures and look attractive when worn with the fluffy lace or other sheer blouses.

From the most classic shirtwaist dress to the more elaborate lounging ensemble, velvet provides a rich contribution to the winter wardrobe. Typical of the shirtwaist dresses are those devoid of trimming and intended to be adorned with handsome jewelry or a jeweled collar. Such a dress also adopts a more businesslike appearance when accented with a simple scarf or a tailored collar and cuff set. For wear from an important luncheon through the afternoon and evening, the designers have revived this year the velvet suit which has a contrasting blouse. Some of these suits have the blouse attached while others add a separate blouse and give the opportunity of adding others to the wardrobe. Satin and the gold-thread materials are preferred choices to ally with the velvet.

The number of lounging fashions arriving in the stores illustrates how high velvet is regarded in this group, as well as offering many suggestions to the shopper who is seeking elegant Christmas gifts. New this season are the luxurious "negli-jamas" which, as the name indicates, are a cross between a negligee and a pajama. House coats of velvet are noted in the floor-length dramatic types as well as in the shorter varieties that have a tailored emphasis. Several versions of the shorter slacks and the "fancy pants" style for lounging also are there to appeal to the TV viewers.

While the elegant trend of fashions undoubtedly has much to do with the increased popularity of velvet for late 1955 wear, the improvements in manufacture of velvet must be given their share of credit. Once regarded as a very fragile material, velvet now withstands more than formerly. Most of it is water repellent and crush resistant. Home steaming is easy to accomplish, too. The method is to hang the garment over a steaming tub for 30 minutes, brush up the nap after the first 15 minutes; and then allow to dry thoroughly before wearing, hanging or packing.

For those who want to get the best service from their velvet garments, the Velvet Institute of America, has provided some suggestions that appear on tags and sometimes are attached to the garment by the manufacturer. There also is a booklet for home sewers telling how to sew velvet to get the best results. Throughout there is the reminder that velvet outfits should fit comfortably for best service and attractiveness. Effective drapery is part of the flattery of a velvet costume, so an easy fitting is desirable from that standpoint alone.

THE REDHEAD FROM TEXAS

Molly and Matt Take Horseback Ride in Moonlight, Discuss Marriage

By Anne Allison

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

LIFE at the ranch had not changed with the illness of its owner. In fact, H. J. Braden had stormily discharged the nurse after her first day of duty.

"I'm not sick," thundered the master of El Rancho as he waved aside the doctor's advice and insisted upon going downstairs. The only concession he made to medical regulations was to move his bedroom to the den and this, Molly suspected, was because the stairs were too difficult for him to negotiate.

In vain did his daughter remonstrate with him. "Dr. Wallen says you must take care of yourself, H. J. If you do you can live as normal a life as anyone."

"I intend to anyway," snapped the older man. "Wong. Where are my boots? Confound Wong—he probably hid them."

But Wong proved to be strongly sympathetic to the friend he had known from boyhood. Medicines magically disappeared, replaced by martinis. Even Matt saddled H. J.'s horse and accompanied him on a brief tour of the corral.

"Your dad would rather die than be treated like an invalid," he told Molly. "Let him be happy while he can. Life wouldn't mean a thing to him if he had to stay cooped up in the house. It's his choice, Molly, after all."

SHE was forced to admit they were right and as time passed H. J. seemed to be no worse for his activities. Even Dr. Wallen shrugged his shoulders philosophically. "With a heart you can never tell," he conceded. "H. J. may outlive us all. On the other hand the electrocardiagraph shows that the heart has been damaged."

Molly hid her secret worry and spent all her time with her parent in a deeper, happier relationship than ever before. Walter Symington was not mentioned although Molly started nervously when the phone rang. The news she awaited of H. J.'s blackmailer was a constant threat to her peace of mind.

She and H. J. rode the range together waiting until the heat of the July days had lessened.

In the late afternoon when long shadows fell over the house they set out, heading west into the flaming sunset. Usually they paused at their favorite spot to survey the land which stretched endlessly into the horizon. The horses stood quietly, too, as if understanding the human motivation which brought them there.

"It's good to have you home, Baby," H. J. said quietly one day. "The ranch is never the same without you."

She did not ask the questions which seethed in her mind. She knew now that he would not answer them. Only through Walter and the detective agency he had employed would she ever know her father's secret. Her fierce loyalty and devotion to the big, keen eyed man seemed to be accentuated. Partly by her secret, guilty knowledge that she had promised to marry Walter Symington and had not told H. J. Partly by the constant threat of her father's condition. Yet he continued to improve. The color returned to his face and his good humor with it. Matt even flew him in his private plane to Dallas one morning and he seemed none the worse for the trip.

"What did he do in town?" Molly asked anxiously, as she and Matt rode in the moonlight later that evening.

"I was with him every minute," Matt assured her. "He couldn't have given out any blackmail money, if that's what you're afraid of."

"He doesn't seem as worried as he did before his attack," Molly said thoughtfully. "I wonder why."

"Could be he's solved his problem without us."

"I wish Walter would call me. . . ."

THEY dismounted and walked their horses slowly. Thundercloud snorted his disapproval.

"And when you do hear from him, then what? Are you going to walk out on H. J. and get married?"

"I am not. At least until the mystery is cleared up to my satisfaction. But I'm convinced H. J. won't care if I marry Walter then. It's the trouble he's in that's made him so unreasonable. Why would he have any objections?"

Matt's big figure was silhouetted dimly against the light of a surly red moon. "I have objections to Walter, Molly. Plenty of them although perhaps I haven't a right to voice them."

Accustomed to his pursuing her she was a little taken back at his change of attitude. Woman-like she could not resist asking, "What's wrong, Matt? Don't you like me any more?"

"Don't play the coquette, Molly. Save it for Walter Symington."

Her hand caressing Thundercloud's sleek coat, was trembling. "You needn't be so vehement about it."

"Maybe I have a few complexes myself," Matt admitted. He glanced over the acreage ahead of them. "Marrying you, Molly, would be like marrying half the state of Texas. Pride is all I've got. I haven't a cent to my name."

'No Time for Sergeants' a Funny Play

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—"NO TIME FOR SERGEANTS," which opened at the Alvin Theater last week, is not so much a play as a prank. But it is a prank that keeps a big sheepish grin on its face from antic beginning to idiot end. I think a lot of medals can be passed out. Medal number one would probably go to Designer Peter Larkin, who has looked into Ira Levin's multi-scened script and emerged undaunted. Mr. Larkin has simply animated his stage with the free hand and the giddy inspiration of a rejuvenated Walt Disney. Doors slip away without warning, statues glide into the evening sky, every inch of the acting area gets up and goes where it wants to. The stage itself seems to share the joke, winking at us amiably as it turns inside out.

Medal No. 2 is for Andy Griffith, who first drawled out his performance of cheerful, helpful, illiterate Will Stockdale in a television version of the Mac Hyman novel. Now Mr. Griffith has been given a whole evening to duck his head shyly, shuffle sideways and innocently destroy the United States Air Force. In what might easily have been a conventional hayseed bit, Mr. Griffith is fresh, absurdly plausible and witlessly winning.

A further citation is due Myron McCormick for taking that harassed sergeant we've seen all our lives and turning him into a brand-new, spectacularly funny foil for the undergraduate clowns. The moment a roving spotlight picks up Mr. McCormich the audience is simply his for the asking.

THE NONSENSE is kept spinning by an enormous company, all of whom fit precisely into Director Morton da Costa's diabolical master plan. Roddy McDowell adjusts his spectacles and honorably demands that the Army throw the book at him with an edifying and sometimes hilarious nobility. Royal Beal and Howard Freeman pant and snort majestically as a couple of baffled officers.

Since "No Time for Sergeants" is only a simple and swift cartoon, it doesn't bring along much ballast. Once in a while it threatens to disappear into the wings altogether. It's rather a pity that there isn't a thread of sense or sentiment to stitch it together more tightly.

But let's not ask for everything. As a piece of uncomplicated and patently outrageous buffoonery, "No Time for Sergeants" is a block-buster.

Gallery Notes

THE ARTISTS' GUILD will open its annual exhibition of oil painting and sculpture today with a public reception from 3 to 5 p.m. at the guild galleries, 812 Union boulevard.

This is the most important competitive show on the guild's calendar for the current season. Prizes totaling $400, including a $275 purchase award, have been determined by a two-man out-of-town jury. The display will close Nov. 21.

A private reception today at the Martin Schweig Gallery of Modern Art, 4657 Maryland avenue, will open a three-week exhibit of about 20 drawings by Edward E. Boccia, a member of the faculty of the Washington University School of Fine Arts. Boccia's honors last season included the top awards in the City Art Museum's Missouri exhibition and the Metropolitan Church Federation of St. Louis religious art competition.

* * *

The museum's St. Louis area exhibiting group for most of November is the St. Louis chapter of the American Art Alliance, which bars abstract work from its showings as a group. With a current membership roster of about 1000, the organization will display a selection of oils, water colors and drawings from Nov. 9 through Dec. 5.

Related Theme

The related coat and dress theme for late day and evening wear is illustrated by a black satin Chesterfield type of coat to be worn over a matching sheath dress. Another ensemble consists of a champagne colored brocade coat with a matching dress. Velvet and satin also are being used together for some co-ordinated costumes.

Answers to Housewives' Questions

By Dorothy Brainerd

THERE is a hint of the coming holiday season in this request from Mrs. J. M., who wants a recipe for uncooked fruit cake made with graham crackers. Here it is:

Unbaked Fruit Cake: One 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk; two teaspoons grated lemon rind; two tablespoons lemon juice; one eight-ounce package dried figs; one seven and one-fourth-ounce package pitted dates; one eight-ounce jar mixed candied fruits; four cups finely crushed sugar honey graham crackers (about 48 crackers); two cups coarsely broken nut meats; one-half teaspoon brandy flavoring (optional); maraschino cherries; strips of candied citron or orange rind.

Pour condensed milk into a large bowl and add lemon rind and juice, stirring to blend. With kitchen scissors snip figs and dates into coarse pieces. Add figs, dates and candied mixed fruits to condensed milk mixture in bowl.

Roll graham crackers on a sheet of waxed paper with a rolling pin, measure and add crumbs and nuts to fruit mixture. Add brandy flavoring if desired. Blend well.

Line a nine-inch by five-inch loaf pan with two thicknesses of waxed paper and pack mixture firmly into pan. Cover pan tightly with foil and store in a cool place for two days. To serve, remove cake from pan, peel off waxed paper and decorate with maraschino cherry slices and strips of citron or candied orange rind. Makes 10-12 generous slices.

We admire your foresight in seeking the fruit cake recipe this far in advance, but one of the nicest features of this particular uncooked fruit cake is that it does not need to be nurtured for any length of time. Two days is sufficient. Hope you enjoy it.

APPARENTLY Mrs. S. is seeing spots before her eyes everywhere she turns in her home.

She writes: "How can I remove rust from the inside of a porcelain washer, roller type? Also, there are paint stains on my kitchen sink. How can they be removed?

The service department of one of the largest appliance companies here holds forth little hope for removing the rust. They report that they know of no way to correct it, and suggest that if this rust has appeared within the guarantee period on the appliance you register a complaint at the store where it was purchased.

A sharp razor blade should make quick work of removing the paint from the sink.

HOMEMAKERS who wear glasses will find that one of the modern materials which makes their housekeeping easy has appeared in the optical field. Nylon, so durable in homefurnishings, has now been used for an optical frame which is very light in weight, but is said to be durable and unbreakable. The frames are available in an array of colors and with a choice of corner trims.

And speaking of frames, those which permit an interchange of colored tops which may be easily clamped on the top of the frame make it possible to match frame to costume without straining the budget.

A FEW WEEKS AGO Mrs. D. T. of Roodhouse, Ill., wrote that she had a refrigerator which had not been in use and was closed tightly for four or five years. It had developed a rank, musty odor which persisted despite all of her efforts to remove it.

Mrs. McS. comes to her help with the following letter:

"I had this same problem last summer and a refrigerator service man told me how to cope with it successfully. Wash the interior and ice cube compartment with a strong solution of hot vinegar water. Repeat the cleaning operation after the box has been closed a few hours.

It will again be clean and smell sweet; the musty odor will not return as it does when cleaned with a soda solution."

Thanks so much for your help, Mrs. McS.

WRITES MRS. B.W.B. "I have a yellow plastic rocker that I do not like. Could I cover it with a fabric, and if so, what type?"

Certainly you could slipcover the rocker. I could not advise you as to the type of fabric, as this would depend upon the other furnishings in your room, your color scheme, and your personal taste.

L. J. WANTS TO KNOW how to get rid of cockroaches. It is impossible to repeat these instructions so frequently in this column, but we will mail a copy of directions suggested by the extension entomologist of the Agricultural Extension Service, Missouri College of Agriculture, upon receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Any homemaking questions bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions, or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

"NO MORE HAND-LAUNDERING FOR ME—I HAVE A NEW WHIRLPOOL!"

Slow-Speed, Gentle Action for Delicate Fabrics. Set the dial in "Delicate Fabrics" cycle (washing time is from 1 to 4 minutes) and automatically washing action and damp-dry spin slow down by one-third to a hand-laundering gentleness.

New 2-action Whirlpool washes $90 nylon negligee as safely as a pair of dungarees

1956 Whirlpool with 2 separate washing actions lets you wash all fabrics safely from daintiest to the most rugged . . .

Here's proof that Whirlpool has ended hand-laundering forever! A precious, $90 negligee was tossed in. Whirlpool automatically washed and rinsed it sparkling clean without a sign of wear and tear. It's a test we wouldn't have dared to try except in a new 1956 Whirlpool with two separate washing actions.

When the dial is set for "Delicate Fabrics", this new Whirlpool Imperial does more than merely shorten washing time . . . it also slows down washing action and damp-drying speeds by one-third to a hand-laundering gentleness. Never was a washing action so tailored to fit your delicate fabrics. Now, truly, you can say farewell to all hand laundering.

For your regular wash, you simply set the dial in the normal speed and time cycle. This regular washing action . . . completely separate from the low-speed action . . . gives rugged fabrics the thorough, vigorous yet gentle washing and spinning they need.

Come in and see this new kind of automatic washer . . . it's waiting for you at our store.

10,000 TEACHERS COMING TO ST. LOUIS

Gen. Romulo to Speak at State Convention Starting Wednesday.

About 10,000 teachers from throughout the state are expected to attend the annual convention of the Missouri State Teachers Association here, starting Wednesday.

Public schools in St. Louis and St. Louis county will be closed Thursday and Friday to permit faculty members to attend the meeting.

Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, special envoy from the Philippine Islands to the United States, will be principal speaker at the first general session at 9:15 a.m. Thursday in Kiel Auditorium.

At a divisional meeting on college and university education at 2 p.m. Thursday, the plans and possibilities for higher education in the state during the next decade will be discussed.

Panel members will be Elmer Ellis, president of University of Missouri; Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley of Washington University, the Very Rev. Paul C.Reinert, S.J., president of St. Louis University; Franc L. McCluer, prtsident of Lindenwood College, and W. W. Parker, president of Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau.

Leading educators will speak on various other school programs and problems at divisional meetings on elementary, secondary and vocational education.

General sessions will be held Thursday night and Friday morning. Departmental programs dealing with the various fields of instruction will be held Thursday and Friday.

The Assembly of Delegates, which conducts the business of the organization, will meet at 9 a.m. Wednesday at Hotel Jefferson. Other Wednesday sessions there will be a special program on retirement and social security at 2:30 p.m. and a meeting of the committee on teacher education and professional standards and ethics at 8 p.m.

The convention will end Friday.

JAPAN PLANNING LIGHT JET PLANE, UNDERSEA CRAFT

TOKYO, Oct. 29 (AP) — Japan's defense board said today it hopes next year to produce experimentally the nation's first home-designed jet plane and "an underwater plane" firing rocket torpedoes.

The weapons were mentioned in the board's request for a research budget of $5,528,000 for the year starting in April.

The Japan jet would be a light trainer with a thrust of one ton or less. The board said it is dissatisfied with its present American-made T-33 trainers because the thrust of two tons requires too much fuel.

The underwater plane would be an improved version of the old Imperial Navy's Kairyo, or Sea Dragon, built in the latter stages of World War II as a suicide submarine. The defense board said its 120-foot experimental model would carry a crew of nine, have fins like an airplane, be able to travel at 20 knots submerged with a cruising range of 2600 miles and carry devices to launch rocket torpedoes and wash away radioactive fallout.

The board said also it hopes to purchase 10 guided missiles from Oerlikon of Switzerland for research.

Heads Speakers Bureau.

Kenneth Teasdale has been named chairman of the speakers bureau for "mid-America Jubilee," it was announced yesterday by Roscoe C. Hobbs, president of City-County Cavalcade Inc.

Y.W.C.A. PANCAKE SUPPER

A benefit pancake supper for the World Fellowship Fund of the Carondelet branch Y.W.C.A. will be served from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the branch, 4510 South Kingshighway.

Various activity groups of the Carondelet branch will entertain. Exhibits from foreign countries where the Y.W.C.A. is active through its world fellowship program will be on display.

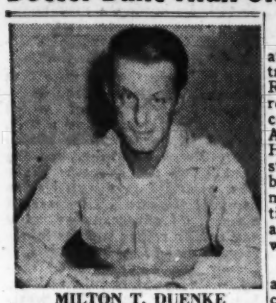
Gala Grand Opening Today of Hathaway Manor
One of Largest Communities Ever Built Here
'56 Hathaway Home Offers Entire Air Control

Duenke Says '56 Hathaway Home Much Better Built Than Old Time Homes



MILTON T. DUENKE

Milton J. Duenke (pictured at left), is vice president and treasurer of the Vorhof-Duenke Realty Co. After 30 years in the real estate business, Duenke is convinced that the modern American home, like those in Hathaway Manor, is better constructed, better arranged for beauty and liveability, and is more economical (in proportion to average income) to buy and maintain than any home the world has yet seen.

Duenke points out that Hathaway Manor is designed and carefully planned for convenience. As proof of better construction and material Duenke contrasts old homes with the new 1956 Hathaway Homes inside and out from cellar to roof.

Modern Basements Liveable

Hathaway Homes have full 7½-ft. basements (built below ground level to give a long, low modern look). Today, cement is scientifically mixed and is not guesswork, with a shovelful of this and that. Floors are of thick concrete, and the poured concrete walls are tiled and tarred outside to make them more waterproof. Duct work is kept on one side, and with the seven metal windows, the basement is light and airy so that a big rathskeller can be easily installed. "Footings" extend 8" on both sides (F.H.A. requires only 4").

Old Basements Damp, Dark

In the old days, excavation was difficult, stone foundations, with poor cement, were leaky. Little was known about "footings." Wooden windows were few because of termites! Built half above the ground, they made homes look top-heavy. Women avoided these deep, dank, dark dungeons, except on washday or when they had to shovel coal in the furnace (many homes used stoves).

Steel Beams and Pillars

In the 1956 Hathaway Home, steel "eye" beams and pillars prevent termites and sag. Larger joists, all of selected "Coastal Fir," have greater "tensile" strength than faster-growing inland lumber. The sub-floor is of strong 5-ply plywood, over which fine quality Hardwood flooring is laid to make a much more solid and beautiful "no creak" floor.

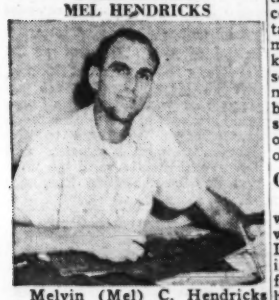
8-Page Color Brochure on New '56 Hathaway Home

For those unable to visit Hathaway Manor, the Vorhof-Duenke Realty Co. has available an 8 page brochure, with pictures taken in the furnished display homes. If you would like a copy, write to the Vorhof-Duenke Realty Co., 7567 St. Charles Rd., St. Louis 14, Mo. and it will be mailed to you without charge.

MEL HENDRICKS



Melvin (Mel) C. Hendricks (above) is the General Superintendent of Construction for the entire Hathaway Manor project.

As General Superintendent "Mel" carries a tremendous load of responsibility for a man only 36 years of age, but like the other executives his experience has been very extensive . . . Including four years in the wholesale lumber business with the Frey Fulton Lumber Company, three years as draftsman for the Architectural Bronze Studio (where he worked particularly with store fronts, ornamental work and lighting problems) and 7½ years with the Hathaway organization.

Chester O. Disse, V.P. for Vorhof-Duenke

Chester O. Disse, pictured above, joined Vorhof-Duenke in 1952 as Vice President in charge of Sales and Loans. He has had 31 years of real estate experience. Born on July 6, 1908, in St. Louis, Disse attended Columbia Grammar School and Yeatman High, then continued his education with night courses at Washington and St. Louis University and Jefferson College.

Like Elmer Vorhof and Milton Duenke, Disse's main hobby is work and he has spent his entire career in real estate, progressing steadily to more important jobs. Disse started as an office boy for a paper company and at 18 became a bookkeeper, later cashier, for the John H. Abbott Realty Co. where he worked for 11 years. In the next few years, Disse worked first as salesman for the Franke R. E. Co., then became Property Manager for Hemmelman-Spackler, then at Albert G. Blanke.

In 1944, he became a Property Manager and soon was placed in charge of all out of town realty for the St. Louis Union Trust Co. Two years

Home Ownership Now Much Easier for Every Family Than in Old Days

Elmer E. Vorhof, President of the Vorhof-Duenke Realty Co. (pictured at right) says that today almost any family can afford to own a 1956 Hathaway Home in Hathaway Manor. With modern day financing, either Conventional, FHA, or VA; it is possible for a family to pay a nominal amount down then make small monthly payments, in many instances lower than rent. Taxes, interest and insurance are included in these payments.

Vorhof points out that traditionally every married couple has always dreamed of a home of their own, but in the past very few could ever hope to make this dream come true. When Vorhof started in the real estate business 40 years ago, mortgages were arranged privately, seldom amounted to over 50% of the value, and there was no such thing as monthly payments. Taxes and interest were separate. Consequently unless a family had a rich relative to advance them the necessary cash they had to save the money over a period of many years, meantime paying rent every month. Many families never could get together enough money, and others were too old to enjoy their new home when they were in a position to buy it.

Elmer Vorhof points out that there are three fundamentals of life . . . food, shelter and clothing and now Americans can buy their shelter as they use it. It is no wonder that Americans now enjoy the highest standard of living the world has ever seen. National records indicate that home ownership in the United States has now reached

Bar-B-Q for Businessmen Opened Older Subdivisions

Not too long ago (before FHA) subdivisions were opened with gigantic barbecues and liquid refreshments. No . . . the general public was not invited. Instead, the real estate company canvassed all the businessmen from the banker to the local tavern owner and invited them to the big shindig.

It seems in those days . . . the difficulty arose in getting property financed, so the enterprising young salesman of the day would soften up the local bigwigs with plenty of ribs, beef and ham and probably a bottle or two, then get them over in the corner and tell them all about Mr. and Mrs. John Doakes, a very deserving couple with not too much money. Before the party was over he would have Mr. Bigwig's assurance that he would carry the necessary second, or maybe first, so this deserving young family could get the proper start in life.

3-Bedroom Homes Acme of Comfort 23 Minutes From Downtown St. Louis

VORHOF-DUENKE, as sales agents, proudly announce the gala grand opening of three 1956 Hathaway Homes in the all-new Hathaway Manor. The furnished display homes at 10824-30-36 Old Halls Ferry Road (½ block from Hwy. 66) will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. today.

When completed, Hathaway Manor, with about 3000 homes, will be one of the largest planned communities ever built in the St. Louis area. It will also be the first, or one of the first, communities ever built in the United States offering complete air control, as standard equipment, in practically every home. Its population will be larger than that of most St. Louis County suburbs.

Harvey-Hill Air-Tomic Air Control equipment, developed in St. Louis, and used in the new Hathaway Homes, has created a sensation in national building circles. It produces heat in winter, air cooling in summer, and year around purification, filtration and humidity control.

Hathaway Manor is the result of fifteen years of planning by the Vorhof-Duenke organization. In 1940 they realized that good sites to the west were getting too far away from the heart of the area, and that a beautifully rolling undeveloped area was situated immediately to the north, still close to the city limits. They, therefore, began to acquire acreage and during the past few years have developed and sold over 1100 homes in Hathaway Hills and 675 homes in Hathaway Meadows.

Hathaway Manor is 23 minutes from downtown St. Louis, 5 minutes from McDonnell and the Airport industries, only 20 minutes of uncongested driving (over the Lewis and Clark and Chain of Rocks bridges) to the great Illinois industrial areas of Alton, Wood River, the Tri-Cities and East St. Louis, including the plants of General Steel Casting, Olin Industries, Shell, Owens Glass, etc., and the U. S. Engineers depot. It is readily reached over Highways 66 and 67 or by Halls Ferry and Chambers Roads.

All Modern Conveniences

The beautiful, gently sloping hills of Hathaway Manor are convenient to churches of all denominations, and to both public and parochial schools, including the new Hazelwood and Riverview High Schools. Fire protection is furnished by the Black Jack Fire Department and by the Moline Fire Department. Police protection is by the new St. Louis County Police Department. Sanitary sewers are ample . . . streets and sidewalks are of concrete.

Shopping Centers Close By

Hathaway Manor is only 5 minutes from the Hathaway Shopping Center and Famous-Barr's Northland Store. A huge shopping center is planned on one corner of the 1100-acre site to serve it and neighboring communities.

Brick and Redwood Used

The 1956 Hathaway Homes will be of brick and redwood construction with three bedrooms, full basements and Air-Tomic Air Control. The best in workmanship and quality material has been used.

Wide Choice of Exterior Designs

Thirty different architectural designs with eight different color combinations, and differences in elevations and "set backs" give interesting individuality to every Hathaway Home. Tennessee stone is also used for inserts and there are planting boxes of stone and brick. No two homes will be identical in the first 240 erected.

Large Living Room

A short four-inch step from the outside leads into the beautiful 17-ft. by 17-ft. living room. There is a large guest closet with sliding doors, a beamed studio-type ceiling, indirect lighting and perimeter-type heating. One entire wall is of glass. African mahogany wood paneling and a fireplace are optional.

Separate Dining Room

The 11'x10' dining room is separated from the living room by an indirect lighting trough. Again, one full wall is of glass, accentuating the spaciousness of the room, yet leaving ample wall space for placing of furniture.

Enclosed, Screened Patio

A step down four inches from the dining room leads into a colorful, fully screened, 10-ft. by 10-ft. patio, ideal for summer relaxation. A door leads from this patio to the garage or carport, so there is no need to go outside in bad weather. "Holiday" jalousies and 2-car garages or carports are optional.

Step Saving Kitchens

The large, beautiful kitchens in the 1956 Hathaway Homes have been carefully designed to save extra steps for busy homemakers. Any woman will love the built-in natural birch cabinets, and the stainless steel sink with its detergent spray and "single handled" faucet. There are 15 feet of "Nevamar" counter space and a maple cutting block. There are separate Suburban gas (or electric) built-in stove, oven and broiler with a stainless steel hood over the burners. The floor is of vinyl tile, the walls are of decorated ceramic tile in six beautiful colors. The garbage disposal is by the famous In-Sink-Erator Co. Indirect fluorescent lighting is used with a spotlight over the sink. There is an exhaust fan and a jalousy door. Two kitchen styles are optional—one open, the other closed. The "open" has a breakfast bar . . . other optional equipment includes built-in stainless steel refrigerator, deep freeze and dishwasher.

Nothing has been overlooked to make the kitchen (the most used room in every home) beautiful, practical and step-saving.

Contrasting Wall in Hall

A convenient hall leads from the living room to the bath and the three-bedroom area to assure the utmost in privacy . . . and easy access to all. One wall of the hall is of exclusively selected wallpaper as contrast to the other walls. There is a built-in telephone niche and the hall has modern lighting facilities.

New "2 in 1" Bathroom

An unusual feature of the 1956 Hathaway Homes is the sensationally new "2 in 1" bathroom. The front section, off the hall, has a Markus Vanitory with a large mirror and a linen closet. The back section, off the master bedroom, has a water closet and the bathtub is accessible from both sections. With the "2 in 1" two people can use the facilities with privacy. One and a half and two complete bathrooms are also available. All have tile floors, "American Standard" fixtures, Moen faucets, and concealed copper water lines and walls of ceramic tile. Lighting is indirect, and there is a separate entrance from the master bedroom as well as from the hall.

Three Big Bedrooms

All 1956 Hathaway Homes have 3 bedrooms. The master bedroom is 13'9" by 10', has a giant closet with three sliding doors. The two big picture windows are set high for better furniture arrangement, good ventilation and maximum privacy. One wall is of exclusive wallpaper design to contrast with the harmonizing colors of the other three.

The second master bedroom, 11'6"x10' also has a sliding door closet and picture windows. The guest bedroom, which might be converted into a television room, is 10'3"x9'9", and has a big closet with sliding doors, indirect lighting and a picture window.

Plenty of Living Space

The 1956 Hathaway Home in Hathaway Manor is built on large, carefully sodded lots, and has 1,220 sq. ft. of living space. All windows are aluminum and fully screened. door jambs are "Standard Steel," venetian blinds are "Roll-a-Head," window sills, splash and patio blocks are "pre-cast" concrete. An unusual feature is the "Bulldog" current breaker panel which eliminates fuses. In the event of electric failure, it is only necessary to push a button to restore current.

Full 7½ Ft. Basements

All 1956 Hathaway Homes have full basements with 7½-ft. ceilings. Footings are 24 inches (8 inches more than required). The floor is of thick concrete. Walls are of poured concrete, tarred and tiled on the outside to make them watertight. Steel "I" beams and pillars prevent "sag" and settling. Duct work, Air-Tomic equipment and laundry space is on one side to allow space for a rathskeller or rumpus room if desired. A 220-volt outlet is ready for automatic washers and dryers. There is a Mission automatic gas water heater and seven metal windows.

Harvey-Hill Air-Tomic Controls

The unique feature that makes the 1956 Hathaway Home so distinctive is the new Harvey-Hill Air-Tomic conditioning equipment. This includes the Harvey-Hill gas-fired furnace, for heat in cold weather, and the Harvey-Hill "Heat Chaser" with its patented "soaker coil" to keep the home cool in summer even at 115° temperature, without the use of a water tower . . . and with no sur-tax because it uses only 9 gallons (not 3500 gallons) of water a day. The "Air-Tomic" controls humidity, and filters and purifies the air to bring welcome relief to hay fever and allergy sufferers, to help keep down germs, eliminate odors and to bring mountain-top freshness to the home.

1956 Hathaway Home Not Expensive

Due to a miracle of planning and the use of modern building methods and mass buying, the 1956 Hathaway Home offers all the most modern features at the low price of $18,950 . . . This price includes the air-control equipment. F.H.A., G.I. or conventional financing may be arranged with a small down payment and easy monthly payments. Such payments will favorably compare to average rental costs today. Older homes can be used on the purchase of a new Hathaway Home.

The 1956 Hathaway Home in Hathaway Manor offers better living—luxury living—at a surprisingly low price. Do not fail to inspect the Hathaway Manor Homes today or sometime this week.

later he joined the Bank of St. Louis as Assistant Manager of the Real Estate Department, was elected Assistant Vice President where he remained until he joined Vorhof-Duenke in 1952.

Responsible for All Sales

He is now responsible for the proper handling of all sales for the company, both on regular listings and on the sale of the new homes in Hathaway Manor. Previously he was in charge of all sales for both Hathaway Hills and Hathaway Meadows. He believes that the many unique features available here in the 1956 home in Hathaway Manor will make his job as Sales Manager very easy. He states that the homes "sell themselves" particularly since this will be the first completely air-conditioned community in the United States.

Chester Disse has been too busy to be a joiner, and outside of memberships in various real estate organizations, a round of golf at infrequent intervals, and church on Sunday, Disse's main interest has always resolved around his home and his work. He has been married for 26 years to the former Edith McCarty, and lives in Glendale with his wife and daughter, Sandra Sue, age 17.

ALL CONSTRUCTION IN HATHAWAY MANOR PLANNED, SUPERVISED BY CIVIL ENGINEERS OF 95-YEAR-OLD "PITZMAN COMPANY" FIRM

IN ORDER TO ASSURE PERMANENT VALUE FOR THE FUTURE HOME-OWNERS IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF A GREAT PLANNED COMMUNITY SUCH AS THE NEW HATHAWAY MANOR—IT IS NECESSARY TO CAREFULLY PLAN EVERY STEP, TO MAKE SURE EVERY DETAIL HAS BEEN CAREFULLY THOUGHT OUT IN ADVANCE BEFORE WORK IS STARTED AND THEN SUPERVISE ALL CONSTRUCTION.

Engineering planning is all important for the home-owner, and in the development of Hathaway Manor, this was done by the Pitzman's Company of Surveyors and Engineers, a firm that has had a vast amount of experience in planning and developing communities. The Pitzman Company, organized in 1859, has now had more than 95 years of experience in the design and supervision of construction in residential developments such as Hathaway Manor.

Must ComplyWith All Laws

The planning of such a community is not simple. First it is necessary to carefully examine all laws and ordinances pertaining to land planning, then it is necessary to make an exhaustive study of the site to determine its suitability for residential home sites.

It is important to consider the availability of schools, nearness to churches and access to shopping areas.

Study Sewers and Traffic

It is also necessary to examine existing sewers, consider the availability of an adequate water supply and to make a traffic study of existing access roads. In the development of Hathaway Manor, the Pitzman firm was assisted by the entire staff of the Milton Construction Company in these studies.

Conveniences Must Be Available

A planned community such as Hathaway Manor will increase the population of an area many hundredfold in a very short space of time, and these new residents will not live in a vacuum. Planning in advance must assure them of proper community conveniences.

After completing these studies the engineers and surveyors of the Pitzman Company then proceeded to measure the land and record every detail of the topography on large plats of great accuracy. These plats were then studied at great length by land planning experts in the Pitzman Company organization and frequently many different sketches were made of the same area in order to determine the best possible arrangement for stores and home sites. In these sketches a great effort was made to fit the home sites to the hills and valleys so as to preserve the great natural beauty of the site in a pleasing manner, while at the same time making it possible to build the homes economically.

The final detailed plan for the entire community was then submitted to the developer for his approval and in turn was submitted to the many public commissions and agencies charged with the responsibility of examining such plans. After this was done and the final plan was approved, the civil engineers again took over.

Detailed designs were then made for all grading operations, sewer construction, street paving, water distribution system, etc. This work must all be completed and has been completed in Hathaway Manor before a single spadeful of dirt was turned.

The responsibility of the Pitzman Company does not cease with the drawing of the plans. They must then supervise all construction to make sure that the detailed plans are being followed exactly as designed. In buying a new home, it is important to remember that its permanent value is dependent upon careful planning.

It is interesting to note that the early settlers in the beautiful rolling land of which Hathaway Manor is now a part, named its main traffic artery Halls Ferry Road because the road led to the Missouri River at a point where a man by the name of Edward Hall operated a ferry. Of course, today many new traffic routes such as Highway 66 and 67 make Hathaway Manor easily accessible from all parts of St. Louis and St. Louis County, as well as western Illinois. Hathaway Manor under normal traffic conditions is only 23 minutes from downtown St. Louis, yet at Hathaway Manor you enjoy all of the extra comfort and roominess of suburban living.

You can own a Hathaway Home in Hathaway Manor confident that the best efforts of hundreds of men have been devoted to see that you will enjoy life more and live in greater comfort.

its highest peak in history and this is an indication that the economy of America is in a very healthy condition. Home owners are likely to be self-respecting, self-reliant citizens and Vorhof feels that pride in home ownership will automatically eliminate future slums and blighted areas.

The Vorhof-Duenke Realty Company are the planners and sales agents for the new '56 Hathaway Homes in Hathaway Manor. Vorhof started in the real estate business during his second year at Cleveland High when he got a job as "home sitter" each Sunday with the William E. Helle Real Estate Company. His job was to answer questions of prospective renters and buyers and pass leads on to the adult salesmen.

Since that time, Elmer Vorhof, now only 54, has made the real estate business his work, his hobby and his pleasure. During the last 40 years he has actively participated in almost every major real estate development in St. Louis. After leaving high school, he started to work full time for the Helle Company and a few years later he joined another firm as a salesman handling both new and old homes and some rentals. This rounded out his previous experience and taught him more about completing sales.

Joins "Holly Hills" Staff

Vorhof then went to work for the Holly Hills Realty Company which had just began to develop "Grand-Over Park" and "Holly Hills", both among the first of such large developments in St. Louis. Under the tutelage of Mr. Livingston, the president, and Joseph A. Goecke, the vice-president and general manager, young Vorhof soon gained a wide knowledge of the real estate business, including sales and rentals of single, multiple and apartment dwellings. He also learned how subdivisions were planned and financed and more about the general real estate business by handling large and small industrial, tract, and farm sales. Benefitting particularly from the advice of Goecke, who is now vice-president of the St. Louis Real Estate Board, Vorhof progressed rapidly and soon became sales manager and an officer of the company. He remained with the Holly Hills Company through the early 30's when HOLC, forerunner of FHA, helped so many St. Louisians.

Late in 1932 Wm. H. Duenke, then one of the best known home builders in St. Louis, offered young Vorhof the opportunity to do the buying and selling of lots and new homes built by Duenke. Vorhof recalls that Wm. H. Duenke was just then introducing popular priced homes through a firm known as the Ball Lumber Company. After joining the Duenke organization, Elmer Vorhof met the Duenke sons, Milton, Wilbur and Burton, then active in construction work for the firm. He and Milton became close friends and for the past 15 years have been the "siamese twins" of the local real estate business.

While with Wm. H. Duenke, Vorhof bought hundreds of scattered lots all over Greater St. Louis, on which Duenke then built new homes. Then Vorhof sold the homes. About this time Wm. H. Duenke began to acquire large tracts of land for future growth. With the advent of FHA financing in 1934, it became possible to develop these tracts by planning and erecting new homes on a community basis, then offering the homes to individual buyers.

Wm. H. Duenke, then developed Milton, Burton and Wilbur Terraces in South St. Louis, Lavina Gardens in Richmond Heights and Sherwood Park (taken over and completed by Duenke) in Webster Groves.

In 1940, after building Hawthorne Terrace in University City, Wm. H. Duenke retired and his son, Milton, then building superintendent for his father, and Vorhof decided to continue in business as the Vorhof-Duenke Realty Co.

The new firm soon bought lots in Wellston Hills (a Cyrus Crane Willmore development) and built 50 new homes under wartime priority restructions, then rented the homes to defense workers (later the renters were given an option to purchase). After the first 50 were completed Vorhof and Duenke built and rented almost 100 more homes, thus getting an idea of the principles involved in volume building.

Wartime Restrictions Halt Building

Wartime restrictions then made it impossible to get good material, so Vorhof and Duenke stopped all building activities but continued active in the general real estate business including the listing and sale of old properties and considerable rental business. However, with an eye to the future, the firm continued to acquire scattered lots and acreage in both the city and county.

Building Restrictions Eased

As wartime restrictions were lifted and quality material again became available, Vorhof-Duenke helped plan and acted as sales agents for Hanley Gardens in University City. Here they built 100 homes for returning veterans under the then new G.I. plan. Shortly after this they erected 200 more homes in Darstdale in University City.

First Planned Community

Next, Vorhof-Duenke for the first time planned a subdivision from the ground up on undeveloned acreage. This was Walton Terrace, just north of Olive St. Road, where streets were laid out and about 100 homes built.

Hathaway Homes Planned Since 1940

As early as 1940, Elmer Vorhof and Milton Duenke realized that close to the city limits of North St. Louis there was a large undeveloped beautiful rolling area, only a few minutes from downtown St. Louis . . . so they began (and continued through 1954) to assemble land tracts which eventually were to total almost 1500 acres. Both Vorhof and Duenke realized that the location deserved a better type of home than could be built with wartime material so no attempt was made to start building until 1949.

1100 Homes in Hathaway Hills

By 1949 quality material was again available in sufficient quantities so active planning was started on a 275 acre site just north of the Goodfellow Circle on Highway 67. Since the new homes were to be of superior quality, it was decided to give them a definite identity denoting this superiority by naming them "The Hathaway Home." Eventually almost 1100 Hathaway Homes were erected in the Hathaway Hills area. At first these homes were 2-bedroom; however larger families were coming into fashion and this together with the increasing birth rate created a demand for 3-bedroom Hathaway Homes. The Hathaway Homes in Hathaway Hills, carefully planned for labor saving were among the first to offer such conveniences as open kitchens and built-in equipment such as gas burners, ovens and kitchen cabinets. When completed, the community had its own giant Hathaway Hills Shopping Center, now widely known throughout St. Louis.

665 Hathaway Meadow Homes

After completing Hathaway Hills, it was decided to erect only 3-bedroom homes in the Hathaway Meadow area (further north on Hwy. 67) in Marine Acres. These Hathaway homes included many additional new features and were all sold in a little over a year.

Hathaway Manor Newest, Largest!

While Hathaway Hills and Hathaway meadows were being built, Vorhof and Duenke continued to acquire additional acreage to the north and west. Architects and designers visited home shows and new communities all over the U. S. to get ideas and by June of this year plans were complete. The new 1956 Hathaway Home now being erected in Hathaway Manor is the culmination of a 15 year dream by Elmer Vorhof and Milton Duenke. Hathaway Manor, when completed, will be one of the largest planned communities ever built in the St. Louis area.

Complete Air "Control" Standard

Elsewhere in this section you will read of the over 100 new improvements available at a reasonable price in the sensational new 1956 Hathaway Home. One of the biggest features is that probably for the first time in the world a complete community is planned with Air Control as standard equipment. This "Air Control" covers not only summer cooling and winter heating, but also ventilation, purification and humidification.

Elmer Vorhof was born in St. Louis Feb. 21, 1901 and went to the Rose Fanning Grammar School and Cleveland High. After starting to work, he continued his education by attending classes at Washington U. several nights a week studying commercial law and real estate (a course recommended by the St. Louis Real Estate Board.) Later he continued his education by attending courses in psychology and salesmanship at the City College of Law and Finance. He has also traveled widely and read extensively, particularly on real estate matters. Elmer Vorhof has always been too busy to ever develop any hobby, except work.

The background of carpeting, walls and furniture woods are monotone and accents are in Turquoise draperies and accessories.

3 Bedrooms

The Master Bedroom is furnished with modern furniture and with its soft Nile green walls and draperies gives a feeling of space and atmosphere of quietness.

Lammerts has furnished the other two bedrooms for a girl and a boy. The girls' room is given a daintily feminine touch by the use of a pink wrought iron bed. In the boys' bedroom a sectional arrangement in natural wood is used to give that 'busy as a bee" look.

The closed-in jalousy porch is fitted with wrought iron furniture for a sitting area. A four paneled shutter in natural wood is used in the kitchen window and as a divider between the dining room and kitchen.

Hathaway Bricklaying By John F. Schulte Co.

Realizing the importance of low upkeep, permanence and lower insurance rates, the 1956 Hathaway Home in Hathaway Manor is of brick construction. Modern day bricks are a far cry from the old days when only one or two colors were available. Like everything else in building material, bricks today are made under strict scientific conditions to make them better than ever before. Local clay is recognized nationally as superior in quality, and over 30 different colors are now available.

In the Hathaway Homes in Hathaway Manor, you are offered a wide choice of many different kinds and types of the best bricks made in the United States. In many of the homes, brick planting boxes have been added to add an extra note of interest to the exterior decoration . . . but no matter how good the material may be . . . good workmanship is of even greater importance, therefore, at Hathaway Manor John F. Schulte was chosen as brick contractor. John F. Schulte has been in business since 1948 and employs 100% union bricklayers. His skill, and that of his workmen, has been clearly demonstrated in Hathaway Hills and Hathaway Meadows as well as in many other fine buildings in this area.

Mission Automatic Water Heater Standard Equipment at Hathaway Manor

The automatic water heaters (either gas or electric) in the new 1956 Hathaway Homes are designed to give a lifetime of service with ample hot water for the needs of any family. The Mission Hot Water Heater, now standard equipment, was chosen after a careful survey of various types of automatic water heaters because the Mission offers advantages in low upkeep and economy not usually found.

It has the Chromalox heating element, nationally recognized as the most efficient and long lived . . . it is attractive in appearance . . . noiseless . . . clean . . . and safe . . . with no roaring burner or smeary fumes The tank is extra heavy with electrically welded seams and a special protective coating and there is a minimum of 3" fibre glass insulation all around which reduces heat loss to a minimum. The camstat "clamp on" thermostat is also nationally known as a thoroughly dependable "brain" assuring proper temperature control at all times with no attention required.

Select Hardwood Flooring by J. W. Strait and Son Floor Co.

J. W. Strait states . . . "For the Hathaway Homes, my firm obtained from Pagett-Smith Flooring Co., one of the top ten producers, some of the finest flooring I've ever seen . . . all top grade, selected oak, kiln dried, flooring of uniform beauty and thickness. In my 28 years in business, I've never been prouder of a job."

The hardwood has been carefully laid over 5 ply plywood to avoid "squeaks," by members of Local 1310 of the Floorlayers Union under Strait's own close supervision.

Beach Electric Co. Does Wiring at Hathaway Manor

The '56 Hathaway Homes have electrical wiring adequate for modern living, including a 220 volt line for automatic washers and dryers in the basement. All work has been done by union electricians using fine material under the personal supervision of Melvin B. Beach of the Beach Electric Co.

Wm. R. Faller Now Asst. Supt. at Hathaway Manor

William R. Faller is assistant superintendent of construction for Hathaway Manor, coming up from the ranks since his return from service in the Navy eight years ago.

Bill was born in St. Louis on August 26, 1926, went to Stix Grade School and later to Ben Blewett High School. While in high school, he was active in sports, including track, swimming and particularly gymnastics. Later he continued his schooling by studying drafting at the Ranken School of Trades and "estimating and contracting" at night at Washington University.

Upon his return from service he served first as a carpenter apprentice, then as a carpenter, then as carpenter foreman. His entire working career has been spent with the organization and he is now responsible for coordinating the work of the direct employees with that of the allied sub-contract trades. He is the youngest of the executives except for Richard Vorhof and Robert Duenke (now on leave for a hitch in the Marines).

Faller has been married for 7½ years to the former Dolores C. Thaller and is the father of three children, Susan (6), Judy (4) and William R. Jr. (1½). He feels that he has a real opportunity to learn the best in modern building methods and is very optimistic about the future.

Jerrol and Associates Hathaway Ad Agency

The advertising and the various news stories appearing in this section were prepared and written by the staff of Jerrol and Associates, local advertising agency located at 6609 Clayton Road.

Jerrol and Associates also participated in the planning of the over-all advertising for Hathaway Meadows as well as the new Hathaway Manor.

Mel Hendricks Now General Superintendent

Hendricks put in five years of war service as Technical Sergeant with the Army Engineers and Air Force, and helped construct the air fields at Iwo Jima while the fighting was still in progress. He recalls that sometimes the bulldozers uncovered caves full of enemy fighters, which caused a little excitement. Mel, always modest, also claims the world's record for being the fastest man into a fox hole.

Hendricks attended Mark Twain, Bryn Hill, Walbridge and Walnut Park Grammar Schools; and Normandy and Ritenour High School (majoring in Mechanical drawing and mathematics) and later studied architecture at Washington University night school for four years; he has had several years of practical architectural work as a side line.

Mel supervises all construction, helps in all planning, and also in the purchase of material, supervises the field office, makes trips to other sites to learn the latest in construction techniques and has a memory like an elephant. Everybody on the job says, 'ask Hendricks'—and Hendricks always knows.

Hendricks is particularly proud of the extremely low employee turnover, (unusual for the construction business). He attributes this particularly to the fact that because of modern methods, work is very steady; which attracts the most skilled craftsmen, but he also believes that another reason is, as he puts it—'the boss is always fair, willing to admit he's wrong when he is' (which is very seldom). Many workers have been with Company for fifteen years and some worked for William Duenke many years before that!

Hendricks, born December 14, 1918 in St. Louis, has been married for 15 years to the former Ruth M. Plank, and has a daughter, Lynne, now 3. He is a member of the Jennings Lions' Club and the Hathaway Improvement Association. He likes hunting, fishing and golf . . . and points with pride to the fact that he lives in Hathaway Hills. Hendricks says, "I know Hathaway Homes are the best: I help build them," and is proud of the fact that so many of the employees have bought Hathaway Homes.

Landreth Says: Plumbing Lifeblood of Modern Home

Larry Landreth, owner of the Landreth Plumbing Co., 6740 Chippewa, who has handled the installation of all plumbing fixtures in Hathaway Homes in Hathaway Manor, believes that modern plumbing is the "lifeblood" of the home, because plumbing is used every day, whereas other parts of the home are more or less static.

Most plumbing fixtures are concealed in the walls and cannot be seen after the house is completed. Landreth states that after 30 years of experience he has learned one vital truth . . . there is no substitute for quality.

All interior plumbing at Hathaway Manor is made with copper water lines and is installed by the highly skilled mechanics of Plumbers' Union Local No. 35, affiliated with the A.F. of L. These men have had years of training and use the best of modern material to give you a plumbing system that will work the rest of your life.

Modern Plumbing Better

Landreth is convinced that the modern home such as being constructed in Hathaway Manor is at least 50% better structurally and more than 100% more livable than anything dreamed of just a few years ago.

Hathaway Manor Sewers By Dopuch and Sons Co.

All sewer construction at Hathaway Manor has been done under the direct supervision of Nick, Dan and Paul Dopuch of Dopuch and Sons Construction Company, using only vitrified clay sewer pipe.

Nick Dopuch, the father, has been in the Sewer Construction business all his life and for the past 9 years he has been assisted by his sons. The senior Dopuch began laying sewers for William A. Duenke and has continued to handle all work for Vorhof and Duenke.

Dopuch points out sewer construction is now an exact science. Grades, proper drop, size of sewers, etc., are figured with a slide rule. Sewer construction is rigidly supervised by the architect and designer and general contractor and then is subject to inspection by the St. Louis County Office of Plumbing, the St. Louis County Health Department, and the Metropolitan Sewer District. Better material and use of more modern methods means no sewer worries in a Hathaway Home.

Beyer's Lumber Supplies 1000-Year Redwood for Hathaway Homes

The Beyer's Lumber Co., 9020 Olive St. Rd., largest distributor of Redwood in this area, supplied Redwood for both exterior and interior use in the 1956 Hathaway Homes in Hathaway Manor.

The Beyer's Lumber Co. has been in the retail business for the past 10 years, but E. O. Beyer Sr., has been in the lumber business for over 50 years, starting as a sawmill hand in the camps of Arkansas and Louisiana. At a very early age, because of his interest and enthusiasm for lumber in all its forms, Beyer became probably the youngest wholesale lumber salesman in the middle west. Beyer states lumber grading was then "hit or miss" with more guesswork than facts

Son, Partner in Business

His son, E. O. Beyer, now active in the business made trips with his father almost as soon as he could walk and is thoroughly experienced in the lumber business from cutting trees in the forest to millwork.

After many years in the wholesale business, the Sr. Beyer began to specialize in redwood. He points out that the use of redwood was practically non-existent as late as 25 years ago and that the only place in the world it can be obtained is from Northern California where three large lumber concerns control the source of supply. The advantages of redwood, is that it is both termite and fire resistant because of its tannic acid content. It has a beautiful grain and will last better and take a better finish for both interior and exterior use than any other wood.

Redwood Long Lasting

Beyer points out that it takes nature 1000 years to build a Redwood tree and as far as he is concerned, under proper conditions he believes Redwood will last that long in a home. Now the big lumber companies reforest Redwood as they cut it, farming Redwood just as someone else would farm wheat.

Business Enlarging Soon

Upon the younger Beyer's return from service in the Coast Guard 10 years ago, father and son combined to form the retail business on Olive St. Road. The firm will soon move to a new building at 8620 Olive St. Rd., where they will have double their present capacity and also much better loading and handling facilities.

The firm does a general retail lumber business and operates under the slogan—"Better Buy At Beyer's."

Title Protection by Insurance Prudent Move

The prudent homeowner takes a tip from big business and insures the title to the land on which his home stands. The St. Louis area is growing at an unprecedented rate and during such periods of rapid expansion, errors and falsifications of land titles can and do happen.

Interviewed at the offices at 712 Chestnut Street, Mr. Adolph C. Kraus, president of the Lawyers Title Co. of Missouri, says the present supposition that all titles are valid is high on the list of fallacies that lead the unwary to sudden serious loss. Mr. Kraus is an officer of a St. Louis firm who are agents for the Lawyer Title Insurance Co. one of the nation's largest and strongest. He points out that the title to Hathaway Manor has been insured by the Lawyers Title Co. of Richmond, Va., and individual owner certificates of title are being issued by the Lawyers Title Co. to the owners of Hathaway Homes.

The dining room carries the draperies in the living room. The dining room furniture is Drexell Framingham and the chair seats are turquoise. In this room, all accessories used are new and fresh.

Color Plan and Painting By F. H. Donovan Painting Co.

Color Planning and Painting, both interior and exterior, at Hathaway Manor is done by the F. H. Donovan Painting Co., with 35 years experience.

All work is closely supervised by both F. H. Donovan and Robert E. Donovan, who has now been associated with his father for the past 26 years. The Donovans are proud of the fact that they have handled the work on all Vorhof - Duenke projects since the very beginning.

Color experts for the company plan the color charts, both inside and out, and then select the best in modern paints to fit cash requirements. All work is done by members of Local Painters Union affiliated with A.F.L.

At Hathaway Manor the Donovan experts selected for the exterior trim and some of the flat work, Pratt and Lambert Exterior Ranch Color. The inside stain, varnish and enamel is also by Pratt and Lambert, and inside walls and ceiling paints are Duravale Latex, manufactured by the U. S. Gypsum Co. Both these paints are handled locally by the Wagner Paint Co.

The Donovans point out that the wonders of modern chemistry have produced paints of unheard-of durability in a myriad of new colors. They feel that the painting industry has improved its product to as great a degree as has other building materials, and looking back over their years of experience, they are confident that modern homes have better paint, just as they are better in every other way.

Cupples Aluminum Windows Supplied by Len A. Maune Co.

The horizontal sliding aluminum window used in the Hathaway Home has become extremely popular because it offers tremendous advantages in permanency over the formerly standard wood windows which required so much upkeep and was subject to decay.

County Lumber Main Source for Hathaway Homes Lumber

For many years the County Lumber Company at 8340 Jennings Road has supplied the lumber needs for the Hathaway Homes. This includes Douglas "Coastal" Fir, five-ply Fir Plywood, Redwood for exteriors and Certainteed products including the "210" lb. asphalt shingles, roofing felt, Fibreglas Insulation and Dry Wall. The St. Louis County Lumber Company operates both wholesale and retail business and is open on Saturday.

Sewer Tile Laid Outside Basement Walls

In order to make sure that the basements in all Hathaway Homes in Hathaway Manor are kept dry, Frederic Shale Drain Pipe is laid around all basement walls. The Frederic Shale Drain Pipe is bought from the County Lumber Company and the distributor in St. Louis is the Frederic Brick and Tile Co., 4280 Natural Bridge.

DECORATED "CERATILE" IN HATHAWAY HOME KITCHEN

The beautiful decorative tile which is creating so much comment in the kitchens of the 1956 Hathaway Homes is "Ceratile," developed by the Ceratile Corporation of Los Angeles and distributed throughout the United States by the U. S. Ceramic Tile Co., Canton, Ohio, and locally by the St. Louis County Tile Co.

New "Color" Planning

"Ceratile" is a completely new conception in kitchen decoration. An outstanding panel of the leading designers and color consultants of America were called into conference with the staff of the Ceratile Corporation and developed literally hundreds of new designs and color combinations. After months of analysis and eliminations, 21 standard patterns were finally selected ranging from period to contemporary feeling for residences and also including tiles appropriate for commercial buildings.

Like Hand-Painted Tile

By a very special process the Ceratile Corporation is able to take original drawings and transpose them into tile to give a hand-decorated appearance. Throughout America, Ceratile is now being used wherever a lifetime, fireproof, waterproof surface is required and where it is also desired to use outstanding color combinations in a myriad of designs and textures. "Ceratile" is being used on both the interior and exterior of some of America's finest schools, hospitals and churches, both in the standard and in custom design.

Boken Supplies Jambs, Jalousies, Vanitory and "Pre-Cast" Concrete

Boken and Associates, one of the newest and fastest-growing building supply firms in the area, are supplying several of the quality products used in the new 1956 Hathaway Home.

"Standard Steel" Door Jambs

All door jambs are "Standard Steel" made by the Southern States Iron and Roofing Co. of Savannah and Memphis, a subsidiary of Reynolds Metal. This heavy gauge standardized jamb assures perfect alignment and the use of "Prefit" doors.

Pre-Cast Concrete

The pre-cast concrete window sills, splash blocks and patio blocks are made by the Hereford Concrete Products Co. of St. Louis. The Hereford Co. uses a vibrating process to produce pre-cast concrete with a smoother, better finish.

Markus "Vanitory"

The "Vanitory" is made by the Markus Cabinet Co. of Aviston, Ill. It has a formica top, American Standard bowl, closed-in cabinet, DuPont Du-Lux finish, and sliding panels. This cabinet has great eye appeal and saves space.

"Holiday" Jalousies

Boken Co. is also supplying the "Holiday" Jalousies made by the Efco Manufacturing Co. of St. Louis. Holiday Jalousies have less air leakage than most double hung windows. Stainless steel clamps and bracing shelves are used to produce a "floating seal."

Boken—Fast Growing

The Boken Co. has made rapid strides in a short time because they are a young, aggressive organization with ample facilities and a real desire to be of service. Bob Kennedy, the Boken sales manager, reports that Boken's growth has been sensational.

Ray Boston Has Been Making Molehills Out of Mountains for 20 Years

Ray Boston, of the Ray Boston Excavating and Grading Company, 10590 Lackland Road, when interviewed commented upon the drastic changes he has seen in his 20 years in the excavating business.

He points out that on his first job for William A. Duenke 20 years ago he had 3 teams of horses and 3 scrapers and it took him and five other men many days to dig one basement. Today with modern equipment, including one of the few "DW1" 23 cubic yard scrapers in St. Louis, his firm digs FOUR BASEMENTS each with twice as much dirt, IN ONE DAY.

Ray states that today he can make mole-hills out of mountains in a hurry. The Boston firm has handled grading and excavation of all Vorhof and Duenke properties since the start and is very proud of their work on the Hathaway Manor job. Boston states that by careful grading they are able to actually enhance the great natural beauty of the site.

EARL SPELLMAN

Earl was born December 1, 1921, at Springfield, Mo., but his parents moved to St. Louis when he was five. He attended the Froebel School in South St. Louis and Roosevelt High School. He then started to work "as office boy and general flunkey;" later as draftsman, for the Maritz Architectural Firm. Meantime, he took a course in Architecture at Washington University at night, and now has a certificate in Architecture and Drafting.

During the war, Spellman had three years of service as an anti-aircraft gunner in England, France, Belgium and Germany, returning to Maritz where he worked until 1951 when he joined the Hathaway organization as Chief Draftsman. He is very interested in the modern housing field of architecture, and has inspected building methods on many trips throughout America. He feels that his present organization is in step ahead of any builder anywhere.

Hathaway Homes Have In-Sink-Erator

"Quick as a wink through your very own sink" is an easy way to remember that your garbage chores will be completely eliminated with an In-Sink-Erator garbage disposer, now standard equipment in every Hathaway Home. These disposers are connected directly under the kitchen sink so that food waste may be rinsed right down the sink drain. Here the disposer takes over, shredding this food waste so that it's harmlessly washed away from the home through the sewer lines. Not only does the garbage disposer eliminate messy, germ attracting garbage, but it also eliminates temper-trying situations such as leaky garbage bags, rancid food odors and tipped over garbage cans.

The pioneer manufacturer in the disposer field, In-Sink-Erator, has developed a diamond hard, corrosion-resistant metal called Damascon No. 10 for the garbage shredder in the heart of the disposer. This extremely hard shredder allows the disposer to give years and years of satisfactory service while grinding egg shells, fibrous foods and even bones. It has a dependable, powerful capacitor start motor that gives full speed the moment the switch is flipped. A pumping device in the disposer flushes out all waste particles for complete sanitation.

Also included in the In-Sink-Erator disposer are two "self-service" devices that eliminate most of the service calls associated with ordinary disposers. Should an accidental jam develop in the disposer, due to extremely tough waste, a thermal overload relay automatically cuts off the motor. A service wrench, with each disposer, is inserted into a "key hole" in the bottom of the disposer and turned to eliminate the jam, then push the overload relay button and the disposer again gets underway. It is very quiet in operation.

Peerless Missouri Big Supplier at Hathaway

The Peerless Missouri Company, 4971 Fyler Ave., established in 1920, is one of the largest wholesale distributors of plumbing and heating supplies in St. Louis. For 35 years the firm has specialized in top brands and has concentrated on keeping an ample supply of parts on hand for any service that may be needed. The firm has expanded steadily and is now headed by Joseph A. Shea as president, who started with Peerless Missouri in 1932.

At Hathaway Manor, the Peerless Missouri Co. is supplying the Moen "single-handed" faucets, the In-Sink-Erator garbage disposer, American Standard bathroom fixtures and the Mission Hot Water Heater. The firm's engineers have worked closely with Harry Landreth, plumbing contractor, on every installation.

Roll-a-Head Venetian Blinds Used in All Hathaway Homes

The venetian blinds at Hathaway Manor are custom made, using the Roll-A-Head Venetian Blinds made and installed by the AAA Venetian Blind Co., who also supply all of the curtain rods in the new 1956 Hathaway Home.

The venetian blinds used are all metal and designed to operate smoothly to permit controlled sunlight. These blinds have exclusive bottom rail SNAP-ON tape clamps to make cleaning very easy. The foolproof mechanism, the self-adjusting tilt, and the flexible slats are extras appreciated by any home owner.

The AAA Venetian Blind Co. started in business in June, 1946 and have now been in their new quarters at 2145 Hampton Ave., for 3 years. They are manufacturers primarily for builders and contractors and specialize in planned communities, schools and other public buildings. In addition to venetian blinds, the firm also makes combination storm windows, jalousies, and all-metal awnings.

Crawford "Radio" Controlled Garage Door Optional

Harvey-Hill Air-Tomic Conditioning Another "First" for Hathaway Manor

Harvey - Hill "Air - Tomic" Conditioning now being used for the first time in the 1956 Hathaway Homes in Hathaway Manor; provides for control of air not only for heating in winter and cooling in summer, but also for purification, filteration and humidification.

Harvey-Hill equipment is the result of a new concept in air treatment, developed after years of thinking and planning by F. H. (Bud) Harvey and John Hill, both men with outstandingly successful backgrounds in St. Louis . . . Harvey in the fields of Administration, Public Relations and Personnel Management. John Hill as a nationally recognized authority in air conditioning and heat transfer research.

The "Heart" of the Harvey-Hill "Air-Tomic" "Heat Chaser" is the revolutionary new "Soaker" Coil which permits house cooling in the same manner as the human body is cooled. In human beings, friction or muscular heat is transferred to a water substance (flesh) then a porous surface (skin) where it evaporates and cools the body. This simultaneously triple heat exchange is achieved mechanically for the first time in the Harvey-Hill Heat Chaser "soaker" coil. Heat from the refrigerant circulating in the inner copper coil is transferred to water surrounding the coil, just as muscular or frictional heat is transferred to flesh. The water is contained in a porous nylon outer jacket like skin. Some of the water emerges from the porous outer surface and "perspires," surface water evaporates, cooling the jacket just as perspiration evaporation cools the skin. This cooling effect is transferred back through the water and copper tubing to the refrigerant.

Thermostat Controls, Heat, Cold

The result is that every room in the new Hathaway home is kept ideally cool by the same thermostat that controls the heat in the winter. The Harvey-Hill "Heat-Chaser" is a combination water and air unit which accentuates the good points of both and eliminates the bad features.

No Surtax, No Cooling Tower

No cooling tower is necessary, usage is cut from 3500 gallons to only 9 gallons per day. The new water surtax does not apply and under normal conditions (A.S.R.E.)

The "Heat-Chaser" is 35% cheaper to operate than a water unit, 12% cheaper to operate than a cooler with water tower, and 4% cheaper to operate than an air unit; and while air units fall off rapidly in capacity at higher temperatures, the Harvey-Hill Heat Chaser provides over two tons refrigeration even at 115 degrees outside temperature.

Controlled Summer Humidity

Summer humidity is controlled because the Heat Chaser maintains automatic control of the moisture content in the air, thus eliminating that "sticky" feeling and helping keep the home owner fresh, alert and invigorated no matter how much outside temperatures soar.

Gas Fired Heat

The Harvey-Hill furnace is built for economical, dependable and trouble-free operation. It is gas fired and has the famous Honeywell Moduflow Control. It is quiet, has a 90,000 BTU input and has Underwriter and AGA rating and approval.

Winter Humidification

The Harvey-Hill Humidifier introduces just the right amount of moisture in the air to protect from harsh, dry heat during the winter. This helps eliminate furniture cracking, dry out and warp and alleviates dryness of skin, mouth, nose and throat. This permits more comfort, helps reduce colds and since room temperatures can be kept lower, fuel bills are likely to be less.

Electrostatic Filtration

Dust and dirt particles are removed by means of electrostatically charged filter. There is less need to dust, and minute dirt particles are removed, thus saving damage to furnishings, draperies, walls and rugs. Every month 600 tons per square mile of air-borne dirt falls on the city of St. Louis. Eighty-five per cent of these particles are too small to be seen by the naked eye but most of this is removed in the Harvey - Hill system. The permanent filter lasts for years and needs infrequent cleaning which is easy to do because it can be rinsed under a water faucet.

Electronic Purification

The Harvey - Hill Electronic Purifier embodies the use of a Westinghouse Stero-lamp. It is in operation 24 hours a day, summer and winter, keeping air fresh, killing air bacteria, eliminating odors and aiding allergy sufferers by trapping pollen. The cold cathode Stero - lamp action has a germicidal action to help kill germs, viruses, and mold spores. It augments the action of sunlight to reduce infectious diseases . . . in combination with the filter, it does a real job of removing microscopic dirt and pollen to help sufferers from hay fever, asthma and other allergies.

Odors Eliminated

A controlled amount of ozone is formed and freshens and creates clean smelling air and helps eliminate odors such as tobacco smoke, musty basements, pets, etc.

Honeywell "Electronic" Moduflow Control "Brain" of "Air-Tomic" On New 1956 Hathaway Home in Manor

If the "soaker" coil is the heart . . . then the brain of the Harvey-Hill "Air-Tomic" is the Honeywell Moduflow Control which keeps its "Magic Eye" on temperatures inside and out.

"Golden Circle" Moduflow Used

One of the features of the new 1956 Hathaway Home designed to offer greater comfort and beauty is the new Golden Circle Honeywell Electric Moduflow. It is the size of a pocket watch and is an essential element in the improved electronic Moduflow which controls the "Air-Tomic" system. The control center installed in the Hathaway Home is equipped with an electric clock to monitor the temperature according to preset degrees, automatically turning on heat in the morning, lowering it at night.

The "Weathercaster," a twin unit, made of all-weather material goes outside to keep a "Magic Eye" on and to anticipate weather changes. Both thermostats are connected to the "Brain" which adjusts hot and cold output to fit the temperature.

Lau Blowers Used In Hathaway Manor

The Lau Blower Co. of Dayton, Ohio, is the worlds' largest manufacturer of air conditioning blowers, and produces a large percentage of all blowers used in the United States. It is a quiet unit, extremely well built to make it superior in performance and permit longer trouble - free operating life. Three of the Lau Blowers are used in the Harvey-Hill "Heat Chaser" equipment, now standard in the 1956 Hathaway Home and a Lau Blower is also used in the Harvey-Hill furnace.

Delco Motors Used In Hathaway Homes

Delco Motors, made by the Delco Division of General Motors, are used exclusively in Harvey - Hill equipment . . . Three Delco Motors in the "Heat-Chaser," one in the Harvey-Hill Furnace. Delco Motors are recognized as superior in quality and performance.

Tecumseh Compressor Titus Defuser

The compressor used in the Harvey-Hill "Heat - Chaser" is the "Tecumseh" nationally recognized as "tops" in quality . . . while the Titus Defuser, well known in its field, is used in the Harvey-Hill Furnace. Harvey-Hill equipment is made of quality materials throughout.

Harvey-Hill Equipment Installed by Maplewood Sheet Metal Co.

The all-important matter of proper installation is handled by the Maplewood Sheet Metal Company who distribute and install Hathaway Hill equipment in this area. They are pioneers in perimeter type heating and have handled heating installations for Vorhof and Duenke for 15 years. Founded in 1930, they also handled this type for Wm. A. Duenke and are widely known for their excentional good work by builders of quality homes in the St. Louis area.

Ray Neise, president of the firm, is a nationally known authority on heating and cooling problems. He states that his firm has thoroughly tested the Harvey-Hill equipment installed in the 1956 Hathaway Home and is very enthusiastic, believing it will introduce a new way of life for St. Louis homeowners.

American Standard Fixtures "Standard" in New '56 Hathaway Home

The luxurious bathroom fixtures in the 1956 Hathaway Homes are by "American Standard" because after years of experience, the builders of Hathaway Manor have learned to rely on this brand as representing the acme in appearance and in quality.

Developed in ultra modern research laboratories and produced under elaborate inspection and testing conditions, "American Standard" have set a new American standard for beautiful bathrooms.

Hathaway Homes are available with a choice of either one, two, or the new 2-1, bathroom with a wide variety of beautiful colors to fit the tastes of every homeowner. In your Hathaway Home, many fine construction details do not show but you can get an idea of the quality by checking some of the features that are visible.

Lasting Beauty

Take the American Standard bathroom for instance . . . these fine plumbing fixtures are famous for their beautiful lines and handsome colors and above all, the solid construction that assures lasting beauty, easy cleaning, and long-time economy. You'll particularly like the new concept of convenience afforded by the lavatory dressing table . . . a joy to every woman.

Moen "Single Handed" Faucets Now in All Hathaway Homes

The original single - handle faucet by Moen has been selected to enhance the appointment of quality Hathaway Homes. This is in keeping with the endorsement of leading architects, builders and with a steady trend in the plumbing industry to one-handled faucets first introduced by the Moen Valve Company, Division of Ravenna Metal Products Corporation of Seattle, Washington, more than ten years ago.

The single - handled mixing faucet is distinctly different from the older-type single spout employing two faucets, one for hot and the other for cold water. "Single-handle" in Moen really means "two-in-one" control covering both water volume and temperature.

Currently there are three methods of operation now in use in the single-handled faucet. Most prominent of these is the piston and stem assembly developed by Moen. The stem is raised or lowered by the handle which responds to a slight lift of the finger. When lowered, it closes with the water pressure rather than against it, preventing drip or leak.

Since the Moen "Single-handled" faucet is simply constructed, it is easy for any home owner to change the faucet washer as needed. All Moen faucets have spring spouts and aerators.

Hathaway Homes Have Suburban "Built-In" Stove, Grill, Oven

In the 1956 Hathaway Home, "Suburban" (gas or electric) "built - in" counter - top ovens, stoves and grills, in easy-to-clean stainless steel, are standard equipment. Suburban is noted for its distinctive features and fine quality.

Suburban Gas Equipment

Suburban is the only gas "built-in" with separate oven, broiler and griddle. It also is the only gas stove with AUTOMATIC turn-on and turn-off. It is approved by Laclede Gas and is the ONLY gas stove with the "certified performance" seal of the American Gas Association. It also has the "AGA" seal and is approved by the Underwriters Laboratory.

Suburban Electric Equipment

The Suburban electric "built-ins" at Hathaway have separate thermostats on both the broiler and the oven (both 3000 watt, largest used). AUTOMATIC, set it and forget it. With this de luxe equipment you can bake, broil, roast or barbecue, using both oven and broiler at the same time!

Another "First" for Hathaway

The Henges Co., 2814 Locust, "Surburban" distributors, state: "To the best of their knowledge, Hathaway Manor is the first large community in the U. S. to offer this new, separate oven and broiler. The new "built-in" equipment has proven very popular, with sales increasing from 14,000 units in '54 to 153,000 in six months in 1955.

Windsor Locks for Hathaway, Morgan Wightman Supplier

In keeping with the Hathaway policy of using only the best, the locks selected for use in Hathaway Manor are Windsor locks, nationally known for their fine quality.

The Windsor brass locks used are rugged, unit construction, assure smooth performance, exceptional beauty and durability.

The Morgan Wightman Supply Co. of St. Louis, now only five years old, is exclusive distributor for many other nationally-known brands of building materials and supplies throughout the United States and Canada. Three years ago, Morgan Wightman expanded from 13,000 to 43,000 square feet and now carries an inventory of a half-million dollars in merchandise.

Kitchen Styling by Kitchen Maid in Hathaway Home

The extraordinarily beautiful kitchens in the new 1956 Hathaway Home features an exciting new silhouette in kitchen styling . . . Shadow - Line by Kitchen Maid . . . using birch in Nutmeg, natural.

Introduced first at the National Association of Home Builders Convention in Chicago in January of this year, the Shadow-Line by Kitchen Maid was acclaimed as the most important improvement in kitchen styling of recent years and received the award for "the most beautiful kitchen for '55."

Nationally Acclaimed

David B. Bohannon, president of the National Association of Home Builders, termed the new Kitchen Maid units "most attractive, appealing kitchen cabinets available today," and W. E. Stuckless, a foremost Canadian builder, states, "I have traveled all over Canada and the United States and have never seen anything nicer than the new Kitchen Maid Cabinets with the Shadow-Line look."

Hathaway Ordered Early

Representatives of Hathaway Manor viewed the premiere showing in Chicago and as a result, placed an early order for Kitchen Maid Cabinets in the new Hathaway Manor Community. This was fortunate as the 45-year-old Kitchen Maid Co. of Andrews, Indiana, reports orders poured in, especially after the "most beautiful kitchen" award was publicized in the March issue of "Better Homes and Gardens." Even on an "around the clock" basis the firm was as much as twelve weeks behind on delivery.

"Rolls Royce" of Kitchen Cabinets

Kitchen Maid is ordinarily considered the "Rolls Royce" of wood cabinets and is of a much higher quality than usually available in low and medium-priced homes such as Hathaway Manor. They are fashioned of selected hardwoods throughout and incorporate quiet, lifetime aluminum drawers. One of the new features of Shadow - Line cabinets are door edges cut on an inverted bevel, an exclusive Kitchen Maid technique that brings front surface into bold relief, brings into broader definition Kitchen Maid's warm new finish . . . Nutmeg. Today the trend is away from metal and reliable sources now believe that about 82% of all cabinets made are in natural wood finishes.

"KITCHEN MAID" cabinets cost more to the builder but were used in Hathaway Manor because of their demonstrated fine quality.

Henges Co. Provides Modern Kitchens in Hathaway Manor

The Henges Company of 2814 Locust street is one of the most unique businesses in the Middlewest and probably the largest in their line. The firm started almost 24 years ago in the home insulation business concentrating on installations in large homes, monumental and institutional buildings. In the middle '30s Henges began to handle acoustical treatments, floorings and metal partitions.

Also Becomes Distributor

Henges is now the distributor in Southern Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and part of Oklahoma on such nationally advertised brands as Suburban Gas Stoves and Kitchen Maid cabinets.

Henges Makes "Nevamar"

Last year Henges opened a large warehouse and manufacturing building at Jefferson and La Salle where they are now manufacturing the new Nevamar Sink Counter Tops. Nevamar is the truly carefree work surface, impervious to boiling water, lighted cigarettes, fruit acids, alcohol and most anything which mars ordinary counter surfaces. Nevamar offers a lifetime of wear and beauty and is standard equipment in every Hathaway Home in Hathaway Manor. The Henges Co. is also supplying Hathaway Manor with Kitchen Maid and Suburban equipment, also with the maple cutting block in the kitchen as well as installing the insulation.

Hathaway Homes Better Built

Floors Used to Creak and Sag

Formerly wooden uprights and joists were used to hold up a soft pine floor . . . All inviting to termites. More joists were used, but little was known of "tensile" strength, so floors creaked, and frequently sagged.

Modern Walls Better

The 1956 Hathaway Home walls, while thinner and lighter, actually have greater "tensile" strength and 100% better insulation. The lower part is made with an outside layer of brick, with termite and fire resistant redwood above. (Redwood was formerly little used.) These materials are applied over 5-ply, strong plywood, heavy uprights are of sturdy kiln-dried fir, and a thick coat of modern insulation is used.

Older Walls Not Insulated

Formerly walls were of thick brick which increased the weight of the house and caused corner settling. Cement was poor, heating facilities were poorer, modern insulation was unknown. It was not always possible to properly seal the wooden windows, so they were small and few.

Hathaway Homes Have "Dry" Walls

In the 1956 Hathaway Homes "dry wall" plaster is used. It is made up in large sheets at exactly the right humidity and temperature and is properly "bonded" for extra strength. Seams and nail holes are covered with several coats of a special cement. Milton Duenke points out: "With the extremes of temperature and humidity the last 3 years in St. Louis, almost every home has at least one plaster crack. By contrast there have been only four or five 'cracks' reported in over 1700 Hathaway Homes using 'dry wall' plaster."

Plaster Cracked in Old Homes

Builders have always known inner walls should be kept dry and plaster should be applied under controlled humidity and at a temperature of 70° (possible in St. Louis only a few days a year). Yet, in the past, "wet" plaster was applied in all kinds of weather. Moisture was absorbed into the wall, and temperature changes with expansion and contraction made "cracking" common.

New Roofs— Low and Better

The low pitched roof gives the popular long, low look to the '56 Hathaway Home. Built like a bridge, the weight is all on the outside walls. Inner walls can be moved. Heavy fir rafters and 5-ply plywood makes a roof that will stand almost twice as much weight (by actual test) without sagging. Outside roofing material is much better and stronger.

Old Roofs Poor— Top Heavy

Roofs were formerly high, steep pitched, so homes looked "top heavy." They rested on both inside and outside walls. Joists were smaller and closer together, and anything handy was used for sheathing. Roofs frequently bowed and sagged.

Modern Bathrooms Beautiful

In the 1956 Hathaway Home, the bathroom is one of the most beautiful rooms in the house. Copper "lifetime" water pipes and sanitary tile are concealed. Floors and sidewalls are tiled. The colorful bathtub is built-in. The water closet is one piece and the lavatory is ultramodern. Another major improvement is the sensational "two in one" bathroom, which permits two people to use the facilities, in privacy, at the same time. One or two complete bathrooms are also available.

Old Plumbing Facilities Poor

Not long ago, bathtubs (if any) were on high legs, the lavatory and water closet likely to leak. Water pipes were of galvanized iron (subject to rust) and were often not concealed. Bathrooms had plaster walls, were usually small, dark and dingy.

Modern Kitchens— Labor Savers

The 1956 Hathaway Home kitchen is big, light and airy, as the most used room in the home should be. Scientifically designed to save steps and labor, all cabinets are built in, as is the gas (or electric) stove, oven and broiler. There is a built-in garbage disposer. Counter space is ample and there is also a cutting block and exhaust fan. Optional equipment includes built-in refrigerator, dishwasher, etc.

Old Kitchens— Labor Wasters

Grandma's kitchen, while big, was awkwardly arranged, and was usually dark, cold in winter and hot in summer. Grandma labored over an old coal or wood stove and took thousands of unnecessary steps.

Modern "Living Room" Beautiful

In the 1956 Hathaway Home, the living room is very large with a huge picture window looking out over a beautifully sodded lawn. It has a beamed ceiling, indirect lighting perimeter-type heating. Walls are beautifully colored, with a fireplace or mahogany paneling as optional equipment. It is built to invite relaxation and comfortable living.

Old "Parlor" Now Outmoded

The old time "parlor," used only on special occasions, was dark, ceilings were high, walls were drab. It was uncomfortable, usually hard to heat and certainly no big asset to living.

Complete Dining Room

The pattern for modern living in the 1956 Hathaway Homes provides a dining room adjoining both the living room and kitchen for convenience. It has a big picture window and also a door leading to the patio and carport (or garage). A folding wall, as optional equipment, can be used to separate it from the living room.

3 Big Modern Bedrooms

The 1956 Hathaway Home has a big master bedroom with a private entrance to the bath. There are also two other ample-sized bedrooms. The big aluminum windows are raised high enough to permit easy furniture arrangement and greater privacy. The walls are colorful with one contrasting wall papered in exclusive design. The big closets have sliding doors.

Exteriors Pleasantly Varied

In Hathaway Manor, 30 different styles and elevations plus changes in "set backs" and color variations are used so that none of the first 240 homes are identical in appearance. There is no "two peas in a pod" look . . . no "row" housing . . . and every home will be occupied by a proud owner, likely to keep up appearances so as to avoid the development of a slum area. A particular feature is the four-inch step, in and out of the house, which saves many extra steps every day.

Hathaway Homes Air-Controlled

Hathaway Manor will be one of the first planned communities in the United States, where complete "air control," including heating, cooling, humidification, purification and filtration is standard equipment.

Duenke started early in the real estate business at the age of ten by cleaning up around the houses built for sale by his father, Wm. H. Duenke, later one of the best known builders in St. Louis.

Born August 11, 1912 in St. Louis, Milton Duenke attended Lutheran and public schools and later Ritenour High School in Overland. He left school early because "My dad kept me so busy on buildings, I didn't have time to do my homework," but later augmented his education by becoming an avid reader, particularly of anything concerning building. He has now spent 33 of his 43 years in the building and real estate business and is recognized as well informed in both fields.

Starting as a carpenter apprentice, he became general superintendent of construction before he was 21, and is personally experienced in every phase of home building from designing and planning to sewer digging and roof construction. He has actively participated in the change from the traditional methods used for thousands of years to the use of modern science, material and machinery. Therefore, he can speak with authority in comparing modern homes with those of the past.

Guesswork Out, Homes Now Family Fitted

Milton Duenke points to three big advantages offered in the 1956 Hathaway Home . . . first, the elimination of "guesswork" in construction and cement mixing; second, the use of at least 50% better and stronger modern material; third, modern homes are built "to fit" the family needs, not vice versa.

Milton Duenke Optimistic

After 30 years of change, Milton Duenke believes that the future will bring even more improvements in building. He expects to see further great changes in his own lifetime and says he can't even guess what kind of homes his son, Robert, will be building 40 years from now, but is sure that, like all Hathaway Homes, they will be built of the best in material and designed for greater comfort.

Robert Duenke, one of Duenke's five children, is now in the Marine Corps, but is expected to carry on the well-known Duenke building tradition upon his discharge next year.

Plantings at Hathaway Manor by Ambo Nursery

Jesse B. Reed, landscape designer for Ambo Bros. Nursery, arranged the attractive evergreen, shrubs and shade trees in Hathaway Manor.

The Ambo Nursery Company, well known in the St. Louis area, operates a 120-acre nursery at Creve Coeur and its retail business is located on McKnight Road, one block south of Delmar.

Molly Beth Price Becomes Bride Of Lt. F. C. Hunt

TONES of pink for the bride's gown, costumes and flowers for her attendants and church decorations distinguished the wedding of Miss Molly Beth Price and Lt. Forrest Clayton Hunt last night at Normandy Presbyterian Church.

Tall pink candles, tied with fern and pale pink satin bows, marked the center aisle and bouquets of pink gladiolas and white pompons were arranged before jade leaves at the altar. Garlands of greenery were secured with pink satin bows along the chancel rail at each end of which were candelabra filled with pink candles. The Rev. Dr. Grant O. Jennings performed the ceremony. Guests remained for a reception at the church.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Luther Price, 3032 Delavan drive, Bel-Nor, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of blush chantilly lace and tulle, the short-sleeved bodice trimmed at the square neckline with pearls and sequins. Panels of lace, sprinkled with pearls and sequins, formed a long train. A small lace and pearl crown secured her four-tier veil. The former Miss Price carried a white lace-covered prayer book adorned with white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. William Edward Horn was her sister's matron of honor and Mrs. Gerald Eugene Koch and Mrs. Milton Ralston Brown, Rockford, Ill., were bridesmaids. MRS. WILLIAM R. HAYMES

Ruth Ann Ball Is Married to W. R. Haymes

MISS RUTH ANN BALL, who has been living here at 7827 Walinca terrace, Clayton, was married yesterday to William R. Haymes of Dallas, Tex. The noon wedding service was performed at First Presbyterian Church, St. Charles, by the Rev. Dr. Theodore A. Gill, chaplain of Lindenwood College. The bride, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. Leonard Ball of Payette, Idaho, and Neosho, Mo., was given in marriage by Dr. Franc McCluer, president of Lindenwood. The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer R. Haymes, live in Monett, Mo.

An ivory silk peau de soie gown was worn by the bride whose fingertip veil fell from a small net and mother-of-pearl crown. Over her shoulders she wore her great-grandmother's pure silk hand embroidered ivory wedding shawl which was previously worn in 1854. The bride held ivory chrysanthemums and Joanna Hill roses.

Mrs. Douglas B. Remmers served as matron of honor, with Mrs. Ray Alsbury of Chesterfield, Mo., Mrs. Jack Haymes of Rolla, Mo., and Miss Arzella Bailey as bridesmaids. Their velveteen gowns were in fall shades and they carried harmonizing shades of chrysanthemums. The bridegroom's niece, Deborah Zvanut was flower girl.

Jack Haymes was best man for his brother. Ushers were Raymond John Fiorina, Victor John Dunajcik and O. F. Barnett.

The newly-married pair will live in Dallas.

These vacationers are aground on Pensacola Beach, and obviously not a bit unhappy about it. Sailors find a shallow-draft catamaran beaches easily when necessary. Sailing is one of the many aquatic sports which may be enjoyed at the Santa Rose Island resort.

GOLF ON BORDER OF THE SMOKIES A NEW FEATURE

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Golf in the shadow of the Great Smokies' highest peaks is a new treat for autumn visitors to East Tennessee's mountain lake region.

The $200,000 course, with bent grass greens, typical of many undertakings to make the stay of the vacationer more enjoyable, has just been opened by the resort community of Gatlinburg. The 142-acre tract near U.S. Highway 441 just north of the Smokies abounds in varied interest.

Players will be intrigued by such innovations as a lift to reach steeper places.

But golf is just one diversion of this region. There are four courses in Knoxville, from which roads fan out in all directions to vacation spots. They include docks and parks on half a dozen man-made lakes behind TVA dams, two caves to interest the most exacting spelunker, scientific wonders of atomic energy at Oak Ridge, and The Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

The Knoxville Tourist Bureau provides complete information on where to go and what to see and do. There is, for example, a special fishing folder, timely for fall, when bass, crappie and pike rouse from their summer lethargy to afford anglers one of their best seasons. TVA lakes are open to fishing all year.

CARACAS A BOOM TOWN IN VENEZUELA

Years ago when our forefathers were crossing the Mississippi on their way to open northwest territories, cities like Cheyenne and Fargo were known as booming, bustling frontier towns loaded with adventurous people with a real zest for living.

Now the United States is completely settled. But our Latin neighbors to the south are picking up where we left off.

Caracas, Venezuela, today is a twentieth century frontier town, bursting with oil money and building frantically up to a style to which it's easy to become accustomed.

A new $60,000,000 super-highway connects with Maiquetia airport.

The city is complete with $8,000,000 luxury hotels, delightful restaurants, football and baseball stadiums and the Centro Simon Bolivar, Caracas' lavish version of Rockefeller Center. Many other super-projects currently are under way, with no end in sight to the building, according to the Avensa Air Lines.

Caracas, like every Latin American city, has its dignified old families, but it's popping with new ones too, and they're not to be outdone. In what other city of 700,000 is it as easy to buy a Christian Dior dress or a Cartier bracelet as a good ear of corn? Where else may one find new millionaires up from the interior whose calling cards read, after the name, "Capital: 6,000,000 bolivars" ($2,000,000)?

Caracas, of course, isn't all of Venezuela, for the capital city doesn't even have the oil that pays the bills. Most oil comes from Maracaibo, another fast-growing city.

There are other fields near British Guiana, and in the plains to the south, but where there is neither Caracas or oil, Venezuela is a different country.

The most exciting section of Venezuela is the southeast, a land of deep tropical jungle. The long majestic Orinoco river opens the only passageway through the tangled expanse. A trip down the Orinoco on the little river boat takes 15 first-class passengers and is an extraordinary experience. The boat goes from Ciudad Bolivar to Puerto Ayaciucho in six days—either way for 120 bolivars (at 30 cents to the bolivar, just $40). To make the trip, one can fly from Caracas to either Ciudad Bolivar or Puerto Ayaciucho.

At no extra expense, one may take an aerial side-trip from Ciudad Bolivar to Canaima Lagoon with its pink sand beach. The Indians have built a guest house there, not far from a series of lovely waterfalls, and the Venezuelan government permits visitors who find diamonds in the rocks nearby to keep any stones worth less than $1700.

COLOR PEAK

The peak of the season for brilliant tree coloration in the Lake of the Ozarks area will be reached this weekend and continue during the coming week, according to R. J. Shaidnagle, executive director of the Lake of the Ozarks Assoc.

Shaidnagle suggests that persons planning tours to enjoy the color should not postpone them if they wish to see the color at its best.

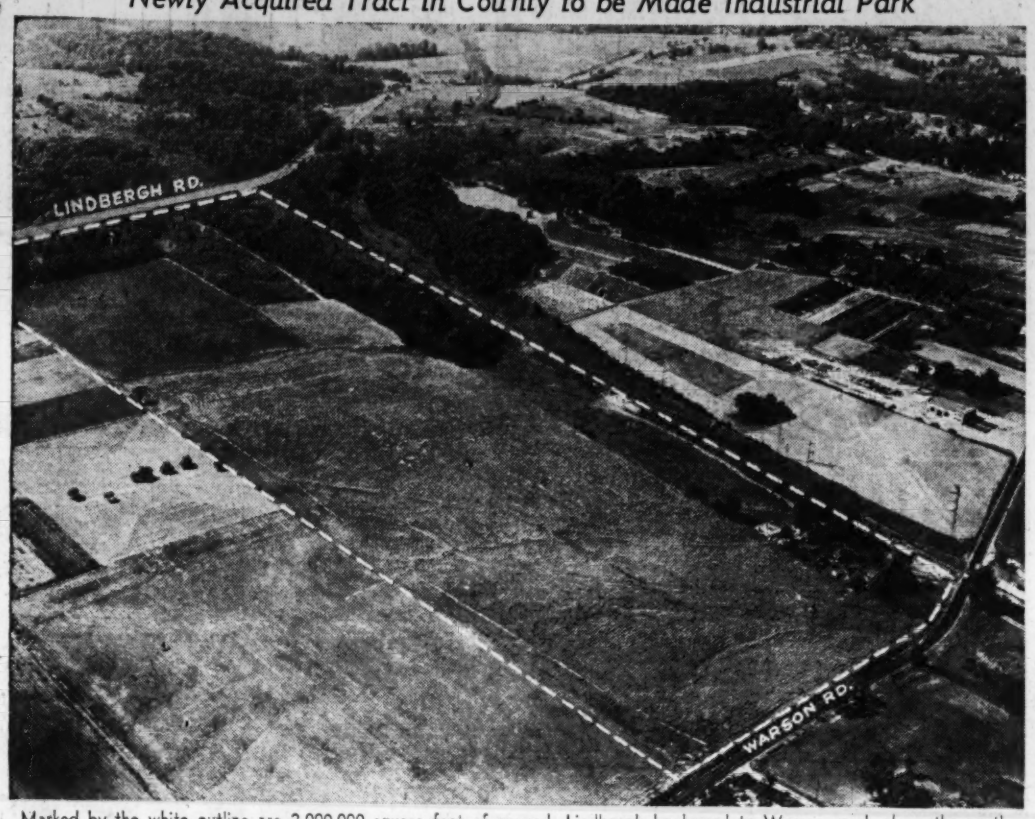
Newly Acquired Tract in County to be Made Industrial Park



Marked by the white outline are 2,000,000 square feet of ground, Lindbergh boulevard to Warson road, along the south side of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad, acquired last week by a newly organized corporation called Industrial Properties, Inc., for development as a "controlled occupancy, controlled construction" industrial park. Purchase of 37½ acres from Walter J. Graeler and wife Ruth was made through the agencies of W. H. Lerch, Inc., and Bakewell at an indicated cost of about $200,000, and an adjoining 10-acre piece also was acquired. Options have been taken on additional ground in the area.

47 Acres Bought to Develop

Ground totaling 47½ acres, or 2,000,000 square feet, fronting on Lindbergh boulevard and Warson road at the south side of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific right of way in St. Louis county (north of Olive street road) was acquired last week by a syndicate which plans to develop it as an industrial park.

Grantors were Lareida B. Devereaux, who had 10 acres of the ground, and Walter J. and Ruth Graeler who had 37½ acres. Agents in the deal were Walter H. Lerch, Inc., for the Graelers, Walter Rust and John Keeshan for Devereaux interests, and the Edward L. Bakewell agency for the buyers.

Title to the ground was taken in the name of Industrial Properties, Inc., a new corporation formed to promote development of the tract. Members of the corporation are Andrew H. Baur, formerly of Ladue Supply Co., president; George H. Murch, of Murch-Jarvis Construction Co., vice-president; Edward L. Bakewell Jr., of the Bakewell real estate agency, secretary, and Albert W. Wenthe, industrial consultant.

This firm has taken office space at 34 North Brentwood boulevard, Clayton, and already has made some pre-sale of the proposed development. A 100,000 square-foot tract has been sold, corporation spokesmen said, though the buyer was not named. Negotiations for leasing and other sales are said to be in progress.

Whether ground is sold outright or whether the promoters retain ownership, build and lease, it was said that controlled tenancy (to eliminate so-called nuisance types of industry) and controlled construction would be maintained to prevent a hodge-podge.

Arrangements have been worked out with the railroad, it was said, for new trackage into the ground from the 2700-foot railway frontage just beyond Lackland Station, for service to proposed plants and warehouses. An all-new, central 44-foot wide boulevard strip will be engineered and built through the development from Lindbergh to Warson road, providing entrance and

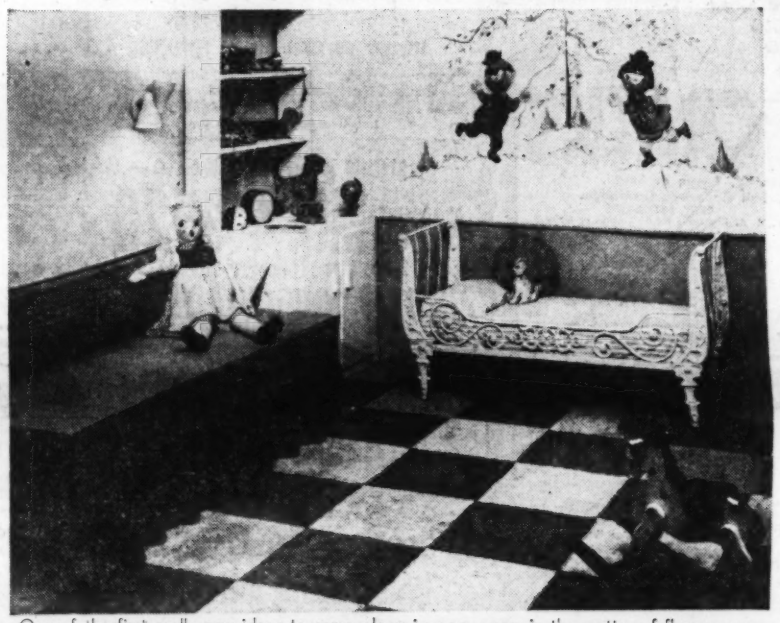
Apartment Building in Richmond Heights Bought

This 12-family apartment building at 7750-62 Wise Avenue, Richmond Heights, has been purchased by A. Robnick, Inc., of which Albert Robnick is president, from Clyde H. Sims of Missouri Stables, in a transaction negotiated by the agency of Charles A. Johnson, Inc. Robnick has named the Glick company managing agent for the property, he reported. Consideration in the transaction was indicated to be $120,000. The property has three and four-room efficiency units, central, stoker-fired hot-water heat; tiled kitchens and baths; 12-car garage area in basement. The building of matt brick with stone and glass block trim, on 132 by 110-foot lot, is about 15 years old.

Apartment Purchased By Real Estate Dealer

Paul Bruckner Jr. and his wife Mildred P. Bruckner (he's a real estate dealer) have purchased this six-family apartment building at 5878 Nottingham (Clifton avenue intersection) in St. Louis Hills from Bernice Baudendistel. Mr. and Mrs. Bruckner plan to reside in one unit of the building, beginning about Jan. 1. Property has four two-bedroom units, two three-bedroom units. Each unit has its own gas heating plant, garage and storage space in basement. There is a recreation and rathskeller suite in basement, with sound-proofed walls and ceiling, leather furniture, fluorescent lighting, tiled floor for dancing.

Squares of Carpet New Idea in You-Do-It Decor



One of the first really new ideas to come along in many years in the matter of floor covering has been used in decorating a room in one of the display houses in the new Hathaway Manor Subdivision, which is being opened formally today. It is carpeting in 18-inch squares with adhesive backing, readily put down or taken up at will, vari-colored for many designs.

Subdivision Opens With Big Hoopla

With a lot of hoopla similar to that used in Texas and on the West Coast, a huge new subdivision called Hathaway Manor is scheduled to be presented formally (rather, somewhat informally) to the public today.

A project of the Vorhof-Duenke Real Estate and building organizations, the subdivision is on Old Halls Ferry road in North St. Louis county, half a mile off the Highway 66 By-Pass.

One of the newest things being presented is an item of interior decoration.

Houses have been decorated for the opening by Lammert's, Scruggs and Stix interior decorating departments and in one of the houses a room has been furnished as a "TV room" with cotton carpeting in black, white and pink. A brand-new item

Cluster Plan Initiated To Enlarge Grade School

Because it did not appear feasible to add rooms onto the present Osage Hills elementary school building in Kirkwood, (District R-7), the first of a new "cluster" of small school units is being added instead. This is an entirely separate building on the same grounds as the original building and connected to it by covered walkway. The campus is on Glenwood Lane in Osage Hills, two blocks south of Big Bend road and just east of the Greenbriar Country Club.

William B. Ittner, Inc., has designed the structure and the Albers Construction Co. has started building it at a contract cost of $59,570, just under the $60,000 estimate.

The building has four class rooms and one general purpose room, toilet facilities and its own heating unit. It is built on concrete slab, without basement, has exposed steel joists, steel roof deck, exterior walls of brick finish with light-weight concrete backup that, with projected architectural steel form the interior decor. The heating is hot-water with continuous finned-tube radiation. Lighting is fluorescent and window lighting is augmented by plastic domes.

Additional four, six, eight or 12-room buildings may be added to the "cluster" on the campus as need develops, making expansion easier, less costly at any one time and perhaps also on a long-range basis, since the system would tend, it appears, to prevent over-building. It also makes possible lighter and more rapid construction and, in this case cost averages $11,900 per room (that is, counting the five use-rooms, with the cost of the heating area and toilets, etc., prorated to the use-rooms), a figure that compares with some $18,000 or better on some large, integrated school construction.

Opens New Office

Joseph A. Naert, a real estate dealer, has opened a new office at 3008 South Grand boulevard.

Sketch of New Osage Hills Elementary School in Kirkwood

This sketch from designers, William B. Ittner, Inc., is of the new Osage Hills Elementary School building, under construction for the Kirkwood (District R-7) Board of Education on the campus of the original Osage Hills school, two blocks south of Big Bend boulevard, just east of Greenbriar Country Club. The Albers Construction Co. has the general contract. Separate building, deemed more feasible than addition to old, becomes part of "cluster".

Business Outlook: 'Better'

NEW YORK — Business next year will be even better than this year, with greater output, higher wages and higher prices in prospect, according to the forecasts of 201 leading economists polled by F. W. Dodge Corporation in its annual survey of economists' opinion.

The poll—used by the Dodge organization as one basis for its own estimates of the construction outlook to be released shortly by Dodge vice chairman Thomas S. Holden—shows the economists generally agreed that total output, measured by gross national product, will rise to a peak in the middle of 1956.

However, according to an analysis of the results by Dr. George Cline Smith, Dodge economist, the panel expects a slight downturn in output in the second half of next year. A similar pattern, he said, shows up in the forecasts for the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production.

In previous polls this panel accurately foresaw the mild downturn of business in 1954 and the upturn in 1955, Dr. Smith said.

Economists Agree.

Dr. Smith said that the economists showed a high degree of unanimity on most points. "For example," he said, "four out of five of the economists expect next year's gross national product to be higher than the mid-1955 level. In addition, 84 per cent of the panel expect personal consumption expenditures next year to be above prevailing levels; more than 90 per cent expect manufacturing wage rates to increase next year; and 85 per cent expect consumer prices to be at higher levels."

The economists participating in the current survey include 31 in financial organizations and insurance companies; 88 from other business firms; 44 from colleges and universities; and eight from government. The remaining 30 are consultants or members of research organizations.

According to the analysis, the panel expect next year's total new construction to be about $41 billion, a very slight decrease below the estimate of $42 billion for this year. However, they expect housing starts to decline substantially, with a total of 1,150,000 in 1956, and with the rate in the second half of the year lower than in the first half.

Election a Factor.

Nearly all the panel feel that personal consumption expenditures next year will continue their steady long-term rise, with the median forecast at a record-breaking $255 billion for the year. This would represent a 3 per cent increase over the mid-1955 level.

Dr. Smith noted that President Eisenhower's unfortunate heart attack occurred during the period in which replies to the questionnaire were being received.

"The question of whether this event affected replies received later, or would have caused earlier respondents to Realtors To Parley At N.Y.C.

With St. Louis to play host in 1956 to the national convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards for the first time in more than 10 years, this city will send an extraordinary delegation of "officials greeters" to the 1955 convention in New York City next weekend. Currently 175 are signed by advance registration through the St. Louis board, and are expected to constitute the largest convention delegation from outside New York itself. One other city, twice the size of St. Louis, has an advance registration of a few more than 100 persons, C. C. Lang, executive secretary of the St. Louis board, said.

The St. Louis group will include members of the St. Louis County Real Estate Board and a few from the East St. Louis Real Estate Board, together with a few representatives of out-state boards. Some representatives of these other neighboring groups may go, too, separately from the local grouped-delegation.

Most of the St. Louis group will travel on a New York Central special train, leaving here at 6 p.m. next Friday. Other registration has been made at the Roosevelt Hotel, and the party will arrive there late Saturday.

Among persons most recently added to the delegate list here are:

Mr. and Mrs. Ben J. Ruhl; Theodore R. Martin; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shapiro Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Willard B. Shelp; Mrs. Eleanor B. Hastings; Miss Alice D. Classen of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Irvin H. Koplar; Henry C. Burnham; Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Von Engeln; Mr. and Mrs. James J. Litsey of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. James P. Bentley; Robert W. Brandriff; Thomas J. Kiefer; Mr. and Mrs. William S. Seltzer; Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Rothman; Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Rengel; Sydney Jacobs; Mrs. Carol W. Laux; Mr. and Mrs. George C. Doering; Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. levy; Mrs. Mabel Nagel; Roy Wenzlick, Ralph O'Oench.

The official business of the national convention will be concluded on the afternoon of Thursday, Nov. 10. Thereafter, some 40 of the St. Louis delegation will make a post-convention trip, either by plane or ship, to Bermuda and Nassau. Others will remain in New York City for the weekend; others head for home on Friday and Saturday after the close of the convention.

Expanding Staff

The Dolan Co., one of the largest real estate sales and service organizations in the Metropolitan St. Louis area, has expanded its staff by addition of three salesmen, giving the firm a total of 65 on the sales staff, a total organization of 103 persons.

Gas Service Plant Being Added North

The Laclede Gas Co. reports work started on a northwest operating center at 6400 Graham road, Berkeley, to provide faster service in that area. Cost has been estimated at $1,000,000.

The building, 50,000 square feet area, will house a service department, construction and maintenance department, and will contain storeroom and garage space.

The operating center also will have parking facilities for employes' automobiles.

Robert W. Otto, president of Laclede, said: "Completion of this center will be another major step in the company's plan for decentralization of service operations. Through decentralization we will be able to give our customers quicker service, since the necessary equipment and crews will be stationed closer to locations where they are needed. If present westerly expansion continues, another such facility may be desirable in the future, but construction of the northwest operating center will complete our redistricting process at this time."

Formerly, all of Laclede's requests for service were answered from its operating center at 3950 Forest Park boulevard, but a second center already has been established in Shrewsbury.

At the Shrewsbury plant the company is installing additional propane equipment to meet peak requirements on extremely cold days. Cost of the new propane facility will be about $250,000 and construction should be finished by Dec. 1. Capacity of this equipment will amount to 7,300,000 cubic feet per day. At the Catalan street propane plant, daily capacity was increased last summer from 30,000,000 to 50,000,000 cubic feet. Expansion of propane capacity will further assure Laclede's ability to meet demands in severe weather, but will have no effect on current new gas heat installation restrictions, which cannot be lifted until Laclede's underground storage project is in operation.

Rubber Company Opens in County

The Minnesota Rubber & Gasket Co., which has two plants in Minneapolis, has opened a new sales office at 8131 Manchester road, Brentwood, with Curtis Beem as factory representative in charge. The office will serve a five-state area. The company deals in custom molded rubber and silicone products, has offices in 12 major cities.

New Carpet

recently introduced to the trade in the East, the carpeting won't go into general sale in this area until week after next, but then be widely available. There are several colors, and the amateur can create his own design.

The carpet squares, 18 inches on a side, are of cotton tuft bonded to a pad, with sealed edges, and with an adhesive back. With a protective paper peeled off the back a square may be dropped into place on wood, tile or any other floor, patted into place and it will stay there until lifted again at the carpenter's will. The average vaccum won't lift it, as a rule, though when it is taken up no residue of adhesive is left on a floor and the carpet can go down over and over again without renewal of the adhesive, the developers say. The material can be cleaned by foam-type detergents and little water, right on a floor, though it can't be saturated clear through. Decorators have used it on walls, as well as on floors, reaching wainscot or ceiling high.

Like any other cotton, it is a little more fire-resistant than wool, but if a section gets scorched by a dropped cigaret or a spark from a fireplace, only the damaged square need be replaced by another.

Two Corners Leased for Businesses

In the heart of an area where thousands of homes have been built since the end of World War II and where some 10,000 more are said to be projected within the next few years, an agency called the Maryland Investment Co. has taken 99 year lease of property on two corners of the Halls Ferry-Chambers road intersection.

From the Gardner Estate, the agency headed by S. G. Duke and Glenn P. Boehm, have acquired property that fronts 390 feet on Chambers and 385 feet on Halls Ferry at the southeast corner, and 229 feet on Chambers and 296 on Halls Ferry on the southwest corner.

Negotiations with tenants are in progress and construction is expected to get under way by the first of the year, Duke said, on a 15,000 square-foot food store, a 15,000 square-foot furniture store, a 6000 square-foot drug store, and initial contacts have been made to bring in a small department store, part of an eastern chain.

Parking area with a ratio of three square feet to one of floor space has been decreed for the development.

Subject to Bequeath.

Plate glass mirrors were regarded so valuable in Colonial America that George Washington's mother specifically mentioned her mirror in her will, bequeathing it to her son.

Sheared Hedges Form an Estate Boundary Screen

Two sheared hedges, one deciduous and the other evergreen form a boundary screen and a decorative backdrop for flower beds, in conjunction with deciduous trees and shrubs in an estate garden. This particular boundary planting is in a Massachusetts North Shore garden.

By ELEANOR B. McCLURE
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

When planning a garden we should heed that good old saying, "Pretty is as pretty does." No plant is truly beautiful unless it has grown well. Moreover, it is hard to make a pleasing picture with a collection of misfits—trees or shrubs that tend to be too tall, too loppy, too buxom, too robust, or even too formal-looking for a particular garden.

Indeed, the function of a tree or shrub in the planting is largely determined by its leaf texture, form, and habit of growth. When visiting the nursery we should try to have a sort of double vision, so as to see both the small plant as it is now and the entirely different plant in size and shape that it is going to be at maturity.

It is of course much better to choose a plant that will naturally grow to the desired size than to try to curb and restrain the more vigorous types. To be sure, there are some shrubs that can be shaped by careful pruning and shearing. The list includes boxwoods, yews, privets, some types of euonymus, as well as dwarf junipers and hollies.

Triple-Purpose Hedgerows.

As a guide in the selection of plants, it is helpful to have "functional" lists of trees and shrubs. Suppose, for example, we wish to plan a triple-purpose boundary planting, one that will define the property lines, provide privacy for the outdoor living room, and at the same time serve as a decorative background for flower beds or other garden features.

Our first query could properly be, "How much space can we devote to this planting?" In a country garden a hedgerow from 30 to 40 feet thick will give a charming effect, and it can also be functional, serving to break the force of the wind. Included in it might be groupings of native cedars, pines, maples, and flowering crab apples, and it might be faced with such deciduous shrubs as fragrant sumac, fragrant honeysuckle, euonymus alata, E. americana or E. europaea, or any of the native viburnums.

Groupings of deciduous shrubs make an attractive planting for a large suburban plot. For a screen 10 to 15 feet high select such vigorous types as lilacs, beauty bush, Philadelphus, Weigela, forsythia, bush honeysuckle, or any of the many fine viburnums (such as V. americanum, V. dentatum, V. sieboldi or V. tomentosum).

Give Them Space.

For long-time effect it is important to give these shrubs plenty of room, spacing them at least four to five feet apart and allowing from five to eight feet between strong-growling lilacs. If immediate screening is desired, the shrubs may be planted closer together, but should be thinned out as they mature.

When it is necessary to screen objects more than 15 feet high, trees must also be used. Such evergreens as spruces and firs make excellent year-round screens, but they need ample growing space. Native cedars and white pines offer a special advantage, since they can be restrained by careful clipping or shearing.

Certain hawthorns develop such tough, twiggy growth that they make good year-round screens. For summertime screening, groupings of shrubs may be interplanted with such small ornamentals as flowering crab apples, plums, cherries or peaches; dogwoods, golden-chain tree, smoke-bush, white fringe-tree, cornelian cherry, or the tall deciduous holly (I. verticillatta). These small trees are best spaced from eight to 15 feet apart. For quick effect filler plants may be grown for a few years and later discarded or moved to another part of the garden.

A Fence, Maybe?

It is more difficult to plan a satisfactory screen for smaller areas. In full sun, some deciduous shrubs grow very quickly and soon make a tight, dense hedge. Both forsythia and rose of Sharon (Hibiscus syriacus) can be trimmed and sheared to make effective green walls. The fragrant honeysuckle (Lonicera fragrantissima) is shade-tolerant and almost evergreen, for it has heavy-textured, frost-resistant leaves.

American holly and pyracantha make very decorative (and expensive) evergreen hedges.

Screen for Limited Area

For a limited area a fence makes a satisfactory permanent screen. The flowers here are variegated tulips, short, pink double early types, taller yellow, white and red singles. Pansies in foreground offer spicy contrast.

Although both will grow tall if unrestrained, they may be clipped or trimmed to the desired height. Excessive pruning will be at the expense of colorful fruits, however.

In a limited area, a fence or wall makes the most permanent and satisfactory screen. Even a simple wire fence can be decorative when masked with vines or with a trimmed hedge. A fence of woven saplings and the various louvered and basket-weave types make handsome backgrounds for vines, shrubs or flower borders.

Best of all for picture effect is a well designed brick wall. Green leaves, or even the shadowy tracery of bare branches, will make intriguing patterns against the mellow brick. And a winter scene is tremendously enhanced if there is a warm-hued brick wall in the background.

YEW IS IRISH

The most famous English yew is Irish. It was discovered in Ireland in 1870, is highly valued for its upright growth and is the darkest green of all evergreen plants. According to the American Association of Nurserymen, the wood once was prized for long bows and may grow to be 1000 years old.

Improve Shingles

Asbestos-cement shingles of the type that are used for house siding have good weather resistance and durability. However, the ones that are porous soon become dirty and present a difficult cleaning problem. Their appearance can then be improved by painting. There are now special asbestos-cement shingle paints produced especially for the purpose. For successful results, the directions of the manufacturer should be followed exactly.

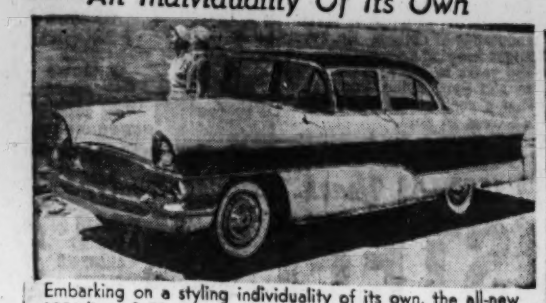
An Individuality Of Its Own



Embarking on a styling individuality of its own, the all-new 1956 line of Clipper automobiles will go on display in dealer showrooms across the country next Friday. Clipper cars pioneer torsion bar suspension to the medium-price field. Custom models have 270-horsepower V-8 engine of 352 cubic inch displacement which develops 380 foot pounds of torque effort for the rear wheels at 2800 rpm. The new models also have more than a score engineering advancements and innovations to make important contributions to greater safety and ease of operation.

American Combines Styles

The automobile industry's first car to combine features of station wagon and hardtop convertible, will be included in American Motors' 1956 Rambler line. Tip-off on the completely new design of the compact Rambler, the first of which will be publicly shown in December, is the unique tail-gate treatment. Controlled by a new combination lock and crank, the window lowers into the single gate. The design will be a feature of the new car, named the "Cross Country Hardtop Convertible," which will be added to the new line in January. Elimination of center door posts and old-style upper tail-gate provides wide-openess of the convertible, adds to convenience in loading from side or rear.

Pontiac Two-Door For '56

Pontiac's 1956 two-door sedan, claimed to be most economical model in the big-car class, rides on a 122-inch wheelbase with 206 inches over-all length. It's 205 h.p. V-8 engine gives it power and performance. Two-toning and luxurious interiors are other features.

change their views had they known of it, has already been raised several times, and is bound to occur to readers of this report," Dr. Smith said. "While no scientifically precise answer to this question can be given, a check of the last 40 questionnaires received shows no significant difference in the median forecasts from those of the total of 201."

Many of the economists wrote comments on various subjects covered by the questionnaire. According to the analysis, these comments placed considerable stress on the fact that 1956 is an election year, but most were inclined to treat that fact as one of the "unknown quantities" affecting the outlook. Comments on the international situation as an economic factor were considerably less numerous than in previous polls.

FHA Code Overhaul To Begin

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UP)—The Federal Housing Administration will soon begin to revise its minimum property requirements.

Under FHA Commissioner Norman P. Mason's directive, a staff of experts will go through the 28 books in which present requirements are contained and boil them down to one volume.

Mason stressed that the action does not involve the "raising or lowering of present standards," but rather "simplification and standardization."

The 28 booklets are used for that many different areas in the country and cover variations in local and regional conditions. These requirements on construction, plumbing, heating and lot improvements must be met before FHA will insure a home mortgage.

The first requirements were published in the mid-1930s when the agency got its start. New ones came out in 1946 and grew in number until there were 54 booklets for use throughout the country. They have been reduced and standardized down to 28, but Mason thinks this is still too many.

Some typical problems to be tackled will concern construction of homes on concrete slabs, erection of chimneys and low pitched roofs.

Use of concrete slabs instead of basements is relatively new, officials pointed out, and many problems have arisen. Some studies have been made and experts will try to compile the findings into minimum acceptable standards to give builders in areas throughout the country firm guidance in their activities.

Low pitched roofs are being used more and more and problems arise as to the proper thickness of asphalt shingles and the actual minimum pitch acceptable for adequate drainage. Some tests on this have been conducted, but requirements are not as firm as some officials feel they should.

Prefabricated chimneys are available in some areas. This, too, raises questions which the specialists must solve.

An official said "We don't want to frighten people into thinking we're going to throw out everything. We're going over the requirements to see if anything can be made simpler, or if a better way can be found to explain it, or to eliminate from them or add anything that should be."

of three to 10 word safety slogans, may be made with any Dodge dealer from Oct. 31 to Nov. 28. Slogans will be forwarded to a contest board for selection.

Beginning Nov. 12, and continuing for four weeks, three different applicants, selected on basis of the safety slogan, will be flown to Los Angeles each week, all expenses paid, and will appear on the Lawrence Welk show. Contestants who appear on the Welk shows will be asked questions prepared by the National Safety Council.

Dodge Opens Contest for Safety Drive

DETROIT — Designed to "make America safety conscious," a contest which will provide four motorists a new car every year for the rest of their lives will be inaugurated Oct. 31 by Dodge Division, Chrysler Corp.

In support of the National Safety Council's accident prevention program, contestants will be chosen from various sections of the country. Purpose of the contest is to promote public safety on the highway, and to reduce the number of accidents that has appalled highway and automotive industry officials alike.

Jack W. Minor, sales manager in charge of Dodge advertising and merchandising, said that winners will be named on the basis of their knowledge of driving and safety principles. Applicants must be 21 or older, and must possess a current driver's license. Registrations,

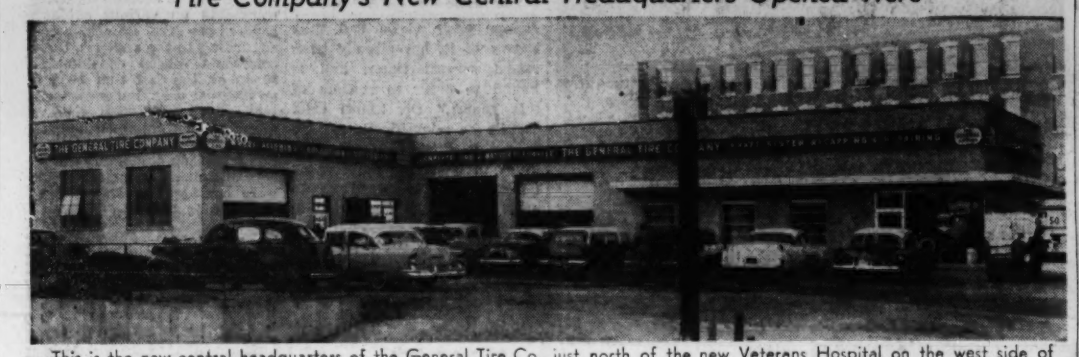
Tire Company's New Central Headquarters Opened Here



This is the new central headquarters of the General Tire Co. just north of the new Veterans Hospital on the west side of North Grand boulevard between Bell avenue and Windsor Place. It was opened formally last week when the operation was moved from 3400 Washington avenue. The property, built by the Kniffen Realty Co.'s construction division, has 20,000 square feet of space under roof and all the ground in the city block is paved for parking, extending to St. Alphonsus street in the rear. J. W. Coffeey is general manager.

Tire Executives Visit Here

L. A. McQueen (left) vice-president in charge of sales, and M. G. O'Neil, executive assistant to the president of the General Tire Co. were in St. Louis last week for the formal opening of the new St. Louis headquarters for General Tire Distribution. They met with major dealers and fleet operators in a dinner session at the Missouri Athletic Club (a hundred or more men) on Wednesday night, and with mechanics, a larger group, on Thursday night at the Chase Hotel. Co-incident to opening of the new headquarters on North Grand boulevard between Bell avenue and Windsor Place, they indicated plans are in the making for suburban centers here, too.

Gerber Plastics Leases Space to Double Operation

The Gerber Plastics Co., wholly-owned St. Louis subsidiary of Gerber Products Corporation of Fremont, Mich., manufacturers of baby foods, has expanded its St. Louis operations by leasing a 60,000-square foot building at 3001 Washington avenue, the industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis reports.

Gerber Plastics, which will double its present production facilities at the new location, will operate as the non-food division of the corporation, manufacturing such baby items as plastic toys, cups, and bibs. Remodeling work is under way at the new plant.

In commenting on the company's decision to concentrate its operations in St. Louis, Al Gerber, president of Gerber Plastics, stated:

"It was due largely to the fact that St. Louis is a logical place to locate because it is a favorable point for national distribution and possesses an excellent labor force.

"Also, Gerber Plastics received wholehearted co-operation and encouragement from many St. Louis civic and business organizations, with special assistance from the City of St. Louis and the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis."

The expansion of Gerber Plastics will increase company employment from the present 350 to 450, with plans for additional employment increases in the future.

The new plant location at 3001 Washington avenue was formerly occupied by the United Motor Service Division of General Motors Corporation.

Check Controls

Controls are the watchdogs of the automatic heating system. The Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau calls attention to the importance of having the heating plant controls checked at least once a year to see that they are in good operating condition. Defective controls should be replaced immediately.

Light, Safety Engineers Will Meet Together

The St. Louis Section of the Illuminated Engineering Society will sponsor this year's annual joint meeting with the American Society of Safety Engineers to be held Thursday evening, Nov. 3, at the Engineers Club of St. Louis at 4359 Lindell boulevard.

Richard W. Scott of the Crouse-Hinds Company of New York will address this joint meeting on the subject of "Illumination for Hazardous Locations." His presentation will include a demonstration of explosion-proof lighting equipment.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. and refreshments will be served after the meeting.

MONEY ON TREES

In real estate lingo, money does grow on trees. A good landscape with plenty of shade trees, a terrace in a quality material like weatherproof quarry tile, and healthy shrubbery is worth often as much as several thousands of dollars. So, never slight keeping up your yard. In the years to come, if you want to sell your home, you'll find that a good landscape is worth its trees in gold.

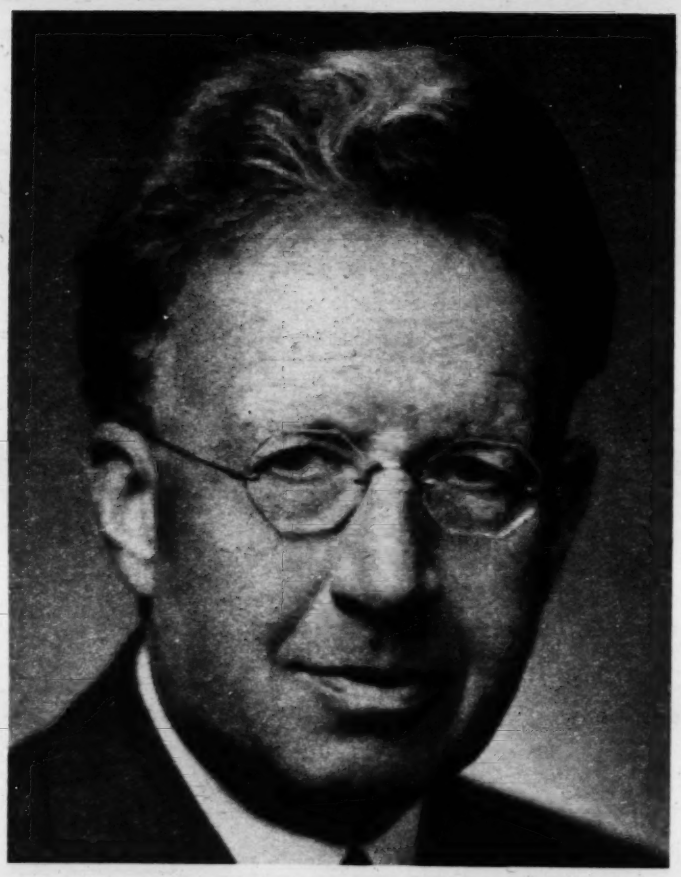
ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

IS OUR SPY SYSTEM A FAILURE?

INGRID BERGMAN AT 40



DR. FOSDICK: His face reflects the deep understanding shown in today's story.

I'll always remember...

THE STRAP THAT BROKE

A desperate man rang the bell late at night . . .

by DR. HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK

THE AUTHOR, long one of America's best-known religious figures, now is Minister Emeritus of Riverside Church in New York. His latest book is What Is Vital in Religion (Harper & Bros.).

It was late one evening, several years ago. My doorbell rang. Puzzled why anyone would come to pay a personal call at so odd an hour, I got up from preparing my Sunday sermon and went to the front hallway.

There stood a young man — a stranger. His face was damp and pale above his upturned coat collar and he held his lapels together with a trembling hand. He looked, in a word, desperate.

"Come in," I motioned, stepping aside. "Come to my study and compose yourself."

After sitting for a moment while he struggled to control his emotions, he said quietly, "I tried to take my life."

"But you didn't do it," I said. "Tell me about it."

He looked at me searchingly, surprised that I wasn't shocked. Then, opening his lapels to show a bruise on his throat, he blurted: "I tried to hang myself with a strap. But it broke."

His life accidentally saved, he had thought wildly of trying again, had hesitated, then had come to me for help because he had heard of my name.

"You've told me what you did," I encouraged him, "but you haven't told me why. You must have had a reason. And you hesitated. You must have been uncertain that the reason was beyond hope. Tell me about it."

Then bitter words poured forth. He despised himself, hated himself. He always had. Even the most trivial mischance — far back in childhood — he brought up in bitter self-accusation.

The more the young man talked, the more sure I was that somewhere in his early years he must have suffered cruel humiliation. That emotional slant, which made everything he did bounce off into self-contempt, must have gone back to some shame and abasement in infancy or childhood.

I told him that, saying: "If you know what the humiliation was, we shall have the key to your self-hatred. If you can't remember, we must go to a psychiatrist to find out."

"My God!" he mumbled. "I know only too well what it was." A brutal father, who used to beat him mercilessly for nothing until his back was covered with welts, was the beginning of his trouble. Some boys respond to such treatment by rebellion; he responded in shame by despising his meekness.

So I reconstructed for him his psychological history, tracing the consequences of that early emotional ordeal until "I can see him yet!" he exclaimed. "Do you mean that that is all that is the matter with me?"

"You shouldn't have despised yourself," I pointed out. "You should have despised your father. You were meek because you were genuine in your love for him. How could that be wrong?"

Then we went down to his deeper levels. He had admirable qualities. He had known experiences which made possible his intelligent response to the meaning of vital religion. It was that that made him hesitate — and come to my door. I symbolized his Maker.

Found: A New Self

Before we were through, a few hours later, he had gained a perspective on his character and spiritual resources which made a picture of himself very different from that which had led to his attempted self-destruction. When he left me that night, he exclaimed, "I'm a new man in a new world!"

The next time I saw him was by chance in a hotel lobby, where he embraced me, saying: "I am on top of the world." And later he sent me a copy of a trade journal containing an article praising him for some especially effective work which he had done.

Human tragedy is familiar business to us of the clergy. We face all kinds of human problems; often the search for a solution is so difficult, so long drawn out, and at times it falls so far short of victory that we need a few such unforgettable experiences to keep us going. If it hadn't been for a strap that broke, I could never have helped. ■

GROTESQUE Maori warrior with protruding tongues and eyes of shell seems to scream defiance. Three-fingered hands are characteristic of Maori carvings — just why, no one knows.

CARVED STOREHOUSE is scene of this Maori chat. Glowing "eyes" in interior are bits of gleaming abalone shell set in carved figures.

The angry gods 'DOWN UNDER'

On a recent assignment "down under" in New Zealand, photographer Richard Harrington wandered into a primitive other-world not more than 50 miles from the bustling modern city of Auckland. In the Maori village of Ohinemotu he found a community of descendants of a once-powerful tribe of Polynesians who peopled New Zealand in the 14th century. There, as Harrington's resulting photos show, gaping-mouthed warrior gods with double tongues, three-fingered hands and flashing eyes still glare balefully from gables and doorways.

The Maoris developed wood carving into a fine art. Once warlike, they moved from Tahiti in fleets of canoes some 400 years ago. Today they are peaceful, counted among New Zealand's best citizens. But their early traditions live on in these angry, defiant carvings. ■

BODICES of tanika-work, a coarse petitpoint with designs in red, white and black, are worn by girls greeting in traditional Maori manner, pressing noses together and clasping hands.

Mister,

this is where we came in

Our customer was photographed taking a look "down under" at one of our used cars that he liked.

Matter of fact, we encouraged him to do so—even though we could have honestly said: "Mister, this is where we came in." Because we had already thoroughly inspected the car. Then we reconditioned it for safety, value and performance. That's our job as Chevrolet dealers. That's why our top-condition cars carry the red OK tag and are backed by a written warranty with our signature.

You'd think that the price tag on cars processed like this would be higher, wouldn't you? Fact is, prices are low because we Chevrolet dealers maintain a fast turnover to make more room for trade-ins on brand new Chevrolets, and are able to pass volume savings on to you. And because of the popular demand for new Chevrolets, your choice of makes and models is greater than ever!

Our Spies...

are they letting us down?

...Or is it the fault of higher-ups that we're losing the war for secret information? Here is a behind-the-scenes report

by BOB DEINDORFER

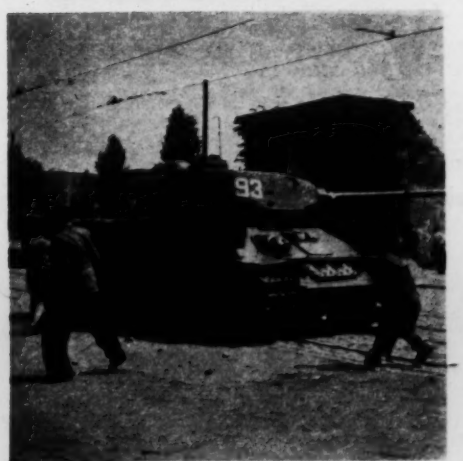
Three places we failed:

KOREA

Soldiers man beach defenses at Hungnam during 1950 evacuation. Our agents had failed to warn of sudden Chinese Communist attack south of Yalu river.

EGYPT

We were unprepared for the officers' revolt which toppled Farouk (above, with family) from his throne, changed basic political set-up in oil-rich Middle East.



GERMANY

Our agents failed again to warn of possible riots in East Berlin in 1953. Result: We could do little to support these clear-cut protests against Red domination.

NOT LONG AGO a Hoover Commission task force headed by Gen. Mark Clark completed a long, penetrating look at America's top-secret Central Intelligence Agency. In its public report the task force expressed grave concern over what it described as "the lack of adequate intelligence data from behind the Iron Curtain."

Secretly, the Clark group was even more blunt. It told top Government officials that U.S. espionage is falling down badly on the job.

The story of this failure — as seen by specialists with long intelligence experience — can now be told without injury to our security.

First, however, a distinction: U.S. espionage is not U.S. intelligence — and U.S. intelligence is good. Our spies report undercover information, but this is studied, pondered, then weighed in with the far larger total of information our Government gets from non-secret sources. It is on the basis of all such information, and not of spy reports alone, that our top-level decisions are made.

Yet though a part, espionage is a crucially important part of our intelligence. Only spies could have foretold Pearl Harbor; only secret agents could have tipped us off on dozens of other breaks in world affairs. And here the record of U.S. espionage agencies, is at best, mixed.

We did get the tip-off on Communist efforts to take over Italy at the polls in 1948. We helped democratic elements stop them. We were informed on the Communist threat in Guatemala last year — and again were thus enabled to do something about it in time.

But in many other instances we have been caught unprepared when we should have known what was about to happen. American intelligence gave no clear warning of the North Korean invasion in 1950, or of the Chinese Communist attack four months later. In Germany our agents failed to alert us to the great East German uprisings of 1953, though a West German group got wind of it. The exile of Egypt's King Farouk, Stalin's death, Malenkov's fall were all reported by the press, not by our spies.

What's wrong? Why does U.S. espionage seem to fail so often despite the manpower, money and effort spent on it? Here are the main reasons:

OVERBUREAUCRACY

A brave man died last year. Why he died and why his mission failed illustrates the frequent failure of American espionage. Until his death he had been shuttling back and forth between two hostile worlds as a field agent gathering information for an American spy network. It was not land mines or barbed wire or security guards which cost him his life. It was overbureaucracy in his own organization.

His superiors had learned that a high Communist official in a satellite state would probably flee to the West if we could help to smuggle him out. The danger was great, but the stakes were high. First, however, the officer in charge needed official consent. Up through the dim bureaucratic channels American intelligence seemingly must live by went an urgent request for approval. Finally, after five frustrating days, the OK came back.

By then time was dangerously short. Instead of sending four or five men along a slower, safer route, the control officer sent one man over the frontier to make contact and conduct the escape. It was chancy work, and it failed. The agent died, the Iron Curtain defector was caught and condemned by his own people, and America missed a big victory in the cold war. Only one institution triumphed: bureaucracy. "If it hadn't been for those five lost days we might have pulled it off," an American officer says. "We didn't even have a sporting chance with the crash operation we had to run."

This loss was neither the first nor the last. In the Far East a productive informant quit because the administrative system worked so slowly. In Europe a valuable information contact in East Germany lost interest when a short-sighted administrator far from the scene turned down $4,700 expense money.

Many incidents run to that same shocking pattern. The eternal by-products of overbureaucracy — red tape, triplicate forms, the slow labyrinth of "channels" — all smother the speed and flexibility vital to successful espionage.

BIGNESS

Not long ago one of our spy networks purposely put out false information in East Germany. For several months bogus material designed to confuse the Communists filtered into the hostile camp.

The plot worked successfully until someone made a painful discovery. All that time, another American agency had gone to great pains to buy back precisely the same information from East German contacts.

This incident pointed up the sprawling bigness — and the lack of central control — of American information networks. In addition to Central Intelligence, which is our most capable and professional agency, agent networks are run by the Army G-2, by a new military special-projects branch, by the Army Counter Intelligence Corps, by the Air Force, the Navy, other Federal agencies. Meanwhile, we have supported with cash a West German group operating out of Munich, and two Nationalist Chinese networks reaching inside the Bamboo Curtain. Nobody else, not even Russia, runs so many confusing, overlapping lines.

To be sure, a basic principle of espionage is never to let one network know what the other is doing. But this sound advice becomes meaningless when the networks are run by different central agencies which have little or no contact.

RIVALRY

Bureaucracy and bigness have led to an inevitable sense of rivalry which whittles efficiency even more. Promotion is based on success; this is part of the bureaucratic system. Yet it permits rivalry to reach the point where Americans bid against each other for the services of agents or informants. "We had a good line going on the Chinese mainland," a civilian espionage expert based in the Far East complained. "As it began to produce regularly, the Asiatic who ran it left us for better pay with an Army group."

In Munich, people in a small hotel lobby were startled by an edge of this rivalry when two agents from different U.S. espionage groups got to arguing loudly and publicly one morning. Their topic: Who had first call on a German informant named Mueller.

THE SHORT VIEW

Some months ago an American military group concentrating on Communist China recruited a smart young Chinese businessman as an agent. Through an elaborate ruse he slipped out for a five-day espionage training course, then returned. The scheme was for him to lie low and live a normal life until, in due course, he would be contacted for a top-priority assignment.

Yet less than three weeks later a contact was made with him. He was ordered to count the jet planes at a nearby airport — a comparatively unimportant task. He was caught, and rubbed out by the Reds.

"If you want good intelligence in 1960," said one experienced officer recently, "you should start recruiting your agents now. You should leave them alone and then years later call on them only for important jobs." Too often, our planning is short-sighted. Some of our best agent sources are sacrificed. Meanwhile, it has been reported that the Soviets made agents of the British diplomats, Burgess and Maclean, as long as 20 years before they fled their Foreign Office jobs to go behind the Iron Curtain.

Have we time to improve our spy networks? Yes—if we start now

LACK OF IMAGINATION

In Hungary not long ago, a Communist espionage officer we knew about was getting much good information from outside. How, we weren't sure. One of our alert young officers worked out a new and bold plan to kidnap the Red, stage an "accidental" traffic death and leave his body with papers stuffed in the pockets showing that he was linked with U.S. secret agencies. The effect would be to cast doubt on his networks, and his superiors undoubtedly would liquidate them.

It was a good plan, the sort of plan which often succeeds where nothing else works.

"BLABBERMOUTHS" are U.S. espionage problem. Red agents like Irmgard Schmidt (l.), recently jailed by West Germany, listen for loose talk by our men.

But after several days of haggling, officials up the line vetoed the idea. They hadn't heard of a plot exactly like that one working before, so they were reluctant to try. Indecision and hyper-caution like this have cost us too many such important intelligence victories.

LOOSE TALK

A civilian agency shipped a man back to Washington last year for foolishly talking business on a crowded street in Teheran.

At a party in the Far East a blabbermouth loudly blew the secret cover name of a large espionage net in the area.

"We make mistakes, lots of them," the former chief of an enormous U.S. intelligence group told me recently. "In my experience, I'd say that our loose talk is disgraceful."

To correct this tragic weakness, security officers have held more and more special briefings for personnel and added the tightest controls possible. But loose talk still exposes careful buildups.

INCOMPETENTS

You'll find ineptness in any organization, but perhaps the American intelligence services have more than their share. At the top is a handful of able professionals like Central Intelligence Director Allen W. Dulles. At the bottom are heroic field agents who risk their lives for information. But it's a long way between.

Until World War II, America had only a small intelligence service while other major powers had old and effective groups. During the war America found it needed a big-time intelligence organization almost overnight.

As thousands of jobs in this vital and baffling field opened, recruiting experts filled them with the best of whatever talent happened to be available. Much of it simply did not measure up. This remains, 10 years after the war, a nagging problem.

WHAT'S AHEAD?

Facts like these are what the Clark Committee of the Hoover Commission has brought to the attention of our top governmental bodies. Other criticisms, privately voiced by experts in and outside of the intelligence services, also are current in Washington. The men running American intelligence are aware of many of these problems anyway.

They are, certainly, doing their best. Dozens of new men have replaced some of the misfits in our espionage structure in recent months. There is a greater awareness of the needs of the men who actually are in touch with secret operations. There is an effort to cut down bureaucracy, red tape, "channels," and to direct our talent, our dollars and our best brains toward the crucial job of collecting secret information rather than multiplying Government forms. There is a great sense of responsibility.

Yet even now we have no assurance that we will be tipped off on other world crises before they break — and while there is yet time to prepare for them. As the Hoover Commission task force revealed, our intelligence still falls short of what America requires in today's jittery, anxious world.

Unless our hidden espionage system shows far more progress than it has in the past, and quickly too, we are all the more vulnerable. Conceivably, there may be little time left for the U.S. to learn. ■

Blues as it washes

PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

BERGMAN

Ingrid is busy, happy—and she's

* SANTA MARINELLA, ITALY.

"You can't miss it," Ingrid Bergman had said. "You take the Via Aurelia out of Rome. At kilometer 58, turn left. You'll see a large blue gate with a white anchor painted on it. That's our house."

Six years before, in one of the world's most widely publicized scandals, Ingrid had left her husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrom, their daughter Pia (then 11) and her fabulous Hollywood career for a balding, magnetic Italian motion-picture director, Roberto Rossellini. Since then she had married Rossellini, given birth to a son and twin girls, acted in a quartet of disappointing films under Rossellini's direction. Now I pressed the buzzer; the gate opened; and there, 20 yards down a dirt road, was Ingrid Bergman.

She was dressed in red corduroy slacks, red corduroy jacket, brown sandals, a checked shirt. I hadn't seen her since 1949; now, at 40, she looked even more beautiful than I had remembered. She wore no makeup but a dab of lipstick. Her peaches-and-cream complexion was flawless, and her soft blonde hair, caught by the wind from the Tyrrhenian Sea, blew carelessly across her face. As I approached she looked up, smiled and threw out her arms in a welcoming gesture.

"It's good to see you," she said. "Come in."

She led me into her house, a rectangular residence built solidly of volcanic Italian rock and handsomely furnished in Swedish modern. Then we sat on the patio looking out at the sea and sipping from tall glasses.

"Are you really happy here?" I asked.

DANCING Dr. Lindstrom, Ingrid's ex-husband, seems to enjoy company of their daughter Jennie Ann (Pia).

"I have never been happier in my life," Ingrid Bergman said. "You don't believe that, do you? I can see the doubt in your eyes."

"They are saying in Rome," I explained, "that you and Rossellini have been fighting, that disenchantment has set in. They say you're disappointed with the way your career has been going, that a divorce is inevitable."

She sighed. "They have been saying that for six long years, that Roberto and I are miserable. It's not true. I cannot understand such gossips. They are like vultures overhead waiting for the wounded to die. They are waiting for our marriage to become a corpse. Then they will pick us to pieces.

"Maybe the pictures we have made together haven't been successful. Maybe they've been like many of the critics in Europe say, bad and wanting. But to me a motion-picture career is not the most important thing in life. I have my family, my children. They come first.

"I know that's hard to believe. You remember me as I was in Hollywood. When I was young my career counted the most. In Hollywood everyone lives and breathes pictures. That's all that matters. At one time that's all that mattered to me. I remember the fights, the intrigues for good parts.

"I've left all that behind. What is a good picture compared to the laughter of my twins or the smile on Robertino's face?

—AT 40

not coming back to America

"At 40 I am a different woman than I was at 30. I have grown up. I'm not ambitious any more. If you live in Hollywood you've got to be ambitious. I live the way I want to live.

"I love acting and I want to make good pictures, even great pictures. Last year Roberto and I made Fear, the Stefan Zweig story, in Germany. I also toured Europe doing Joan at the Stake. Some of the critics don't like it. But wherever we've gone, it's made money.

"Soon I'll start The Red Carnation in France. Jean Renoir is going to direct. It's the story of General Boulanger's march on Paris and the woman who stopped it. It will be the first European picture of mine that Roberto hasn't directed. I expect everyone to talk, to gossip. 'You see,' they'll say. 'It's all over between them. This is the opening break.' It is nothing of the sort.

This little jar costs a little more

—but it does* so much more *for your hair and scalp that it's the favorite of forty million Americans!

If your hair isn't worth a few extra pennies, you can stop reading right now. Because if all you want is something to make your hair "lay down"—instead of helping it way down, where it really counts—you don't have to buy Charles Antell Formula 9. Any 10 cent jar of petroleum jelly—any cheap "hair sticker"—will do that.

But—if you want hair that is conditioned as it is groomed—if you want to maintain that all-important oil-and-moisture balance in hair and scalp—you've got to buy "the little jar," Formula 9, and no other. The choice is yours. And here's why 40,000,000 people have made their choice Charles Antell.

Lanolin—Charles Antell's* original *secret!

Charles Antell probably knows more about lanolin for hair care than any other living man. He should—because he was the first to recognize its incredible benefits—the first to develop and introduce it for human hair five years ago as the original Charles Antell genuine ANHYDROUS LANOLIN.

But, you say, being first isn't enough. Other manufacturers have come along lately with lanolin, too. What's "the little jar" got that they haven't got?

Here are the two big differences!

First, it's the combination of other ingredients working with the original Charles Antell lanolin that makes Formula 9 far different from—far better than—any other hair and scalp conditioner you can buy. There are special oils that give Formula 9 its perfect consistency. There are esters and cholesterols—the closest substances to those found in natural oils your own hair and scalp have. They reinforce or replace these natural oils—help maintain the oil-and-moisture balance so important to a healthy scalp—and to handsome, alive-looking hair.

Second, it's the superiority of the lanolin itself. Now Charles Antell leaves all the lanolin imitators even further behind by bringing you another great lanolin "first"—

New Charles Antell Formula 9 with SUPER-Lanolin!

SUPER-Lanolin is triple-strength—gives results that ordinary lanolin simply cannot achieve. It's three times as beneficial in maintaining your hair's vital oil-and-moisture balance. It actually puts the lustre of new life in dead-looking hair. You'll literally feel your scalp wake up. Yet, because of the way Formula 9 is made, your hair never has that oily, greasy look. It's clean, bright, alive!

There you have it—straight. Of all the hair care products you can buy, only Charles Antell Formula 9 has both—a proved secret formula treatment for hair and scalp, and SUPER-Lanolin. For your hair's sake, accept no substitute. Look for—ask for—insist on Charles Antell. 59c to $1.79 at drug and cosmetic counters everywhere. Or if you prefer Charles Antell Liquid Formula 9, also with SUPER-Lanolin—59c and 98c.

Sample jar of Charles Antell Formula 9 with SUPER-Lanolin available on request. Send 25c, with your name and address, to Charles Antell, Dept. U , Baltimore 3, Md.

Try these other famous Charles Antell products, too. Charles Antell SHAMPOO with SUPER-Lanolin washes life into your hair, not out of it. Leaves your hair "beauty obedient" instantly, not 3 to 5 days later. Amber liquid or liquid creme, 59c to $1.59. And Charles Antell HAIR SPRAY with Lanolin and the fabulous new miracle ingredient PVP preserves your hair-do—and protects your hair, too! Sizes from 59c to $1.

The actress talks about her career and her children -about love and work and heartache

"It's a full life I am leading. Yet people say I am

"Then on the stage in Paris I'm going to do Tea and Sympathy, the same role Deborah Kerr had on Broadway. After that we are taking Joan to South America. So you can see — it's a full life I am leading. I have my home, my husband, my children, my work, and yet people say I am miserable.

"I cannot understand it. Neither can Roberto. All right, he is not the greatest director in the world. Who ever said he was? He must shoot pictures on location. He cannot work inside studios according to fixed rules. He is an experimenter, a man who tries all the time to reach new horizons.

"Today he is in Varese lecturing on the art of the film. I am sure some reporter will ask him if our marriage is breaking up.

"People say to him all the time, 'Signor Rossellini, why don't you change your life?' He is constantly amazed. 'What's wrong with my life?' he asks.

"For some strange reason — perhaps it is not so strange — the world does not want to believe that we are happy. But the fact is we are."

She reached across an end table for an American cigarette. "Is there any chance," I asked, "of your making a motion picture in Hollywood?"

Ingrid Bergman, born in Stockholm, star of Intermezzo, For Whom the Bell Tolls, The Bells of St. Mary's, Joan of Arc, Spellbound and several other money makers, closed her eyes for a moment.

miserable . . . The only regret I have about my whole romance with Roberto is Pia."

"I won't come back to America," she said flatly. "I get scripts from Hollywood every day, and I read all the time how I am being cast for Anastasia and one picture after another. But it's not true. I would like to make a film for an American company in Europe. But I'm not going back to America.

"It would only upset Pia. She is 17 now, and she is living in Salt Lake City with her father and his new bride. Things are very quiet. She is growing up very normally. I miss her dreadfully. I haven't seen her in four years. But if I were to return to the States, I couldn't help but see her. The reporters, the photographers. They would make a Roman holiday out of the whole thing. Besides, they don't like my husband in America. It would be very difficult for us. Most of all it would be bad for Pia.

"Some day, perhaps when Pia is older, I will come back to the States. But right now I don't want to cause her the slightest unhappiness. I never wanted her dragged into this custody trial in 1952. I just wanted the court to let her visit me in Italy.

"The only regret I have about my whole romance with Roberto is Pia. I have the feeling that she has never forgiven me. Other people, women's clubs and organizations have kicked and pilloried and denounced me. And for a while it was very hard to bear.

"But one cannot help falling in love. I only wish that Peter had not been such a bad loser. It would have made things less difficult. Anyway, it is all past and I do not dwell on it.

"I have many friends in Hollywood and they come to Rome each summer. We sit and gossip. And they all tell me that Pia will change. As she approaches womanhood she will come to understand about men and love and life. That's what they tell me, that she will eventually become my good friend. I hope it is true. I would like to introduce her, for her to know the three other children. They are really very cute. Come, I will show you."

Roberto Rossellini, Ingrid's husband, adds a few words...

"It is six years since Ingrid came to Italy. Without doubt her arrival was a great addition to Italian films, a precious capital that should have been made the most of. But nothing of the kind ever happened. During these years Ingrid has had a couple of interesting propositions. That's all.

"It is understandable that the Americans tried immediately to ruin the Bergman fame. That was in their own interest. Ingrid, as soon as she got to Italy, became a menace to the American film industry. But the Italian film world didn't react one little bit. The American attacks on Ingrid were never understood for what they were: really attacks on the Italian cinema. Ingrid and I were left without any defense. Nobody was ready to back us up.

"There is nothing left for us to do in Italy any more."

The Little Rossellinis

We strolled out to the garden and Ingrid called to her offspring in Italian, the only language they understand. (Rossellini speaks very little English and no Swedish.) She introduced 5-year-old Robertino. He shyly offered his hand, then turned and, with a running leap, landed on his mother's back. She laughed.

With Robertino clinging to her neck, Ingrid kneeled and presented the 3½-year-old twins, Ingrid and Isabela. They are fraternal twins and not alike. "There are no twins on my side," she pointed out, "and none on Roberto's. So I think we've started something, something very nice.

"I have another boy," she added. "My stepson, Renzo. He's 15. He's gone off to school in Switzerland. But he was with us this past summer, and we had a wonderful time. The children just loved him. We have a pony." She pointed to a corral at the left. "And he gave the children rides each day. And we have a tennis court." She nodded to the right. "And, of course, the beach and the ocean. It is not Hollywood. But this is a heavenly place. And really, I am very happy here. I am very happy with my life."

It was time to go. I asked if I might do anything for her in America.

"If by chance," Ingrid Bergman said, "you should run into Pia, please give her all my love." ■

Eisenhower picture gets an honored

ABILENE, KAN.

On PARADE's cover today is the first color photo to be published of the latest portrait of Pres. Dwight D. Eisenhower. A new acquisition of the Eisenhower Museum here, it currently is being admired by visitors from all over: youngsters like those at right, adult Americans in every walk of life, dignitaries from many foreign countries. All told, close to 120,000 persons have visited the museum since it was opened in April, 1954, and most of them now make a beeline for the new portrait, which hangs in the "Presidential Room" (the museum's East Wing). Says J. Earl Endacott, director of the Eisenhower Foundation, (which operates the museum): "The most frequent comment is that it is the most true-to-life picture of the President that has yet been painted."

The portrait was done by Thomas E. Stephens, New York artist and close friend of the President. Latest of a number of Eisenhower portrait studies Stephens has made, it was painted at the White House during those intervals when the President had time to sit for the artist.

"When it was completed last summer," says Stephens, "I brought it up to my New York studio for the finishing touches, and during that time

Mr. Eisenhower came to see me. He studied the painting for a while, then said rather shyly: 'Don't you think the smile is a bit too wide?'

"I toned the smile down and sent it back to Washington for the President's final approval. He said he was well pleased with the portrait."

Stephens, who has known Mr. Eisenhower since 1946, advised and encouraged the President in his own early efforts as a "Sunday painter." Says the artist: "He's really very good, and if he had more time he would do even better. He paints in oils — does landscapes and portraits. Some of his things are in the museum in Abilene. As a matter of fact, he sometimes dashes in where angels would fear to tread and comes up with something really good."

The portrait's new home is a clean-lined building of modern design which stands just east of the Eisenhower family home here. Built of native tan limestone, it houses a fascinating assortment of souvenirs that tell the life story of America's 34th President.

Made possible by voluntary contributions from Americans and donors representing some 90 foreign countries, the Museum is the first internationally supported Memorial of World War II.

Exhibits tell a graphic life story of President

HEADGEAR: Youngsters try on Eisenhower's West Point campaign hat (left) and helmet he wore when he was a major in World War I.

NORTH KOREANS captured by U.N. forces gave these: sword, portrait, anti-repatriation plea signed with 3,881 fingerprints in blood.

It houses about 2,200 Eisenhower mementos, trophies, medals and personal tokens of honor, plus gifts from states and foreign lands. The collection is valued at $1,500,000 and most of it is irreplaceable.

Prominent among the exhibits (in addition to those shown on these pages) is a collection of "Eisenhauer swords." Eisenhauer means "striker of iron" in German, and this was the name of an 18th-century family of sword makers. The spelling was changed to Eisenhower when the President's forebears came to America in 1732.

The family history is recorded in an old German-language Bible — also on display — which has been constantly in the Eisenhower family. Printed in 1567, it was taken to America when the Eisenhowers emigrated. The first Eisenhowers to come to Kansas in pioneer days brought the Bible along in 1878.

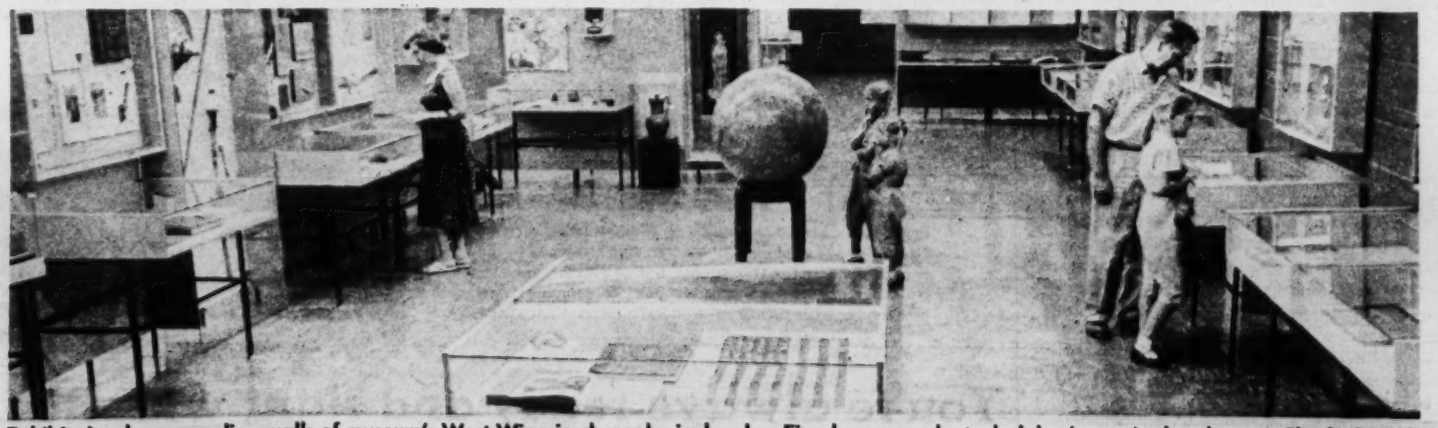
Ike's school days are represented by a desk at which he once sat, as well as some books from a room in the school from which he was graduated in 1909. There are also sample report cards indicating he was just an average student.

For Americans, the Museum has truly become a national shrine. During school-term vacations, thousands of grade-school children are brought by bus from as far as Nebraska and Oklahoma. High-school students from all over the nation visit the Museum in groups. And from Africa, Iran, Iceland, Pakistan and other far-off corners of the world come ambassadors, diplomats, legislators — and just plain people.

They not only can see the President's portrait and admire his mementos, but can hear his voice as well. At a battery of four phones you can pick up the receiver and hear excerpts from Presidential speeches. These, of course, are tape-recorded. But children listening in invariably say: "Hello, Mr. President, how are you?" ■

ARMOR was worn by a Japanese warrior some 750 years ago. Relic is a gift of U.S. baseball commissioner Ford Frick, who received it from a Japanese baseball magnate.

TELEPHONES permit visitors to listen to recordings of talks by the President — along with music by the Abilene cowboy band that led Ike's 1953 inaugural parade.



Exhibits in glass cases line walls of museum's West Wing in chronological order. Eisenhower used steel globe (center) when he was Chief of Staff.

Pork is on the plentiful list. Here's how to combine it with vegetables for good eating — and economy

by Beth Merriman PARADE FOOD EDITOR

You'll find this delicious dish easy to prepare, whether you use one of the new electric frying pans or a regular top-stove covered skillet. Serve it with a salad of crisp lettuce wedges and chicory. For dessert, a fresh fruit bowl, salty crackers and crumbly blue cheese.

PORK-CHOP SKILLET DINNER

6 loin pork chops
4 cups pared, sliced potatoes
6 carrots, scraped and quartered lengthwise
1 cup sliced onions
⅔ cup coarsely diced green pepper
2 teaspoons salt
1 can condensed tomato soup
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon Tabasco

Brown pork chops over high heat in skillet. Cover; cook over low heat 15 minutes. Remove chops; spoon out fat. Starting with potatoes, put vegetables in layers in skillet; sprinkle each layer with part of the salt. Place pork chops on top; sprinkle with remaining salt. Combine tomato soup, water and Tabasco; pour over meat and vegetables. Cover; cook over medium heat 45 minutes or until tender. Serves six.

The struggling Schueles — Ed, Etta and baby Allen — pose against a typical backdrop: brand-new house, old car.

Starting out on $3,500 a year:

Cloudy today, sunny tomorrow

by SID ROSS and ED KIESTER

OLD BRIDGE, N.J.

Six days a week, Ed Schuele tools his old Chevrolet 32 miles from his new home here to the East Orange service station where he works. At the end of the day, it's a long grind, and, on his paycheck, an expensive one, but he is buoyed up by the feeling that it won't be forever. Someday, he'll have his own station, closer to home, and things will be easier.

The lives of the Schueles (pronounced Shooley) are like that: a rough haul now, but a patch of daylight shimmering in the distance. The boom year 1955 has meant a lot to Ed and Etta and 11-month-old Allen — a brand new gray-shingled home, complete with washer, dryer and stove, in a look-alike development here; and the first full flush of parenthood. But it has also meant trying to squeeze a $68 monthly mortgage payment, a $29 monthly insurance bill and a sheaf of lesser bills out of $48 a week.

Still, the Schueles are not discouraged. "There are a lot of people in the same boat with us," Etta says. And there are. Ed Schuele's $3,500 a year (not counting the small sums Etta brings in on a part-time basis) puts him just about in the center of the U.S. income graph. (Latest median family income figure: $3,890 a year.) Roughly half the nation earns more than he does, half earns less. And Commerce Department figures show a heavy concentration of American families in that income bracket. Many of them, like Ed Schuele, work in "service" jobs, where income has not always kept pace with factory earnings. In 1955, with its skyrocketing economy, their story reads like Ed Schuele's: they sure could use some more money, but as it is, they're getting along OK.

But the Schueles' lives focus more on tomorrow than today. Ed's take-home pay could be $54 (out of $68 gross) instead of $48, but that $6 a week is buying an interest in Vinal Bonham's Esso Service on N. Park St., East Orange.

Bonham, considering Ed a hard worker and valuable hand, offered him a share of the business in the hope it would offset long hours and hard work. Ed entered his new role with zest, backstopping Bonham on buying and bookkeeping, and learning whatever else Bonham could teach. On his daily drive from Old Bridge to East Orange, he sizes up service stations en route and tries to figure factors of location and equipment that make them profitable.

By next January 1, Ed will be a capitalist to the tune of 5 per cent of Bonham's business; in another three years, his share will be 20 per cent. With the business tripled since a recent remodeling, this should bring an extra $1,000 a year. In the meantime, he hustles through a six-day, 48-hour-and-up schedule. "He's a good boy," Bonham says. "I wouldn't be taking him in if he wasn't. I'd like to have him stick, but if he wants his own station, he can pull his money out and I'll help him get started."

"I'll never make a million at it," Ed says. "And it'll be a lot of work. I could make more money and work less in a factory, I know. But it's outside work — I never could stand to be shut up indoors — and it'd be my own. I'd like that."

The dream of independence dies hard in most Americans, and Ed is no exception. First he planned to be a trumpet player; but three years in the Navy rubbed the edge off his skill. Then he tried radio and TV repair, but couldn't round up the capital to get going. A couple of years ago, he and a friend started a trucking firm. A strike tied up shipments and they were wiped out.

Each time, Ed has bounced. He is 27 and eager. Etta is a few months older (they went through school together, lived a block apart for 20 years, but never had a date until three years ago) and more cautious. She checkreins his enthusiasms and manages the family finances. "You can sell Ed anything," Etta says. "I have a house full of Bibles — got them for 19 years of perfect attendance at Sunday School. But one day a salesman came to the station and Ed bought a Bible — for $30."

As in most American homes, payday (Saturday) is a big occasion at 319 Herbert St., Old Bridge Estates. "Usually, I have to borrow $10 from my mother to do the shopping Friday night," Etta says. Of the $48, she gets $40, most of which is earmarked for payments on the mortgage, utilities and insurance. Part of the rest goes into a handful of

"Why does Mazola just naturally make better salad dressings?"

asks ARTHUR GODFREY

"Of course, girls, I lay no claim to being a great cook. But there's one thing I can do—and that's toss a mean salad. And I'm the world's fussiest about salad dressings!

"That's why, no matter who makes the dressing, I lay down the law. Use no oil but Mazola!

"It's no secret why... of all, note I said all, the leading oils, Mazola is the only one made from golden corn! Mazola just naturally brings out the fresh flavor of salad ingredients.

"So, if you're as particular as I am about salads, nothing but the best is good enough. And the best is a wonderfully fresh dressing made at home with Mazola® Oil. Then you're always sure it's going to be just as zippy or mild as you like it."

QUICK FRENCH DRESSING

1 cup MAZOLA Oil
½ cup vinegar
1½ teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon catsup
½ teaspoon dry mustard garlic clove

Measure all ingredients into jar. Shake well. Chill. Shake before serving. Makes 1¼ cups.

Foods fried in golden Mazola are light, crisp and truly digestible. With Mazola Oil you not only fry right... but keep calories down as well. See simple directions on bottle.

Have you tried the fabulous new No-Roll Pie Crust recipe? Makes a rich, tender pie crust each time—and you do everything right in the pie pan. Recipe is on Mazola label.

envelopes marked "Milk" ($3 a week), "Beer" (rationed at one bottle a night while watching TV) or "Drapes" ($1 a week.) Food costs them about $8 a week. A typical meal is hash, potatoes, a canned vegetable; once in a blue moon, steak.

That leaves a car payment, a refrigerator payment and an oddment of other bills unaccounted for. To cover these, Etta, like many women in the Schueles' income bracket, has a "temporary" part-time job. Tuesdays and Fridays, she and Allen ride to East Orange with Ed, and the baby stays with his grandmother while she works as a medical-lab technician. Her paychecks average about $80 a month.

They still think of "home" as East Orange, where both went to Clifford J. Scott High School (Wrote Ed to Etta in the 1945 yearbook: "We have had fun together and I hope it continues." Etta says now: "I hope he thinks it's continuing") and where most of their friends still live. They wouldn't have moved, in fact, but rents seemed too high and they couldn't find a place to buy in the $10,000 bracket.

"We're starting to put our roots down here now," Etta says. Ed has joined the local volunteer firemen, and Etta the auxiliary, and they've made quite a few friends in the neighborhood. Etta hasn't found a Presbyterian church close at hand, though, and they still shop in East Orange because they don't like the local markets. In spite of such drawbacks, they're pleased they've joined the 60 per cent of Americans who own their own homes.

The Schueles might not have said so last May, when they moved in. The roads had not been paved, and a fine clay sifted into everything. Then the rains came, they lived in a sea of mud and Ed had to park three blocks away. Part of their newly laid flagstone walk vanished completely and hasn't been seen since.

But now things are more encouraging. The streets are finished and the front yard is covered with grass — at least in spots. A major project remaining is finishing the second floor of the house, the future headquarters of Allen and as many brothers and sisters as may arrive. Ed plans to do the job himself, although he's not much of a handyman. "You should have seen him painting the bathroom door," Etta smiles. "He didn't realize you have to stir paint. The first brushful ran all the way down the door and halfway across the floor." But Ed has succumbed wholeheartedly to the do-it-yourself craze, and has great plans for patios and concrete walks and furniture.

"I've got a 30-year mortgage on this place, and I aim to stay here all 30 years," he says. "Come back in 1965 and see how the place looks then." By that date, he figures, he should be in business for himself, the house should be complete and two or three more children should be darting about the yard. And that's the way the Schueles think: we're doing fairly well today, but just wait until tomorrow.

Maybe that's not just the Schueles talking. Maybe that's the catchword for America, 1955: on most levels, people are living comfortably, even if they're not steeped in luxury, and most are optimistic about the future. This doesn't hold true everywhere, of course; in some industrial areas of the country, for instance, 1955 will be remembered as a black year, and farmers are harassed by a serious drop in income. The five families on five different income levels visited by PARADE strike something of a balance: if 1955 wasn't the best year they could remember, not too many in the past could top it.

And who knows? Perhaps a year in the near future will. Around Washington, the economic theorists are saying that the boom will go on building through mid-1957, anyway, and that 1956 shows signs of knocking down all the production records that 1955 set. And if that thinking is correct, Americans enjoying the "best year of their lives" (on the economic graphs) have nothing to look forward to but more of the same. ■

Boxing's Strangest Jinx

by MARTIN ABRAMSON

It's clung to middleweight champs for 71 years. Can Bobo Olson overcome it?

CHICAGO.

The glazed-eyed boxer in the photo above is middleweight champion Carl "Bobo" Olson, on his way to dreamland after a left hook by Archie Moore floored him in an over-the-weight bout last June. This Friday, Olson is to defend his crown against Sugar Ray Robinson here. He also may answer an eerie question: Was that June knockout part of the seeming jinx that has haunted middleweight champs for 71 years?

There have been 30-odd titleholders since 1884, when the middleweight division was set up. A few have died healthy, wealthy and old — but the majority have suffered fates ranging from embarrassing to tragic. One was shot in the back at 24. Another died in his prime in a plane crash. The lives of four were snuffed out by rare "mystery" diseases. One went to San Quentin for killing a woman. Others suffered public disgrace and financial ruin. If all this does not add up to a jinx, it can be accepted as a reasonable facsimile thereof.

A prime example was England's Randy Turpin, who upset Ray Robinson for the crown in London in 1951. In America for a rematch, "Lucky" Turpin showed up for the fight with 35 charms, including horseshoes, rabbits' feet, four-leaf clovers. "Got all the superstitions covered," he grinned.

Luck Didn't Hold

He didn't have the jinx covered, though. Ray took back the title Randy had briefly held. A few months later Turpin was in a serious auto accident. Then he blew the money he had made fighting. Finally he was hit by a $300,000 lawsuit. Only recently has he picked up his shattered career — and as a light-heavyweight.

A few men have been hit by the jinx, then bounced back. Rocky Graziano made it. First suspended for not reporting an alleged bribe, later revealed as a convicted Army deserter, Rocky came through the storm and is now a prospering TV actor and author. Most of the champions before him, however, had no such luck. Consider these cases:

Jack Dempsey, champion 1884-91. A magnificent figure of a man, he was nicknamed Nonpareil (without equal. The heavyweight of the 1920s borrowed his name, soon made everyone forget the original). Nonpareil regularly fought 30- and 40-round bouts on barges, beaches and vacant lots. (Boxing was then illegal.) He once knocked out Johnny Reagan in a beach fight where the water licked at their ankles and open wounds were "treated" with splashes of raw whisky. Then suddenly the rock-like body began to waste away, throttled by a rare circulatory disease, and he died at 37.

Norman "Kid McCoy" Selby, 1894-98. Armed with a wicked "corkscrew" punch, the Kid won 198 of 200 fights. But he had too sharp an eye for the ladies (he married 10 times), too great a thirst for liquor. One night, in an alcoholic haze, he killed a woman companion and shot up a jewelry and dress shop. He was sentenced to 24 years at San Quentin in 1926; seven years later he won a parole after such famous fight fans as Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Vice-President Charles Curtis, Al Smith and George Jessel pleaded in his behalf. The parole, however, barred him forever from taverns and fight gyms. That was too stiff a blow for McCoy; in a bare Detroit hotel room the ex-playboy and champ scribbled this note: "I can no longer endure this world's madness," then took a fatal dose of sleeping pills.

Stanley Ketchel, 1908-10. "I won't live past 30 but boy, I'm gonna live," the tawny-haired, wiry teenager boasted. He trained mostly in night clubs.

yet had the strength to knock out the world's light-heavyweight champion and floor heavyweight champion Jack Johnson (who outweighed middleweight Ketchel by 45 pounds). He always carried a gun, got into several shooting scrapes. The last one blazed in 1910, when his handlers sent him to a ranch for a rest cure. There a cowboy started brooding over Ketchel's attentions to his pretty wife, shot the champion dead. Ketchel was only 24 — six years shy of his own deadline.

Billy Papke, 1908. The Illinois Thunderbolt took the crown from Michigan Assassin Ketchel in a fierce 12-round battle, lost it three months later as a vengeance-bent Ketchel handed him a fiendish beating. Never the same again, Billy died by putting a bullet through his brain.

Harry Greb, 1923-26. The only fighter ever to lick Gene Tunney, the high-living Pittsburgh Windmill became champion while half-blind. A few months after losing the crown he went into a hospital to have a broken nose repaired, died mysteriously under the anesthetic. His age: 32.

Tiger Flowers, 1926. First Negro to hold the title, he died only a year after Greb. After losing the title he too went into a hospital for minor surgery (the removal of scar tissue). A nurse found him dead in his room, a victim of "status lymphaticus" — a condition that is fatal only once in every 150,000 cases.

Prophet from France

Mickey Walker, 1926-31. Pictures of the Toy Bulldog were on the front page as often as they hit the sport pages during the 1930s, for the champion whirled through one alcoholic binge after another on a wild ride to bankruptcy. Only recently has a career as an artist, plus the ownership of a new business, put him firmly on his feet again.

Marcel Cerdan, 1948-49. After whipping Tony Zale (the only nationally acknowledged champ between 1931 and 1947), the Frenchman dislocated a shoulder muscle in the first round of his title defense a year later, losing to Jake La Motta, "I win the title back for La France or I die," announced Cerdan.

La Motta, training for their return fight, injured his arm and Cerdan went back to France for a vacation. Each time the bout was rescheduled he booked passage to New York on a transatlantic plane, but each time there was another postponement. Finally the date was definitely fixed and Cerdan bought another plane ticket to New York. The plane never reached its destination: it crashed into a peak above the misty Azores, killing every person on board.

Ray Robinson, 1951-53. As king of the welterweights, Ray Robinson found the world his oyster; acclaimed the best fighter "pound for pound" in history, rated a great draw at the gate and rich from wise investments, Robinson risked the jinx by entering the middleweight ranks. He beat La Motta for the title, but lived to regret it. First he suffered the humiliation of being licked by Turpin, a 10-to-1 underdog. Then, after regaining the title, he tried for a third crown by challenging light-heavyweight king Joey Maxim. Far ahead on points, Robinson apparently was an easy winner until he collapsed in his corner of heat exhaustion.

Discouraged, Sugar Ray decided to quit boxing for a career in show business — but the jinx still dogged him. At first there was a rash of offers from night clubs for his dancing act, but the offers gradually petered out. Many of his investments, meanwhile, turned sour and Sugar Ray was forced into a limping comeback that so far has tarnished his fame.

Carl "Bobo" Olson, 1953-? After winning the title when Robinson retired, Bobo was a sublimely confident man. (For example, he laughed heartily when told about Turpin's good-luck charms.) His confidence reached such heights that he challenged Archie Moore for the light-heavyweight championship — and got knocked out. He also lost much of his reputation as a shrewd, fearless boxer.

FREE of the jinx at last, ex-champ Rocky Graziano banters with Martha Raye on TV.

This Friday, against a man whose life has already been riddled by the jinx, Olson will learn if it has caught up with him, for a defeat at the hands of the aging Robinson could finish Bobo in the big time. The same fact holds in reverse.

Whatever the outcome, however, both boxers might well meditate on the example of Barney Ross, who figured the only way to lick the jinx was by default. Ross held both the lightweight and welterweight titles during the '30s. After losing to Henry Armstrong, Barney was told his increased weight would force him to fight as a middleweight. "Good God, not that," said Ross. He promptly hung up his gloves and never fought again. ■

Teen-age Problems

It would be interesting to hear from both boys and girls on what they find difficult in their relationships with the opposite sex. Will you write me about this? Meanwhile, some questions:

Q. I recently broke up with a very nice boy for unimportant reasons. Would it be proper to write him every so often? — A.S., Detroit, Mich.

A. If you were at fault, it would be generous of you to write a brief note and say so. If he replies, all should be well; if he doesn't, or if he replies ungraciously, better look for a new boy friend.

Q. I am willing to forgive a girl friend for saying nasty things about me, but my mother doesn't feel that way. Now my mother and I aren't speaking. What shall I do? — R.W., Canton, Ohio.

A. First of all, get on proper terms with your mother. "Not speaking" is infantile. A girl friend who says nasty things about you is hardly worth a quarrel with your mother. It is always good to forgive people, but it is self-destructive to keep as friends those who tear you down behind your back.

Q. I am 14 and a sophomore in high school. Would it be in bad taste to wear just a fine spray of a very light perfume to school? — V.G., Roanoke, Va.

A. Perfume would not be proper for school — except for a special occasion such as a dance. The light use of a flower or spice toilet water is acceptable. Remember that perfume or toilet water isn't always noticeable to the wearer, but can be overpowering to others. Subtlety in the use of perfume has much to do with good manners.

Q. I am 15 years old and go with a boy 19. We both wonder how to address each other's parents. It is so formal to say "Mr. Jones" or "Mrs. Jones." — B.L.W., Williamson, Ill.

A. I can't imagine what else you could call them. You should address them by their proper titles.

Q. I am a girl of 13 and I like a boy 15. My family dislikes him, but likes another boy who is just a friend. The 15-year-old boy drinks and smokes. The other boy is girl-shy. Which one is right for me? — S.B., Highland, Ind.

A. Better stick to the second type of boy. A boy of 15 who smokes and drinks is acting aggressively toward his parents, his teachers and his community. He is trying to prove that he's a tough guy. Is that what attracts you? I think you know very well yourself the kind of boy you should be going with.

Ball Gowns—$1000 and More

They Are the Work of Charles James of New York, Famous Designer, Member of an Old St. Louis Family

High in style and in price are the opulent ball gowns of Charles James of New York. Even in the competitive ranks of the haute couture, his artistry and craftsmanship have won him the appellation of "designer's designer." Best known of his designs is this bustle dress, available at $1250. Bodice of satin is veiled in silk chiffon. Skirt is of multi-layered nylon nets. Like all his ball dresses, it is built on a three-section principle of firmly made bodice, shaped and stiffened torso and flared skirt.

Two wide, bell-shaped panniers, veiled in satin, distinguish James' long-stemmed ball dress of black velvet. The widespread panniers are a dressmaking achievement, so engineered with whalebone and crinoline that they do not touch the floor.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney wears the James "butterfly" gown. It has a silver satin torso swathed in gray chiffon tulle. Behind, from satin wings, floats a huge, cascading skirt of tulle. James' fame and business were built by a private clientele of socially prominent women, fashion pace-setters, able to pay as much as $2000 for a gown.

The "great ball dress," made of black and white satin, has an enormous four-leaf clover skirt. It was first designed for Mrs. William Randolph Hearst Jr., who wore it to Queen Elizabeth's Coronation Ball.

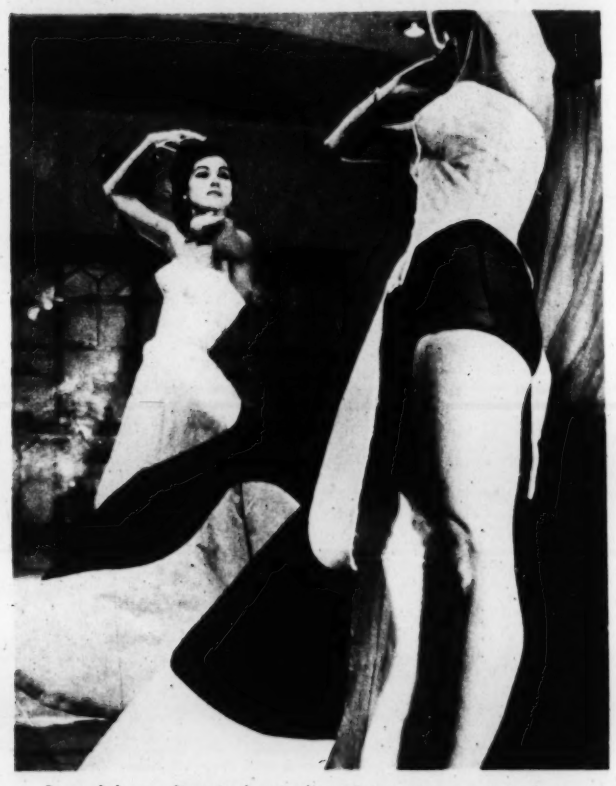
Constructing a James Gown Is an Engineering Project

Getting into a James gown takes agility. Judy Andrews, a James house model, shows how she slides into a butterfly dress similar to that shown on page one. In photo, upper left, she sits on edge of table, holds up dress while she gets her feet inside. Then (upper right) holding dress and bracing herself with her forearms, she slips off table and into gown. Holding dress with one hand (lower left), she uses her other arm to push herself erect. On firm ground now (lower right), she wiggles dress up to proper height.

Ground view of inside of muslin model of four-leaf clover dress (shown on page one). This model is one of James' outstanding showpieces. Copies of dress have been donated to several museums, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art in Manhattan, the Brooklyn Museum, the Philadelphia Museum of Art. James has included muslin models and working patterns as guides for students of design. Mrs. Huttleston Rogers has contributed 25 of her James dresses to the Brooklyn Museum. The construction of a James flared skirt is considered a masterpiece of dressmaking engineering. In this skirt, the tensioning is provided by horizontal rows of whalebones.



A model standing in front of a mirror wears a cutaway or cross-sectional muslin model, made specially for the Brooklyn Museum, of the four-leaf clover skirt. With this model, design students can study the dressmaking engineering in motion—the method of hinging the whalebones and providing stiffening with crinoline.

James makes a solid of the shape he wants by first rigging a plaster form with tension tapes. He then cuts his material in the proper shapes and sizes to fit over it like a skin. From the segmented "skin," he then makes his working patterns.

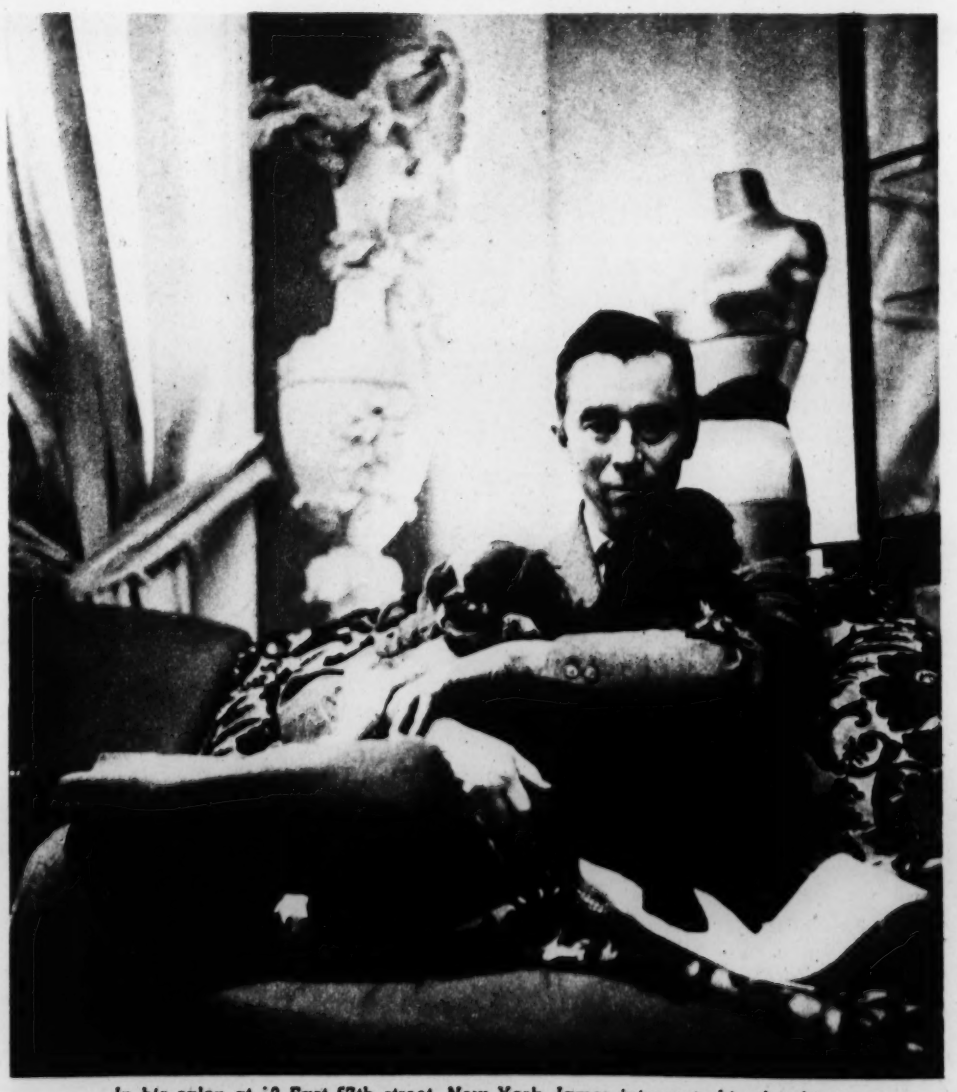
CHARLES JAMES of New York ranks as one of the top dress designers in the world. He won the American Fashion Critics Award in 1950 and 1954; the Neiman-Marcus fashion award in 1953. Original copies of his gowns with working patterns are in the permanent collections of many art museums.

He has been primarily interested in making clothes for a limited group of socially prominent women who are, according to James, the fashion pace-setters. These women want and wear daringly conceived designs, appreciate meticulous workmanship, and can afford the price of a James original that runs between one and two thousand dollars, sometimes more. Four regulars on the list of "10 best-dressed women" are James customers.

James is a slight man with great drive and imagination. He can disarm with charm one minute, lash out, if he is displeased, the next. He was born in 1906 at the Royal Military College in England, where his father, a British officer, was stationed. He says: "I will be buried one day in Bellefontaine Cemetery in St. Louis, on the family plot." His maternal grandmother, Mrs. Charles Brega, was the former Fanny Frothing Enders, a St. Louis belle of the 1860s. Her mother, Mrs. William Franklin Enders, was the former Louisa Gill, whose father, George Gill, was founder of Gill and Murphy, an early St. Louis men's wear firm.

James was educated at private schools in England and in the eastern United States. In 1924, he opened a millinery shop in Chicago. He sold the business four years later, began studying dress designing in New York, London and Paris. He opened his own salon in Paris in 1934 and has been a couturier ever since.

This year, James decided to make reproductions of his designs. The reproductions, though less expensive than his original custom creations, will still be above a working girl's budget.



In his salon at 12 East 57th street, New York, James interrupts his sketching to fondle his two tiny King Charles toy spaniels. He recently married Nancy Gregory of Kansas City. The Jameses live at the Sherry-Netherland Hotel.

THE SAAR

Pro-German sentiment shows its strength in the Saar. Members of a crowd of Saarlanders in Neunkurchen hold up Nein (No) signs to signify their opposition to Western plans to Europeanize the rich industrial basin lying between Germany and France. In a plebiscite last Sunday, Saarlanders voted two to one against the plan, which would have put the Saar under a neutral commissioner to be named by the Western European Union. The adverse vote caused the resignation of the pro-French premier, brought the area into sharp focus as an international problem.

By MERNA LAZIER

DEVILED STUFFED EGGS with an exciting blend of flavors are as suitable for appetizers at home as they are for picnic fare. Donald Smith, a sales executive of Kansas City and a frequent visitor in St. Louis, serves them with cocktails or as a snack with tomato juice.

Smith uses only large select eggs which he simmers, in water to cover, for about 20 minutes. They are immediately rinsed under cold running water which prevents edges of yolk from turning dark. Shells that are removed under running water will be less apt to stick. Eggs are sliced lengthwise, and yolks are put into a large bowl. They are broken up with a fork until crumbly. Chopped onion and salad dressing are added and mixed in well. Relish, vinegar, mustard and salt are each added separately, beating thoroughly after each addition. The whites are then filled, heaping high in center, with the yolk mixture. Slivers of green pepper are stuck in center of each egg and paprika and black pepper are sprinkled on for flavoring and color.

Water cress is used to garnish edge of plate. A glass of caviar may be placed in center of plate for those who enjoy a dab on top their eggs. Crackers and tomato juice garnished with lemon wedges make very good accompaniments.

INGREDIENTS: Twelve eggs, three tablespoons chopped onion, one and one-half tablespoons sweet pickle relish (drained before measuring), one and one-half teaspoons white vinegar, one-fourth teaspoon each of mustard and salt, nine tablespoons salad dressing (use more or less, depending upon size of eggs). Water cress or parsley for garnish. Green pepper, paprika and black pepper as needed. These amounts will make 24 portions.

FLOATING FIRE EXTINGUISHER

This floating apparatus equipped with gauge and a top that resembles a bird cage is a fire extinguisher. It was devised by a British concern to fight fires in oil or gasoline tanks. When fire starts, a vapor with a methyl bromide or chlorobromonethane base automatically begins spraying from revolving jets. The device, floating here in a storage tank, is said to be capable of bringing fire under control within seconds.

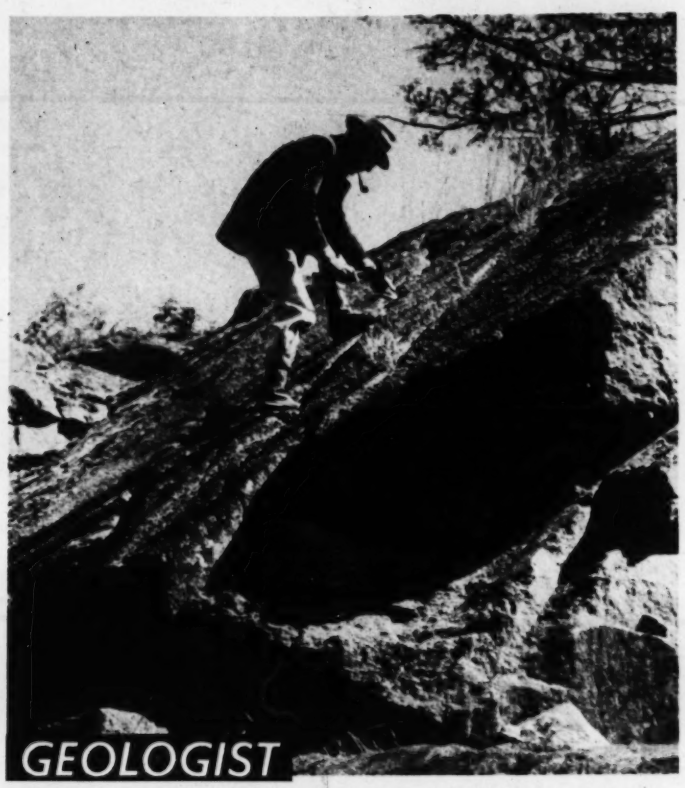
FIRE WARDEN

From first landing of 100-foot-high fire tower on Crane Mountain, Jim Connelly (right) and Roy Thomlinson, towerman, view the gorgeous autumn foliage of the Ozark countryside. Connelly, in his capacity of United States Forest Service fire warden for half of Iron County, visited Thomlinson in preparing for the fall danger season for forest fires. He organizes and trains firefighters, mans two-way radio in home that is part of fire protection communications network. Connelly receives $1 an hour pay for work during fire outbreaks.

SCOUT LEADER

In role of Boy Scout leader, Jim (right) spins a yarn for boys roasting wieners over campfire at Fort Davidson, a Civil War fortification at Pilot Knob. He is commissioner for 11 counties, holds silver beaver award, highest in scouting. He often accompanies troops in his area on hikes and cookouts, lectures on nature, fire prevention, scouting. At his suggestion, scouts cleared the Fort Davidson site, where battle was fought in 1864 and which had been allowed to become an overgrown weed patch.



GEOLOGIST

Geologist Connelly, on lone expedition to a "shut-in" in southeast area of Iron County, chips at exposed porphyry while exploring for minerals. In last year he made individual field trips with 12 geologists, six mining engineers and dozens of geology classes. A self-taught geologist, he is authority on mineral deposits in region.

BOTANIST

Examining wild flower with small magnifying glass he always carries, Connelly reveals another of his interests — botany. He was walking through a field when he spied the flower some distance away, thought he recognized it as a summer blooming daisy, wondered why it was blooming so late, decided on close inspection to satisfy curiosity. Jim has read many botany books, knows colloquial names of more than 1000 flowers, trees and shrubs.

JAMES L. CONNELLY of Ironton, Missouri, known in the Eastern Ozarks as the sage of Shephard Mountain, retired 10 years ago — not to take life easy but to enjoy it. And he enjoys it to the utmost — as a conservationist, naturalist, fire warden, archeologist, geologist, historian, Boy Scout leader, fisherman, story teller and homespun philosopher. A vigorous 70, he scarcely finds time for all his activities, not to mention the chores his wife wants done. He's probably the busiest retired man in the region.

Tall, slim, and gray haired, Jim is easy going and friendly but independent as a Missouri mule. He is a transplanted Ozarkian, having lived more than half his life in his native Illinois, yet he seems as much a part of the country as Shephard Mountain itself. A lover of the outdoors, he knows every stream, crag and path in the rugged hills of Iron County as well as every resident and everybody knows him. He is Uncle Jim or Pop both to the youngsters and a generation of grown-ups who first knew him as children.

Connelly is widely traveled, well read and mostly self-educated. He can discourse on an endless variety of subjects, from fishing to philosophy. And he can do so in the cultured diction of a scholar or the twangy vernacular of the hills, as the occasion demands. His insatiable curiosity makes everything interesting to him, whether it's a daisy blooming out of season, a flint chip among granite boulders, an unusual cloud formation or a wayward boy. Of his many activities, Jim considers his work with boys most important and rewarding; he gives them a healthy, useful interest in the outdoors, they give him a fresh, youthful outlook on life.

Jim's happy retirement is based on a simple premise: Live today, don't worry about tomorrow. This doesn't mean he subscribes to a hedonistic doctrine, but he does live each day fully, deriving pleasure from worthwhile projects like guiding a geology class on a field trip or from more personal enterprises, such as fishing with his grandson. Tomorrow will take care of itself, Jim reasons.

In retiring at 60, Connelly attained a goal he set for himself as a boy of 16 when he was forced to quit school to support his mother. During the 25 years he worked as a railroad car inspector in Collinsville, Illinois, he reared a family, furthered his education by comprehensive reading, combined his interest in nature with Boy Scout work. While camping with a scout group near Ironton in 1926, he fell in love with the country. He moved his family there, bought a combination gas station-garage-restaurant. After World War II, with his four children married and gone from home, he sold his business, began devoting himself fulltime to things he had always wanted to do.

Jim and his wife have been blessed with good health, and though far from wealthy, they have no financial worries. They live in the same five-room home they built when they moved to Ironton. They grow much of their food in a backyard garden, augment their income by raising and selling a few pigs.

"We get by comfortably, but if a problem comes up, I just hike off to think about it," says Jim. "Funny how insignificant a problem becomes when viewed from a mountain top."

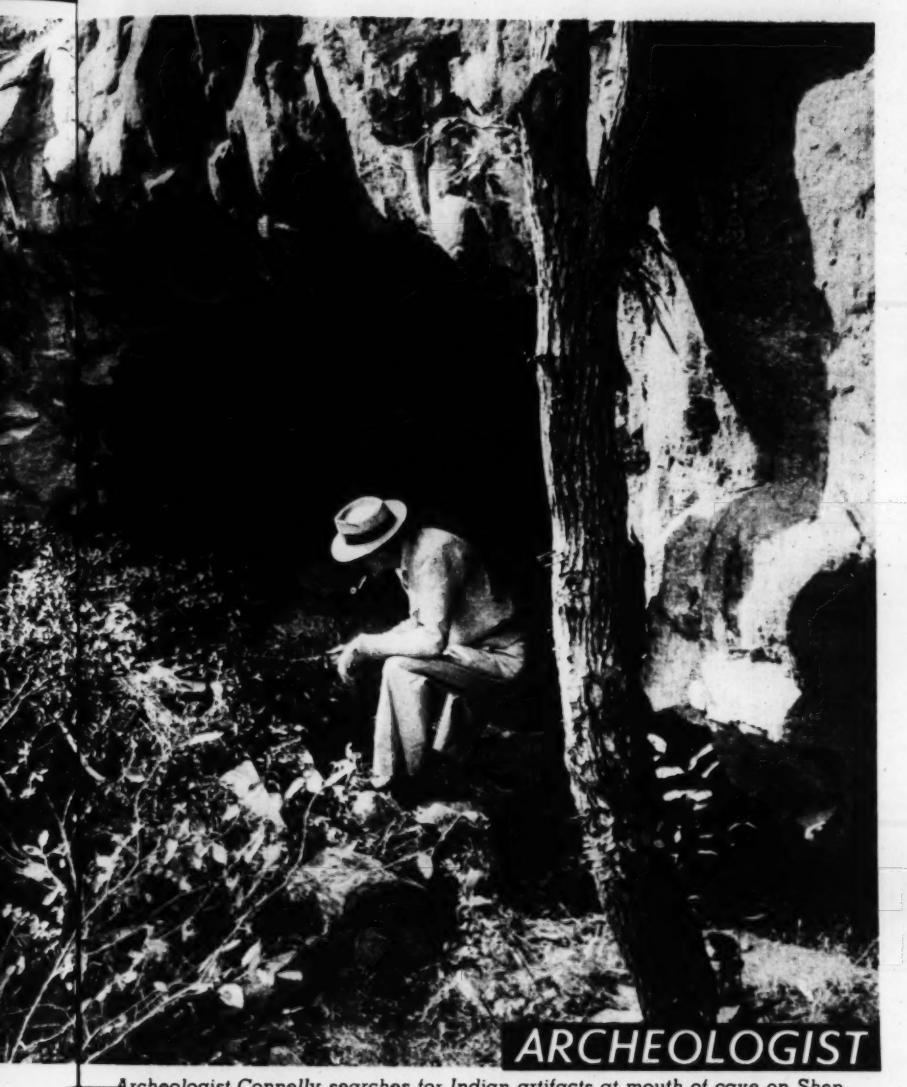
Photos by SAM CALDWELL of the PICTURES Staff

FISHERMAN

Fishing is another of Jim's favorite occupations, and his favorite companion is his 9-year-old grandson Frankie Moses, who is shown pulling a 14-inch bass from the waters of Stouts Creek. An expert himself, Jim taught his grandson, whom he calls Mike, how to handle a fly rod. On fishing trips Jim carries his 50-pound aluminum canoe on top of his battered old car that has traveled every road in the area.

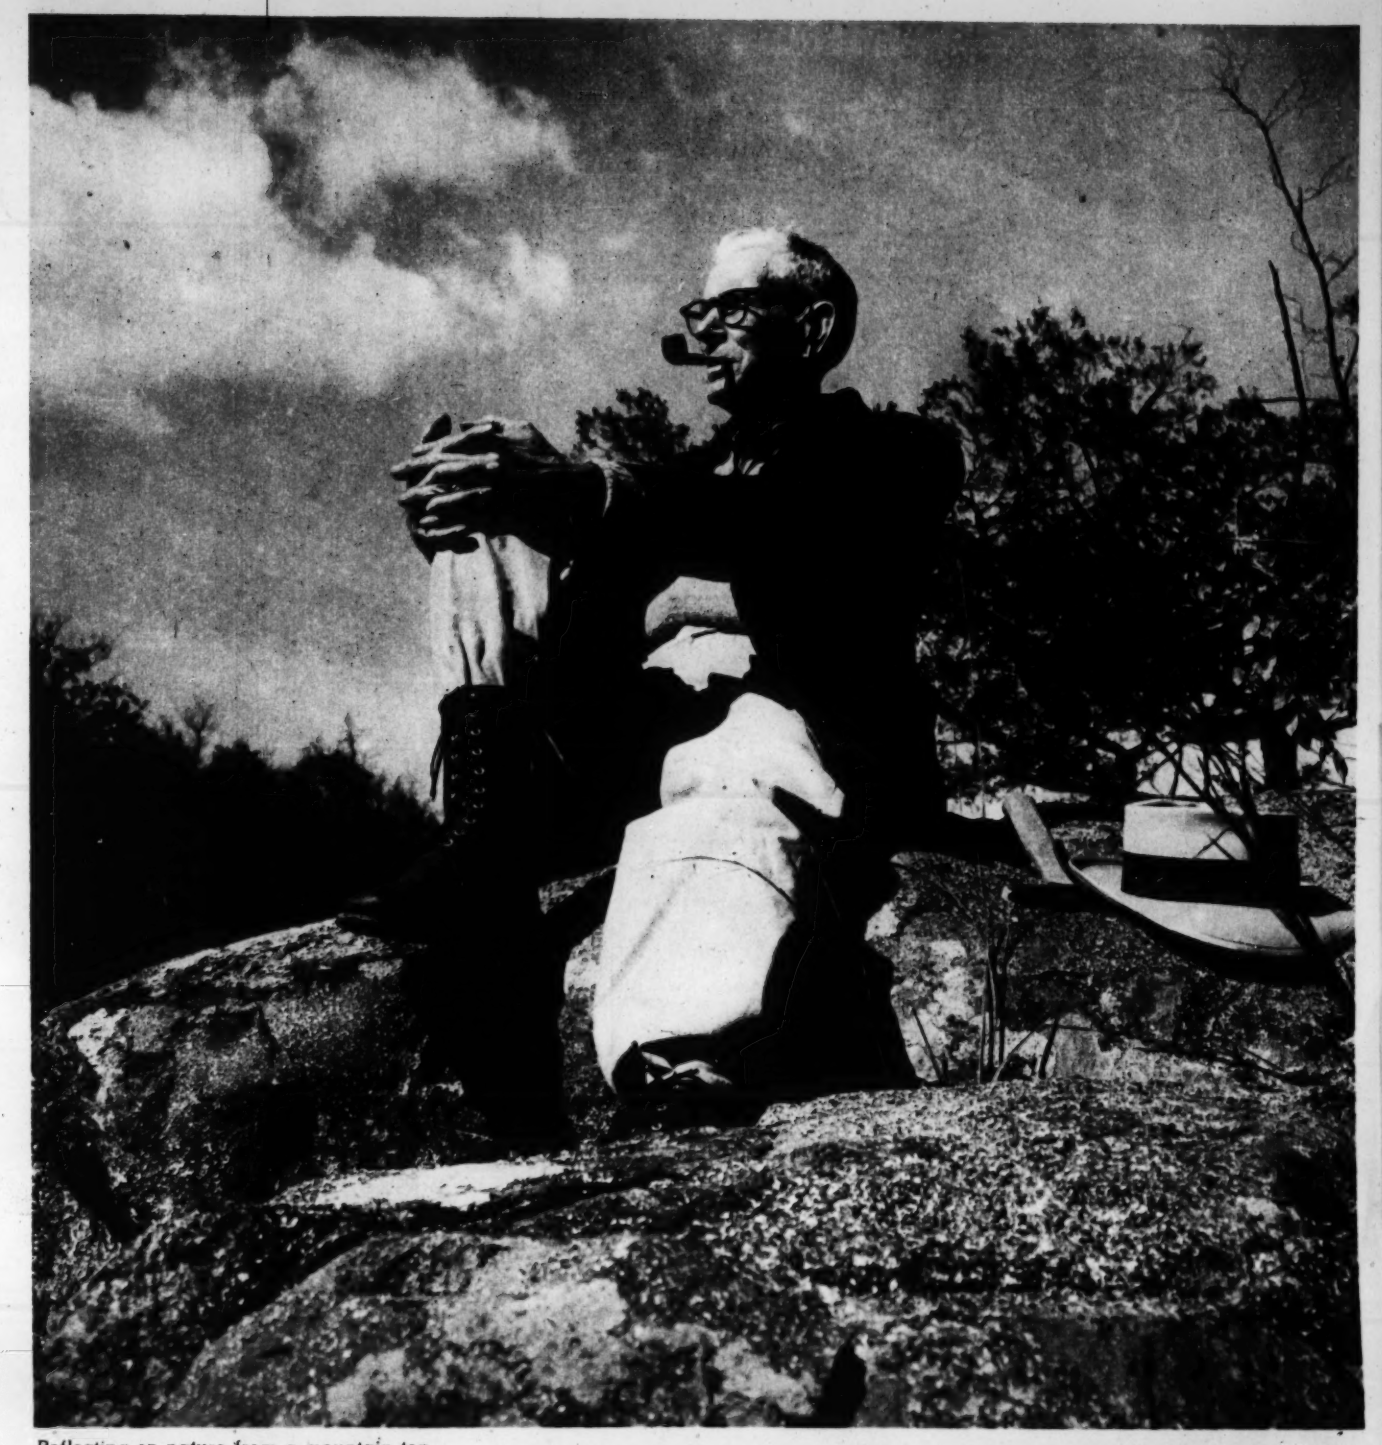
MAN IN RETIREMENT

Jim Connelly of Ironton Quit Work Ten Years Ago — Now at 70 He's Busier Than Ever With "Spare Time" Pursuits

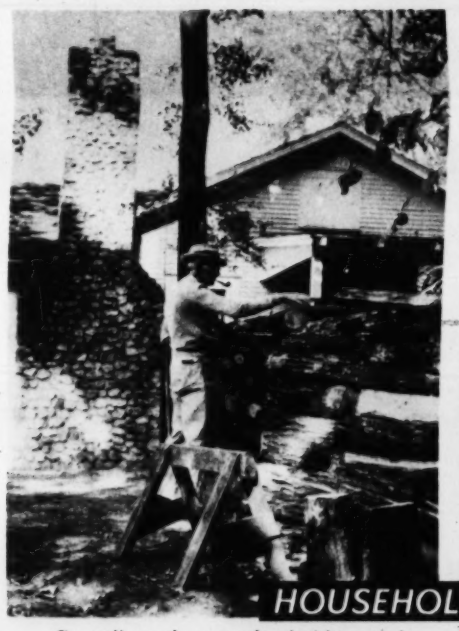


ARCHEOLOGIST

Archeologist Connelly searches for Indian artifacts at mouth of cave on Shephard Mountain near Ironton. Knowing where and what to look for, he found several arrow heads, pounding stones. He photographed, measured cave, sent data and artifacts to Missouri Archeology Society, of which he is a trustee. He has located more than 75 Indian camp sites in area, explored many of them.



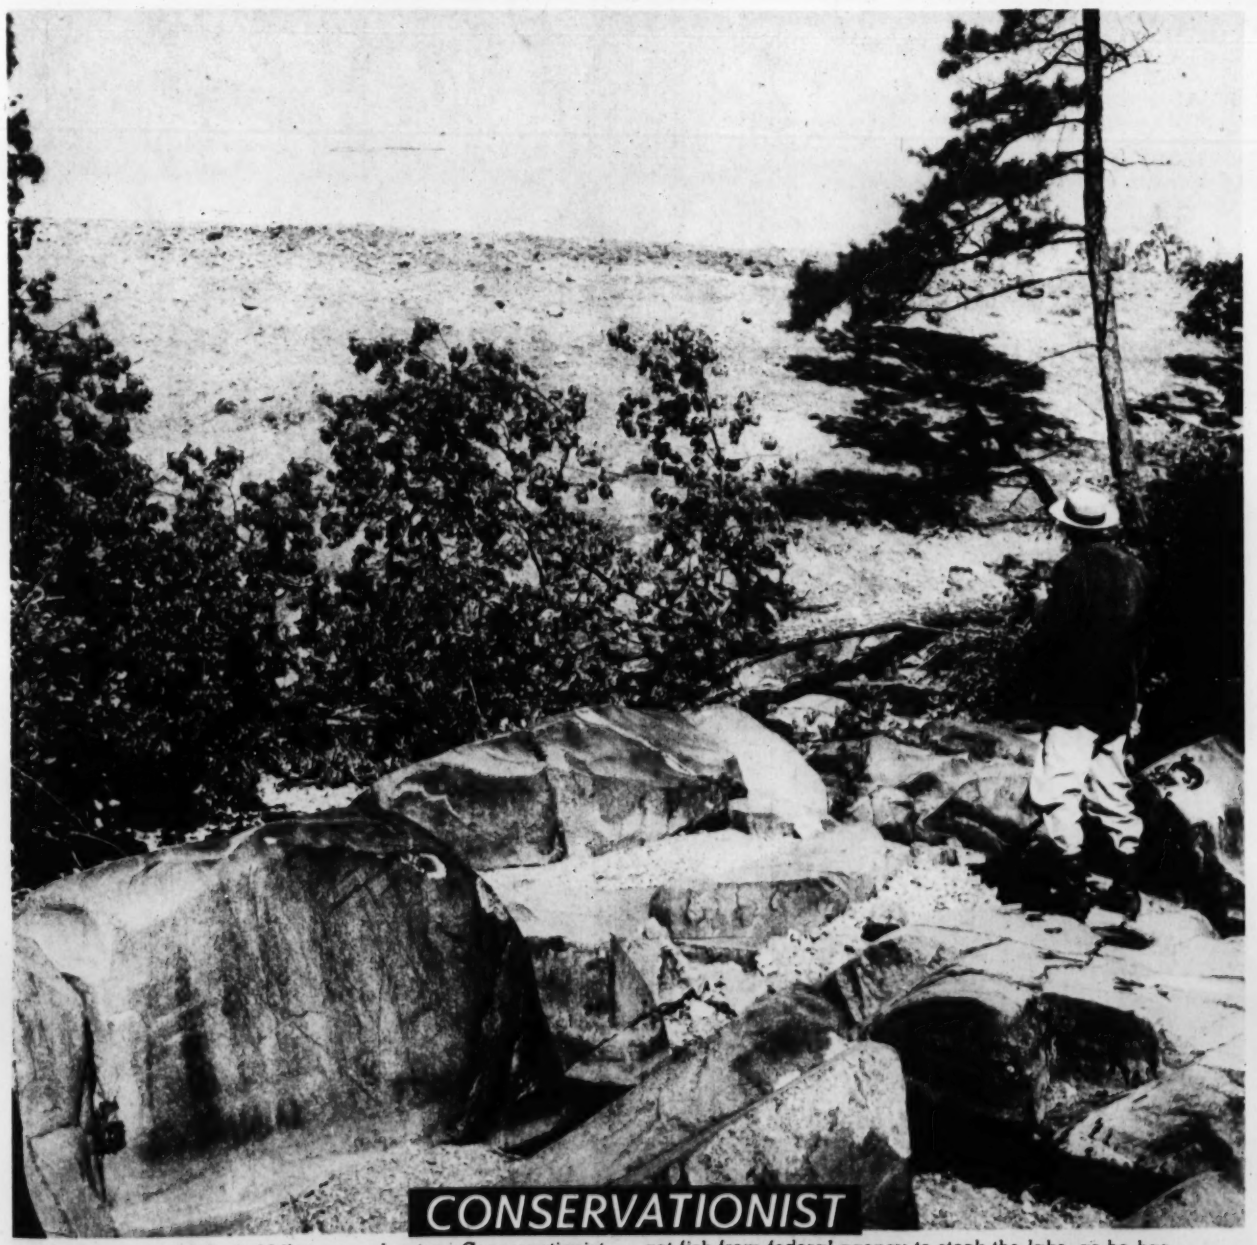
Reflecting on nature from a mountain top is one of Jim's favorite pastimes. He likes to sit in the warm autumn sun in some secluded spot, resting, thinking and watching the play of sunlight and shadows on the variegated foliage. An inveterate pipe smoker, he is never without his briar. On hikes into the hills, he wears heavy boots as protection against snakes, brambles, stones, always takes along his rock hammer.



HOUSEHOLD CHORES

Connelly gathers armload of firewood for his granite cobblestone fireplace. Farmer gave him the wood for helping cut down tree. Jim regularly rises at 6 a.m., usually retires about 10 p.m.; he attributes his good physical and mental health to outdoor life.

Jim gathers lettuce for his wife, Edith, in their backyard garden. He performs chores around the house when the mood strikes him; his wife usually has to engender the mood. They have two sons, two daughters, 13 grandchildren.



CONSERVATIONIST

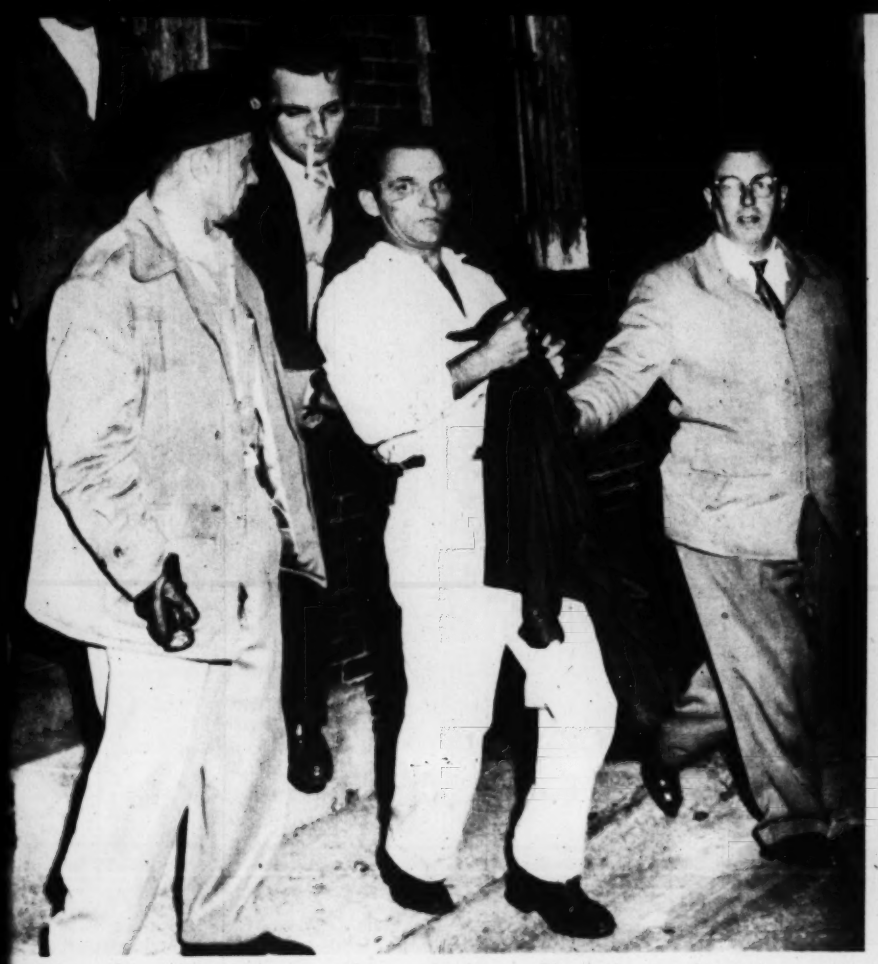
On farm of Jack Miller, near Ironton, Conservationist Connelly looks over newly constructed dam that impounds waters of small creek, eventually will form 40-acre lake. Jim helped pick the site for the 30-foot-high earth dam that blocks a 130-foot-wide defile, plans to get fish from federal agency to stock the lake, as he has done for many farmers. In visits with farmers, he continually preaches good conservation, tries to discourage old practice of burning off land. Jim is a member of the Conservation Federation of Missouri.

PIG RAISER

Connelly feeds his pigs, which he treats like pets. He bought them as weanlings, is raising them to market size. Selling them will be difficult, for he has become fond of the animals. Profit from pigs will help stock larder for winter.

Task Force Narcotics Raid

In Philadelphia, City-Wide Strike Results in 100 Arrests



...ing the early-morning narcotics raids in ...adelphia a man identified as Joseph ...merek is led by plain clothesmen from his home. The raids were the city's second massed drive within six months against narcotics peddlers and users.

A detective entering a suspect's home through a window gets a balancing push from a fellow officer. Officer at right stands ready to rush the door. All warrants were based on actual purchases of narcotics by undercover police over a period of more than a month.

WEEKS OF CAREFUL PREPARATION preceded one of the largest narcotics raids in Philadelphia's crime history. Among other tactics, policemen and policewomen, posing as addicts, made purchases to be used as evidence. A master list of persons using, selling or otherwise dealing in drugs was compiled. It was decided to swoop down on them in task-force style.

As time for the strike approached the raiding force was kept clear of police headquarters and city hall to prevent a possible leak. Instead, the raiders gathered at Convention Hall—at 1 o'clock in the morning. Some 250 police, federal and state officers were divided into squads. To each group was given a sealed envelope containing warrants, rogues gallery pictures and other information needed to identify suspects.

At 3 a.m. the raiders piled into automobiles, fanned out to all parts of the city. At 3:30 sharp the raids began. Of 116 persons arrested, eight were discharged. The rest were held in bail for either grand jury or United States Commissioner action.

Despite all the precautions taken, a rookie policeman was suspended pending investigation of charges he had tipped off narcotics peddlers they were being watched by undercover agents.

His three small daughters were asleep in an adjoining room.

Cocteau Among 'The Immortals'

Surrealist Writer Jogged Out in Style For Induction Into the French Academy

On his way to be received into French Academy, Cocteau, with resplendent uniform topped by a cape and his hat tucked under his left arm, receives a salute from the honor guard. Statue is that of Cardinal Richelieu of France, who founded the Academy in early seventeenth century. The Academy has often been considered a bit conservative, largely because it did not admit such noted but nonconformist writers of the past as Moliere, Flaubert, Zola and others.
International News Photo

THE VERSATILE, UNPREDICTABLE Jean Cocteau, French dramatist, poet, artist, novelist, stage designer and producer, has become one of "the 40 immortals" of literature. He has been made a member of the hallowed, respectable French Academy. Known for his iconoclastic conduct as well as writings, Cocteau showed up for his induction at Paris in a $1400 suit of midnight blue decorated with green and gold motifs, a Napoleon-style hat, and a jeweled sword which included in the handle a $2800 emerald. When asked how it felt to be accepted among the "immortals" the 64-year-old writer replied that he had "become a national institution, just like (Actress Gina) Lollobrigida."

Cocteau, in front of radio microphones, delivers the speech that preceded his formal induction into the Academy. He was introduced by French writer and historian Andre Maurois. Cocteau was a leader of the younger literary group in France before World War I and later a spokesman for surrealism and modernism. He became a member of the Academy 46 years after he first received literary recognition with a volume of poetry.

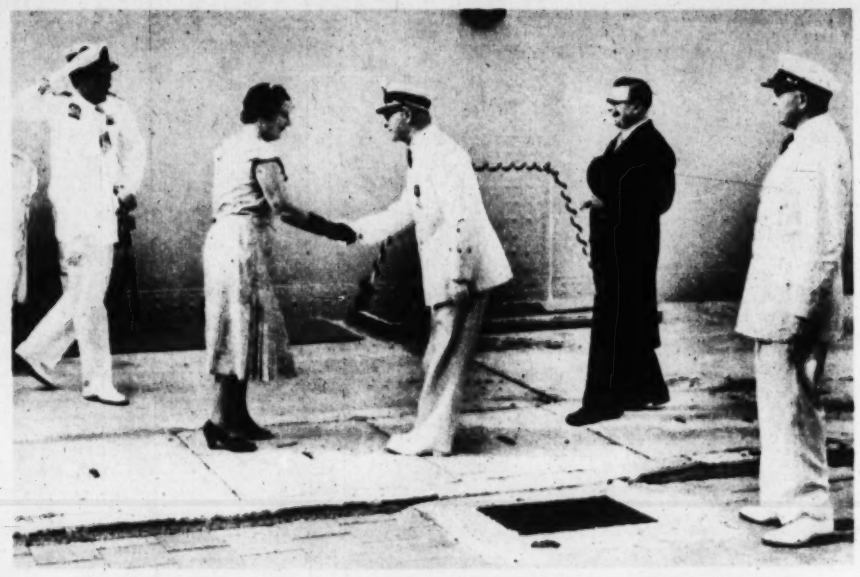
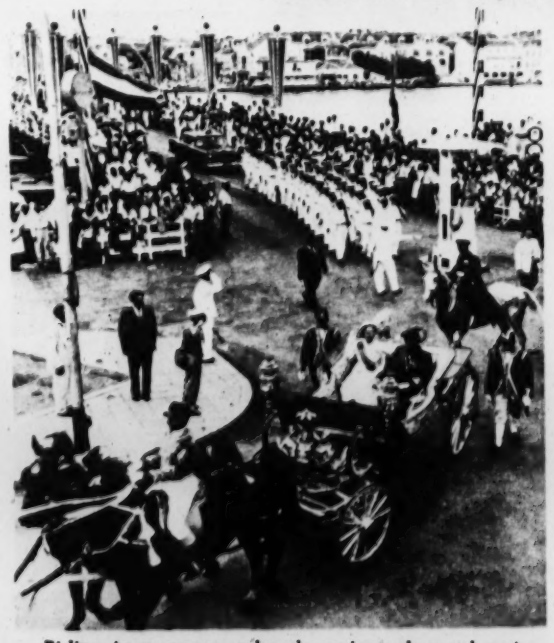
MISSION OF STATE

Juliana and Consort Pay Royal Visit to Dutch Antilles



For the first time in 400 years of Dutch colonial history, a ruling monarch of The Netherlands has visited overseas possessions. On debarking from a Dutch cruiser at the island of Curacao in the Dutch Antilles, Queen Juliana of The Netherlands is greeted by Antilles Governor A. A. H. Struycken. Close behind the Queen is her Consort, Prince Bernhard. Behind Struycken is Prime Minister E. Jonckheer (dark suit) of the Antilles and Lieutenant Governor M. P. Gorsira of Curacao. The royal couple has been making a three-week official tour of Dutch territories in the Western Hemisphere.
United Press Photo

Queen Juliana, with Prince Bernhard seated next to her, reads an address to the assembled House of Representatives of the Dutch Antilles, in Willemstad, Curacao, the Antilles capital. Juliana and Bernhard flew by way of the Azores and Bermuda to Puerto Rico, then boarded a Dutch cruiser for the trip to Curacao. There a royal welcome awaited them — residents had spent an estimated $1,000,000 decorating the city for the visit, and outlining bridges, churches, office buildings and homes in electric lights.
Associated Press Photos except as noted



Riding in a cream-colored carriage drawn by six black horses, the Queen and her Consort are escorted from the cruiser to the Governor's palace on their arrival in Willemstad. Government officials and members of the diplomatic corps met the royal pair at the dock, and thousands of flag-waving residents lined the route of the procession to the palace. The tour is scheduled to end next Sunday.

The town square of Gettysburg, which soon will become the gathering place for newsmen and government officials having business with the President. The Gettysburg Hotel, across the square, will house most of the visitors.

GETTYSBURG GETS READY

Town of 5916 Prepares to Serve As America's Unofficial Capital

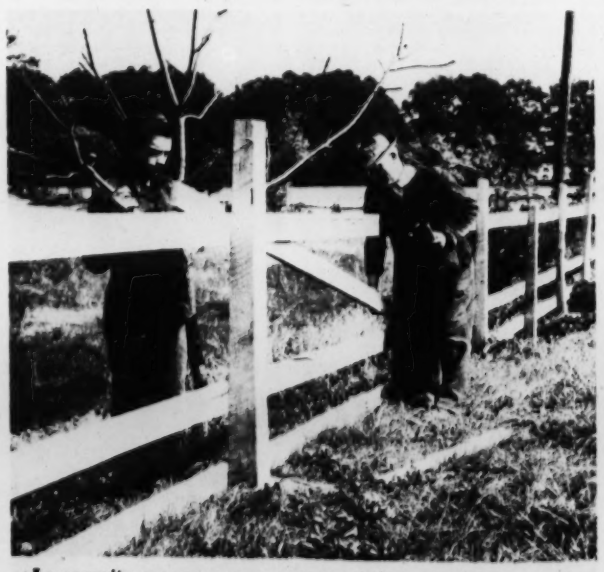
Mr. Eisenhower's recently remodeled country home and other buildings of the 496-acre farm are in the distant background. Cattle are grazing in a pasture between the grove of trees, at center, and the house.

WHEN PRESIDENT EISENHOWER moves to his farm home to continue convalescence (the move is scheduled for sometime between November 5 and 12), Gettysburg will become the informal capital of the nation. This southern Pennsylvania town, with a population of 5916, is near the Maryland border and is the seat of Adams County. It was laid out about 1780, incorporated in 1860 and gained fame in 1863 both as the site of the greatest battle of the Civil War and of President Abraham Lincoln's historic address. Nearby the town is the Gettysburg National Military Park of 2534 acres.

In November of 1950, when he was president of Columbia University, Mr. Eisenhower bought a farm outside Gettysburg, has since added several tracts to the original acreage. After becoming President, he began spending weekends there.

Now that Gettysburg is about to take on something of an official status, preparations are busily under way to handle the influx of visitors who will have business at the temporary White House.

Earth-moving machine passes relics of the Civil War, a cannon and stacked balls, as it grades area for a parking lot at edge of Gettysburg National Military Park near entrance to the Eisenhower farm. The farm is adjacent to the historic battlefield.



As security measure, carpenters reinforce fence surrounding the farm. Guardposts will be spotted around the estate. Two telephone cables are being run into the farm to handle an anticipated increase in calls when the President takes up residence. Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston heart specialist, says the President will probably remain in Gettysburg until after the first of next year.

"THE GATE ROSE AND A HOARSE VOICE CRIED: 'WHAT FOOL SEEKS THE OGRE OF SINISTER WOOD?' A TROOP OF HORSEMEN CAME SURGING OUT. I RACED AWAY."

"THAT NIGHT IN THE MOAT I CAPTURED A GOOSE, AND THEN BY MEANS OF POLES WEDGED IN THE CASTLE WALL I MOUNTED TO THE ROOF.

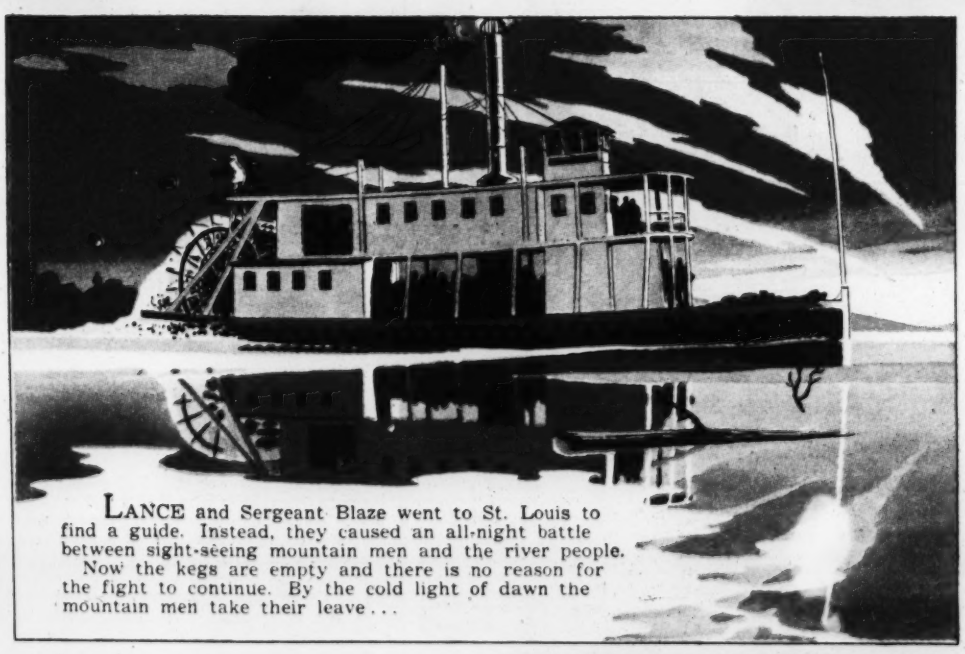
LANCE



LANCE and Sergeant Blaze went to St. Louis to find a guide. Instead, they caused an all-night battle between sight-seeing mountain men and the river people.

Now the kegs are empty and there is no reason for the fight to continue. By the cold light of dawn the mountain men take their leave . . .

Later in the day, several town merchants and husbands note that the trappers made off with a great deal that did not rightfully belong to them. A posse is organized for its recovery.

It is to the mountain man's credit as a fair judge of what is honorable that much of the booty, on second thought, is set loose voluntarily. Thus, he avoids a hanging.

The steamboat turns into the Missouri and heads upriver. Lance completes his army business when Tom Fitzpatrick agrees to show him Indians.

The sternwheeler will carry them to Westport, still many days off. To while the hours, the trappers engage in their favorite pastime, the telling of tales of great personal daring. The boat fairly rocks with laughter!

Finally, Big Fallon commands the deck. "Now yew young'uns won't b'lieve this," he begins. Lance snickers . . . . . alone. Big Fallon casts an incredulous eye at him and starts over. "LIKE I WERE SAYIN'," he bellows . . .
